Town Manager Act under scrutiny

Selectmen seek more 'checks and balances'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A few days into the New Year, the Board of Selectmen met Tuesday to discuss their goals and objectives moving forward. While Town Manager Mike Coughlin was away on vacation, Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore was on hand to weigh in, along with three members of the selectmen-appointed Governance Committee (see sidebar): George Charmillard, Ralph Dormitzer and Mike Milanoski.

The discussion, while listed as one of only two agenda items, turned out to be a lengthy one, suggesting that while Cohasset has "turned a financial corner" in many ways, according to recent comments by Coughlin, there is still much work to be done.

Dormitzer told the board that he hopes the Governance Committee can help clear up some confusion surrounding boards, commissions and town employees.

"There seems to be a discrepancy between the way we used to operate and the expectations of what the selectmen and town manager are supposed to do, and

Who is the top citizen?

In keeping with a 19-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset. This is a community award: the Mariner is the means by which we are able to recognize, thank and honor those around us who make the quiet, generous contributions that make our town a wonderful place to call home.

Last year, Cohasset Mariner readers honored Ed Lappen as Citizen of the Year, in recognition of his humanity and dedication to his family, to his business, to charity and to his community — exemplifying a well-rounded citizenship.

The deadline for nominations for the Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 10. Please see the nomination form on page 4. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Bringing school lunches online

NutriKids program launched at CMHS

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Lunch lines are moving a lot faster at the Middle-High School cafeteria — thanks to a program called NutriKids.

Last month, the school implemented a computerized checkout system in the cafeteria that allows students to punch in their I.D. numbers or swipe I.D. cards to purchase lunch. While the registers still accept cash or check, there is another innovation: parents have the option of creating a NutriKids account online and adding money to it electronically, giving their kids credit to use toward school lunches.

There is a processing fee for each online transaction — $1.75 each time money is added — but parents can add any amount and prepay for all of their kids' lunches at once in order to avoid multiple fees.

The benefit for parents — besides having to avoid the "early morning scramble" for lunch money, said the school's Food Service Director Marilyn Haraden — is that NutriKids allows them to monitor what, exactly, their children are buying for lunch each day.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro invited the Cohasset Mariner to observe Middle School students as they purchased food at lunchtime.

The students have less than 30 minutes to wait in line, purchase their food, sit down and eat, with all the socializing that occurs in between. With the flood of students pouring into the cafeteria at once — the

VFW to issue monthly newsletter

The VFW Post voted recently to begin to develop a monthly newsletter, to be sent out to members of all services and their dependents who currently reside in Cohasset.

The purpose of our newsletter is to inform and find a way to reach out to families and to invite them to communicate to any member of the Post, who they are, a local mailing address, members of their families who are enrolled in our various local schools.

However, our main goal is to establish a lifeline of mutual respect, and to thank them for their service to our country, which we do not do often enough. Secondly, to make them aware that the VFW is a service organization who truly wants each service member – active and reserves – and their spouses and children to know who we are, where we are located and to inform them of our monthly meeting schedule, and to again invite them to come and let us get to know one another.

Becoming a member is not a priority, because we simply want to support our veterans through conversation, and listening and camaraderie.

To reach us is easy, just call: Commander Ralph Perroncello at 781-383-0879; Vice Commander Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079; or Adjunct Ed Graham at 781-383-9324; or email esgraham34@aol.com.

Threats over excise tax bill

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police went to the home of a 52-year-old Cohasset man after the treasurer/collector's office reported on Dec. 27 that he had made threats to law enforcement should he be stopped because of money owed on his excise tax. Apparently he was upset about late fees on his excise bill when he made the threatening remark at the treasurer's office.

Police said they had a conversation with him at his house and he explained that he was angry over the bill and did not mean what he had said.

Out walking

Police responded to a complaint from a walk-in about a suspicious man walking in the area of Smith Place near James Brook Crossing at about 5:39 p.m. on Monday (Dec. 26). Police followed up and found the man in question. They said he lives in the area and was just out for a walk.

Dogs OK

Police said a call about two Dobermans being abused was completely unfounded. The call came in at about 10:06 a.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 27). Police said the dogs were left outside but not for an extended period of time. They said there was nothing to the complaint.

Minor crash

A 71-year-old woman driving a 2005 Ford Five Hundred was backing out of a parking spot at Dr. Pompeo's office off Parking Way when she backed into the doctor's 2006 BMW, which was unoccupied, police said. The incident was reported at 6:26 p.m. on Tuesday (Dec. 27). Police said there was minor damage and neither vehicle was towed.

Backed into

A 48-year-old Sunderland, Mass. man reported that his 2004 Toyota Sequoia that was parked on the side of Ledgewood Drive while he was doing work in the area, was backed into by an unknown vehicle, causing some damage to his vehicle. The incident was reported at 1:19 p.m. on Friday (Dec. 30).

Village mishap

A 52-year-old Cohasset man was backing out of a parking spot in front of Tedeschi's on South Main Street in a 2100 Nissan Altima when he backed into an unoccupied 2009 Toyota Yaris that was parked across the street in front of the gas station. The incident was reported at 5:18 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 31), police said.

Jewelry sale

A local jewelry store notified police at 1:05 p.m. on Wednesday (Dec. 28) about what they thought was a suspicious man attempting to sell a piece of jewelry. Police identified the man, who is 36 and a local resident, and found he was legitimately trying to sell a bracelet that had belonged to his late grandmother. Police said he apparently appeared nervous and they were pleased the store called to have him checked out.

Strange box

Police investigated a report from a motorist that came in at 1:21 p.m. on Thursday (Dec. 29) saying there was a small green military-looking box by a large boulder near mile marker three on Route 3A that should be checked out. Police said the box turned out to be just a box.

Checked out

Police responded to two separate reports about erratic driving that turned out to be unfounded. The first call at 3:44 p.m. on Thursday (Dec. 29) was about a car driving on the wrong side of the road on Beechwood Street. The 71-year-old woman driver denied the allegation and was not impaired in any way, police said.

Police also stopped a 79-year-old woman in her son's red Chevrolet Cavalier on a report that it was being driven erratically at about 9:30 p.m. on Saturday (Dec. 30). Police said that operator also checked out fine.

Dumping leaves

A Jerusalem Road caller reported to police on Saturday (Dec. 24) at about 10:12 a.m. that a neighbor was dumping leaves on his property. Police urge residents to be sure not to blow leaves or rake onto anyone else's property.

Missing package

A Cohasset woman notified police Friday (Dec. 23) that a UPS package was missing. She called UPS and the store where she had made the purchase and was being issued a refund. She wanted police to be aware of the apparent theft.

Pickup truck driver charged following crash

Drives into side of Pilgrim Bank

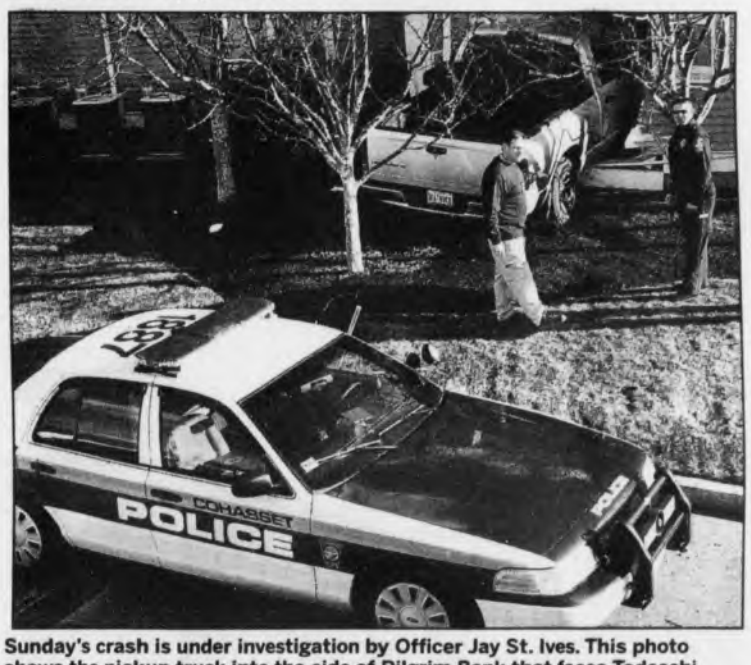
On Sunday, (Jan. 1) at about 1:10 p.m., the Cohasset Police Department's emergency dispatch center received numerous 911 calls reporting that a pickup truck just crashed through the side of the Pilgrim Bank, located at Tedeschi Plaza, at 808 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

When police arrived they found a 2004 Dodge pickup truck hanging out of the side of the building. The operator of the truck, who was identified as Sean Reilly, 44 years of age from Hull, was trying to get out of the driver's seat. Witnesses on scene stated that Reilly drove across the parking lot, hopped the curb, and drove through the side of the building.

Reilly was transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth with non-life threatening injuries. Building and electrical inspectors were called to the scene to assess damage to the building. Cohasset Deputy Chief of Police William Quigley stated that the bank's management team was on scene and preparing a game plan to get the business open by Tuesday. The bank was closed and unoccupied at the time of the crash.

The crash is under investigation by Cohasset Police Officer Jay St. Ives.

Police said that Reilly, whose address is 108 Kingsley Road, Hull, is being summonsed to court to face the charges of driving to endanger and inhaling noxious fumes. Police said that Reilly had inhaled fumes from compressed air (that is typically used to clean computer keyboards).



Frank Campbell, President and CEO of Pilgrim Bank said the crash was "quite a New Year's surprise."

"Fortunately no one was seriously injured. If this had been a normal business day, that might have been a different story," Campbell said. "Thanks to the efforts of Cohasset Fire and Police, as well as the two reconstruction firms, we were able to get the building secured and assess the damage very quickly.

"Management has been able to implement its contingency plans and address this disruption with minimum inconvenience to staff and customers. The ATMs had little downtime and the drive-up window opened on Tuesday afternoon. We expect the Retail and Mortgage Departments to be fully operational by the beginning of next week."

entire Middle School dines from 11:02 to 11:28 a.m. — and only two registers to accommodate the traffic, the lunch lines can get quite backlogged.

Thanks to the new and improved computer system, which has only been "live" since December 13, the large group of middle schoolers did not seem to wait in line for long. Students registered with NutriKids zipped through almost immediately; once their I.D. numbers were punched in, their names appeared on the screen with the price of the day's meal automatically deducted.

The user-friendly system, according to Haraden, makes lunchtime easier for both the students in line and their parents online.

"It's a good thing," DeGennaro agreed. "Parents are able to go online, see what's in their account, how much money's been spent, and what their kids are eating."

According to Haraden, around 50 students are registered with NutriKids online. While the program is currently limited to the Middle-High School, it is expected to be implemented in the elementary schools come spring, "pending technological requirements," said Haraden.

DeGennaro said that a representative from NutriKids spent three days at the school installing the new program and training the cafeteria staff, who not only had to learn how NutriKids works, but also had to adjust from using an old-fashioned cash register to a computerized register.

Now, "the school works off of a computer server with NutriKids sending updates every hour from their site," DeGennaro explained. And the updates are fast and frequent; when a parent adds money to their account in the morning, the student will have that money available to use that day.

While the staff has been tasked with learning a new register, students are encouraged to memorize their personal I.D. number, although they can also swipe their I.D. card.

The business manager said that many schools around the state have been using NutriKids; it was only a matter of time before Cohasset came onboard.

From a business management standpoint, said DeGennaro, "It helps us manage inventory better and see what's selling." This also helps with the monthly financial reports the schools are required to submit to the state Department of Education.

Cohasset parents, who can create accounts at MyNutriKids.com using their children's student I.D. numbers and creating a password, have the freedom to put as much money as they want to into their child's electronic lunch account; and also monitor what their child eats each day.

Haraden tried to reach a few parents who have signed up for NutriKids to get their feedback; confidentiality agreements prevented the school from sharing these names with the Mariner. While none of the parents could be reached for comment, so far DeGennaro hasn't heard any complaints — which he takes as a good thing.

"It's a nice system; it really makes it a lot easier," Haraden said of NutriKids. "And the more people that use the system, the quicker [the lunch line] goes."

While the system is still new in the Middle-High School, DeGennaro said that they are working out any kinks.

"Everybody is learning at the same time," he said of the cafeteria staff and students. "It's getting a lot smoother."

The Mariner will revisit NutriKids when the program comes to the elementary schools this spring.

What is NutriKids?

- NutriKids allows parents to set up an online account to prepay for school lunches while also monitoring what their kids buy each day.
- Parents register at MyNutriKids.com, using their child's student I.D. number and creating a secure password.
- Users pay using their credit/debit cards or PayPal accounts. Like online banking, the website allows for 24-hour "self-service"—parents can log in anytime to check their accounts, view their transaction history and add money. They also receive email notifications when their account balance is low.
- The website also features nutrition fact labels, the USDA food pyramid and a review of the past three weeks' worth of school lunch menus. Students can also access an interactive component featuring education nutrition games and puzzles.

Fiction Forum at 'Sunday AuthorTalks

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Join friends and community at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 8, to hear three women authors discuss their own writing — and fiction, in general.

Brunonia Barry's Map of True Places, Randy Susan Meyers' The Murderer's Daughters, and Ilie Ruby's The Language of Trees are certain to provoke lively discussion and debate. This is the first time that "Sunday AuthorTalks" has featured fiction; the program's prior three authors were all nonfiction writers.

While each of the novels reveals unique insights and memorable characters and is distinct in its own narrative, setting, and style, all three novels illuminate each other both in their differences and in their development of a few common themes, so the panel format should appeal not only to the singular reader but also to bookclubs.

Following the panel talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for further conversation with the authors and book signing. All the novels are in paperback and will be available for purchase.

Tickets are free and can be picked up at Cohasset Library and Buttonwood books, or call the library at 781-383-1348, ext. 1, to reserve a spot. Visit cohassetlibrary.org for more information about "Sunday AuthorTalks." Remember, Sunday, January 8, at 4:00 PM.

Ilie Ruby.

where the advisory committee fits in," said Dormitzer. "These are extremely complex issues. It's not clear how things work anymore."

One problem that was uncovered during the night's discussion was the fact that the Town Manager Act and town bylaws are often contradictory. This is an issue the board has asked the governance committee to explore in more detail.

Selectman Paul Carlson said, "There are two governing documents in this town that don't agree; it's a major conflict."

Carlson went on to explain that the Town Manager Act was written 14 years ago and hasn't been reviewed since.

Selectman Fred Koed said that he believed the Town Manager Act caused a shift in power that negatively impacted the Advisory Board.

"I wasn't in favor of Advisory losing power," said Koed. "It's what makes Town Meeting work, when the boards and Advisory all agree on something. Now, the power is all centralized."

Selectmen Diane Kennedy agreed, saying, "The selectmen shouldn't vote on something that hasn't been vetted by Advisory," adding that a good example of that was the K-9 unit Coughlin approved last summer, his first official act as Town Manager.

"There seems to be a discrepancy between the way we used to operate and the expectations of what the selectmen and town manager are supposed to do, and where the advisory committee fits in."
Ralph Dormitzer, Governance Committee

While Kennedy said that she was ultimately in favor of the police department getting the dog, she felt that the Advisory board should have had a say in the matter.

Pescatore spoke up that Advisory did weigh in, but Capital Budget did not.

Kennedy amended, "It wasn't our decision, but if it had been" and Advisory had weighed in, "I'd feel good about making a decision."

The group discussed the need for checks and balances, and hopes to help improve communications between the various boards and town departments by conducting more visits to department head meetings.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr said that his goal is to sit down with department heads once a month; Kennedy said she'd like to share in that responsibility.

"I'm feeling more disconnected from some of the boards," said Kennedy, likening the problem to a "moat around a castle that's getting wider. We want to do as much bridging of that as possible."

While the selectmen also discussed getting to the root of the town's financial problems and the fiscal year 2013 budget, they came away with three top priorities for the governance committee to tackle: reviewing committees and their structure, improving monthly financial reporting, and revisiting the Town Manager Act.

While Carr joked that he could easily give the committee a list of several more issues, he acknowledged that they have a lot of work to do.

Kennedy added that the selectmen do, too. Earlier in the meeting, she said that she hoped a collaborative process would take place.

"People in the community should feel good about the decisions being made here," said Kennedy. "We should all be able to explain why certain decisions are being made, and the only way to do that is with a collaborative process. We're supposed to be representing people in the community."

Governance Committee in a nutshell

- The Governance Committee was created by the Board of Selectmen last fall, following the board's dismissal of three members of the Conversation Commission in July. The three ousted, long-serving ConCom members were up for reappointment, but were instead swiftly replaced without warning. This sparked a public outrage and citizen's petition, urging the board to apologize and reinstate the commissioners.
- While selectmen chair Ted Carr did apologize publicly for the way the matter was handled, the board could not rescind its decision to appoint the newest members to the ConCom. To quell some of the public clamor, the board created a Governance Committee, consisting largely of members of the Town Manager search committee, to closely review town boards and committees and how they operate, coming up with best practices and considering term limits.
- The Governance Committee held their first meeting on December 15, during which they reviewed the selectmen's official charge, and will sunset next December. Until then, the committee will meet on the first and third Thursday of every month.

Good thoughts

Hello Cohasset and HAPPY NEW YEAR 2012 to everyone! I hope that all who are reading (as well as those who are not) have had a great start to this year. I am going to try and take each day of this year and look at it as a gift. I know that I have not done that in the past and on so many occasions, I take each day for granted. I want to feel at the end of each day, like I have done a good job with my kids, the families who I work with and with my family and friends.

It is way too easy to forget what we are given each day and instead, put a lot of focus on the bad instead of embracing the good. For me, I will start today and continue this for days and years to come. Happy New Year Cohasset...

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

Atlantic Symphony Orchestra members share a light moment during a Joyful Noise year-end concert at Braintree's Thayer Academy Center for the Arts. The ASO's next program, Sunday, Jan. 29, at 3 p.m., also at Thayer, is its Discovery educational concert.

Glorious yearend and more is ahead

CONSTANCE GORFINKLE

The gifts have all been opened, many lights turned off, and some wreaths and trees taken down. But holiday memories endure.

Among them is the "Joyful Noise" emitted by the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra at its annual concert that celebrates the season. As is usual for this performance, Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts in Braintree was packed on Dec. 3. Indeed, the year-end audience has grown greatly over the 15 years that conductor Jin Kim has been music director of the orchestra.

A superb professional ensemble made up of young, mostly Boston-based players, the ASO nevertheless puts on concerts that feel like family affairs. And that picture is beautifully introduced by the warm and humorous Jin Kim, in explanatory remarks delivered before and during the program.

A Varied Program

With wine and delicious pastries available to make the occasion even more festive, the musicians set the tone for the evening with a joyous rendition of Handel's "Music for Royal Fireworks." That was followed by a special treat, "T'was the Night Before Christmas," narrated by the orchestra's former administrative director, Nina Wellford. Her delivery was enhanced by the accompaniment of an evocative Dai composition. Also featured was clarinetist Jin-Sun Moon, 2010 winner of the ASO's Concerto Competition, who performed Rossini's "Introduction: Theme and Variations," a virtuoso piece for solo clarinet and orchestra.

Dvorak's "Slavonic Dances," and a couple of Leroy Anderson holiday crowd-pleasers rounded out the first half of the program.

Intermission was filled with friends greeting friends, and yet more wine and sweets. Thus fortified, we all returned to the auditorium ready for the evening's tour de force, a bold and brilliant performance of Beethoven's magnificent Fifth Symphony. Embraced by the sublime sounds of this world-favorite piece, one was removed from the everyday, and carried to another, better place: a place of hope and possibility.

What a wonderful gift in a time of new beginnings. The ASO delivered that and more at this year-end celebration.

As the ASO dives into 2012, the first event is the annual Discovery concert, dedicated to classical music education, on Sunday, Jan. 29, at 3 p.m. Again the venue is Thayer's Center for the Arts, at 745 Washington St., just off Route 3 at the Braintree rotary. Admission for adults and seniors is $20, with $10 youth tickets.

This year, the orchestra hosts 50 children and their families from each of these groups that serve the South Shore: The Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts, the Hanover and Quincy branches of the South Shore YMCA, and the Marshfield Boys and Girls Club.

In the years since schools gave up on field trips to Boston for orchestral music, victims of squeezed school budgets, the ASO's orchestral programs have offered a beacon for South Shore young people interested in serious music. And Discovery is a highlight of this educational programming. While students hear great music on stage, and have it explained for them, there's also a close-up opportunity to visit with musicians after the concert.

For more information on the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, see www.atlantic-symphony.org or contact managing director Jim Hartford at 781-331-3600.

BUSINESS SPOTLIGHT

Wine shop showcases local spirits

Owner loves her 'second career'

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nestled between Cohasset and Hingham along Route 3A at Old Colony Square, Local Vines and Gourmet is a convenient stop for folks needing to pick up a bottle of wine on their way home for dinner. Not only does the store stock popular brews and beverages — it specializes in local wines from local vineyards.

Owner Debbie Hardey believes that her store stocks the largest selection of local wines in the state.

"Most places will have one to two locals," Hardey said of available wines. "We have over 20."

And Local Vines keeps the local fare right up front. Options include chardonnay from Truro Vineyards on the Cape, fruit wines from Plymouth Colony, and a robust selection from Westport Rivers in Westport, MA.

The shop, which opened in November 2010, also carries local craft beers and accoutrements such as chocolates from Puopolo Candies of Hingham, local cheese, and other gourmet treats.

Hardey, who hails from Windsor, Connecticut, but has called Hingham home for 15 years, said that living in Hingham and opening a wine shop in Cohasset has allowed her to experience "the best of both worlds."

"It's so beautiful," she said of Cohasset. "I feel very lucky."

Of her choice location, Hardey said that many folks in the Hingham area don't know where to find her in Cohasset. "I'm right around the corner," she said.

Hardey got into the wine business following a career in the travel industry. After being laid off three years ago, Hardey realized that she needed to make her own job. She was already pursuing a wine business on the side.

Teaming up with business partner Shawn, Hardey began visiting local vineyards like Westport Rivers and Running Brook in Dartmouth.

Local Vines and Gourmet shop owner Debbie Hardey of Hingham in her Cohasset shop in Old Colony Square off Route 3A. STAFF PHOTOS/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

"I realized how great local wines were; nobody knows about them up here," Hardey said. In most wine shops, she continued, the local items are hidden in a corner; "no one showcases them."

While carrying plenty of other brands – around 300 different wines altogether – Hardey wanted to show her love for the local variety. This was extended to using locally sourced furniture – tables, shelves, mirrors – and featuring local art by Paige Railsback of Hingham.

"I wanted to do as much local as possible," Hardey said of her shop's décor.

Hardey strives to achieve a laid-back, welcoming atmosphere in her shop, making browsing a relaxing, non-intimidating experience.

"People love coming in — we know a lot of customers by name and greet everybody. We talk to them and everybody feels really comfortable. Wine can be intimidating," Hardey said. "There's so much to learn."

Local Vines and Gourmet has a large variety of New England wines available as well as wines from around the world.

Local Vines seeks to help customers by offering wine classes and offering to view and evaluate clients' wine cellars. The shop also holds wine dinners at local restaurants, such as the Atlantica; Local Vines will hold one such dinner on January 26.

During wine dinners, a local wine distributor works directly with the restaurant's chef to select the wines that will complement the evening's menu.

Hardey is especially excited about the upcoming dinner at the Atlantica: "I love it there," she said. "It's so pretty, even in the wintertime; it's a beautiful spot."

Another local restaurant tie-in? Local Vines features the favorite wine from local restaurants like Tosca and Bia's in Cohasset, and Alma Nove in Hingham, labeling the bottles with a cutout gold star.

This allows the customer to, in a sense, "bring their favorite restaurant home," said Hardey.

Local Vines will also assist a customer by tracking down a hard-to-find wine someone had at a restaurant and would like to purchase.

The shop offers customer tastings on Thursday and Friday nights, and also has wine opened for sampling on the weekends, the shop owner said. Customer feedback is important, Hardey explained; she relays it all back to the wine distributors.

Since her grand opening in November 2010, business has grown steadily for the cozy shop.

"We were crazy-busy during the holidays," said Hardey, with December being the store's biggest month yet, following a business boom in November. "This Thanksgiving, we did nine times [the sales] we did last year."

November also saw the shop holding an open house to celebrate the first year in business. Hardey reports that close to 300 people attended, along with 10 different distributors offering wine and cheeses.

But of all the wines customers can find at Local Vines – local and otherwise – what sells the best?

Hardey said it's 90-Plus Wines of Boston. "It's a really small company that buys overstock wine from popular vineyards, rebottles it and sells it a fraction of the cost." Hardey keeps 90-Plus close to the entrance so customers can find it right away.

And while the shop owner tries to steer clear of selling "what everybody [else] has," Hardey acknowledges, "If it's a great wine, we need to carry it."

Cohasset heritage put to good use for our feathered friends

Local craftsman Dana Cushing is utilizing a bit of Cohasset's past in an interesting way. Dana builds, displays and sells handcrafted birdhouses at his 271 Beechwood Street home. The Cohasset connection comes from the use of slate salvaged from an old Cohasset train station, originally built in the late 1800s. Each birdhouse has a roof made from New York Slate, which is known for its beauty and durability.

The bird houses are all done in the classic Martin house style, but each is unique and made with native wood, the antique slate and copper. The slate has aged to a lovely patina and is attached using original brass hardware, also salvaged from the long gone station.

The houses make a wonderful sanctuary for our feathered friends and an interesting continued use of a part of Cohasset's history.

GIMME SHELTER

Oliver likes people and cats!

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Oliver.

Oliver is a three-year-old, jet-black male cat. He once had a home and is a very friendly cat, with no known issues. He gets along well with humans and felines, and should make a welcome addition to most any animal friendly family. We may never know why he was left to roam the streets and fend for himself, but we know he will be warm and comfortable at the shelter till some kind soul decides they'd like to share their home with this friendly feline. Please stop by and visit Oliver!

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

CITIZEN

also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the Citizen of the Year.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the18th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

Roger Whitley, a retired architect, former Advisory Committee member, and Paul Pratt Library Trustee, who has spent much time over his 50 years as a Cohasset resident "involved."

Merle Brown, former selectman (four terms), Conservation Commissioner, involvement with Beechwood Ball Park project, Boy Scouts, recycling, to name a few.

JoAnne Chittick, artist and volunteer. Chittick has been a volunteer at Rosie's Place for 30 years; 20 of which she has coordinated 50 local cooks who sign up to prepare meatloaf, vegetables or dessert once a month for 10 months a year for the shelter.

- Dick Avery, volunteer, whose community service activities – including serving on town boards, on non-profits, helping the Boy Scouts and so much more – are almost too numerous to list.
- Ed Lappen, truly one of life's "good guys" for his tireless dedication and service to his family, community and the world.

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset.

OUR VIEW

Thanks for speaking up

Before 2012 gets too far along, we still have some important 2011 business to attend to.

The people attached to following names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor or penned a commentary to the Cohasset Mariner in 2011.

A few wrote thank you notes to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject, putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

So here at the Mariner, we salute the following citizens:

Ruthann Ardizzoni, the Arnold Family, John Beck, Margie & Steve Brown, Barbara Buckley, Bill Burnett, Tom Callahan, Barbara Canney, R. Murray Campbell, Paul Carlson, Marita Carpenter & Sandra Halverson, Margy Charles, Chris Chisholm, Judith Chute, Debbie Cook, Trisha Corcoran, Mike Coughlin,

Steve Daly, Diane K. Danielson, Jack DeLorenzo, Chief Mark DeLuca, Peter DiCaprio, Anthony DiPaolo, William M. Driscoll, Robert Ernst Sr., Don Evans, Linda Fechter, Courtney Finn & Jennifer Lord, Ginni Froio,

Joe Laugelle, Helene Lieb, Charles Lindgren, Sue Lofchie, Adrienne MacCarthy, Ellen Maher, Jim Marten, Shirley Marten, Joe McElroy, Mary McGoldrick, Tracy McLean, Richard McManus, Ronnie McMorris & others, Trish Morse, Judy Muller, Thomas J. Myers,

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or group that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard, but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

Last year, the Cohasset Mariner received 119 letters from people, groups or organizations.

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, happenings and controversy. Let us hear what you think in 2012.

(Editor's note: Unless they penned a letter, names of the Mariner's regular columnists were not included in this list. Also, if a letter had more than two signatures, only the first name is listed here).

Applications available for preservation funding

The Community Preservation Committee meets on Monday (Jan. 9) at 7:30 at Town Hall.

The Community Preservation Committee would like to remind anyone interested in applying for CPA funding of projects to please do so by the 15th of February in order to get on the Town Warrant for the spring Town Meeting.

Application forms are available on the Town website by going to: www.cohassetmass.org/cpc/index.html. Forms are available at the bottom of the page. Free legal assistance may be available for non-profit organizations applying for CPA funding through The Lawyers Clearing House. For more information please go to their website at: www.lawyersclearinghouse.org/for-nonprofits.

Cohasset has been participating in the CPA since its inception 10 years ago, and has provided funding for a myriad of projects. CPA funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on your real estate taxes, combined with a surcharge on all real estate filings at the Registry of Deeds. Though the rate the State currently matches town money is down from the 100 percent match in previous years, a return on your tax surcharge of 27 percent in State money is a very good return in any economy.

For more information on the application process for CPA funding, please feel free to contact Russell Bonetti at 781-383-9778.

The Community Preservation Committee meets on Monday (Jan. 9) at 7:30 at Town Hall.

HEALTH NOTES

Putting medical costs on a diet

STEVE BOBO

But a big part is changing the habits of consumers: Encouraging them to eat better, exercise more, get regular checkups and adopting a public concern with improving health-care delivery.

New Solutions — It's difficult to have observed last year's changes nationally and make a lot of sense about their effect on the health of our citizens. Leadership of the country is surely in need of electoral decisions using good judgment and insight and the nation desperately needs to solve the problem of productivity and re-creation of a source of jobs to build new useful articles and systems which the world wants and needs to go forward. Especially, we need to rein in medical costs. The recent changes brought about by cell phones and other electronic devices has prompted some to look at focusing on bringing more brains to work on problems — the so-called million brain solution. The use of social media such as Skipe and Facebook Both allow users to communicate with peers by voice, video, and instant messaging over the Internet.

Over the next five years experts have predicted that: "Nearly every hospital is going to have to shave tens of millions of dollars from their operating costs and some of the nation's largest health care systems are asking VHA to help them save $25 million or $50 million and even $100 million each. Price discounts on supplies alone won't allow hospitals to achieve the savings they need. Hospitals need a more strategic approach to cost reduction."

It's of little surprise that insurance companies are leading the charge on wellness. Health-care costs are skyrocketing, in Massachusetts and everywhere else. And while some political types are eager to blame existing Massachusetts medical care statutes, Massachusetts health care law was never intended to make things cheaper. Accordingly, it should not necessarily serve as a pattern for other states.

The insurance companies have their own problems. How, perhaps can discussions in the cellular community consider the more mundane problems which might help insurance companies more than anyone knows? What to eat. In general; for Massachusetts, Cohasset included; it's necessary for everyone to reconsider eating habits that will lead to a healthier and less damaging diet.

An Attitude about Snacking and generally healthy eating. Part of cutting costs involves changing how doctors and hospitals work. But a big part is changing the habits of consumers: Encouraging them to eat better, exercise more, get regular checkups and adopting a public concern with improving Health care delivery.

To be on the leading edge of wellness reforms, it's necessary to use statistical data from patient screenings to set up corporate wellness programs (Results should be organized into aggregate results, but not individual's data in order to create a healthier workplace). Several companies are even taking more active steps. For example, candy and other less desirable sweets are slowly being largely removed from corporate kitchens and dining facilities. Even vending machines have removed sugar-sweetened drinks. Some companies are even looking for office space with an onsite gym, or architecture that encourages more walking.

Many are taking up the call to consume a more healthy diet. This fall, a survey of over a thousand clients of insurance companies found a sharply increased interest in wellness programs. About half of respondents said they were planning to implement "health risk assessments". Nearly 40 percent hoped to provide employees with anti-smoking programs, and half were also interested in weight-loss programs. Some programs even offered cash incentives like paying for health club memberships. Can insurance companies provide other incentives to assist us lead healthier lives? It's certain that personal communication devices will play a part in these developments.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Dreaming of seeds and spring

Since seeds are the beginning parts of plants, having a healthy seed is essential. I look for recently harvested, collected and saved seed.

JON BELBER

Silver sagebrush, joi choi, easter egg radish, Cherokee purple tomato and Boothby's blonde cucumber, to name a few. The seed catalogues have arrived! As the winter chill slowly makes its way to the South Shore, and the ground continues to harden, this is a marvelous time of year to sit, peruse, think and eventually order. The arrival of the seed catalogues signal winter and rest and hopes for Spring. They also waste little time, as I received my first catalogue on Dec. 25, barely two days after the last holiday catalogue had arrived.

From Burpees to High Mowing organic seeds to Peaceful Valley to Fedco Seed cooperative in Maine, all seed companies seek to entice the farmer, home gardener and interested planter of all ages everywhere to order early and often and plan big. Seeds are often the first part of planting, the start of the spring season. Without seeds, one cannot begin to grow tomatoes, squash, flowers or herbs. (Seeds and plants, chickens and eggs; these are larger concepts worthy of greater philosophy). Of course there are perennials that are designed by nature to grow back each year. But choosing seeds is a sacred, personal activity. Most catalogues provide detailed information for planting depth, length of time until germination, spacing and even some background facts on how well varieties have performed in recent years. In addition to seed data, one can often find a list of organic amendments, literature from other growers and handy tools for cultivation.

Since seeds are the beginning parts of plants, having a healthy seed is essential. I look for recently harvested, collected and saved seed. I like to know from where the seed comes, if it was genetically modified (hopefully not) and if the seed available locally, rather than shipped in from California or another country.

Another way to know a seed is healthy and reliable is to save your own. First graders at Hatherly and Wompatuck saved many bean pods from their field trip to the farm, each pod containing about 4 to 8 bean seeds for spring. Jenkins School kindergarteners have saved pumpkin seeds.

The many school farm gardens produce delicious tomatoes, peas, arugula and potatoes that are terrific to harvest and enjoy, but the gardens are also a reliable source for seed saving.

And what the gardens don't yield, then I turn to the thousands of seeds in the various catalogues to keep me busy in winter: reading and dreaming of spring.

FOR THE RECORD

Unfinished business from 2011

GREGORY MATHIS

The calendar has turned, but there's still some unfinished business from 2011 that needs to be addressed before I can really turn the page on a New Year.

First, there's a whole slew of potential community bloggers waiting to hear back on when, where and how they can start contributing to our Wicked Local websites. I reached out to readers through this column back in October and many responded with interesting ideas for new blogs or the possibility of us linking to their existing blog.

I may have been a bit premature in reaching out to folks, as it turns out there were some technical challenges in getting the proper Web-based platform set up on our end and a delay in getting an online application form finalized.

We are getting closer on both accounts and I'll soon be reaching out to those who have already expressed interest in blogging and we'll start ironing out the details. If anyone reading this is interested in adding his or her idea for a blog, please send me an email.

The other group that's been hanging out there for the last half of 2011 is the Readers Advisory Network (RAN). RAN is an email network made up of readers from many of the towns covered by our media group in and around the South Shore. The objective is to have a network of regular contributors to react to stories, help develop ideas for stories or follow-ups, to provide potential sources for stories, for a "digital person on the street" interview or for various community commentary. RAN members will also be asked for feedback on a somewhat regular basis on various aspects of the newspaper and website.

About 20 people responded to my original call-out for RAN members back in July. The summer got away from me and staffing issues delayed the start up of the network. One email was sent out to the group in mid-October, but there was no follow up on my part. That will change in 2012, I promise. For those who have already expressed interest in RAN, expect an email in the next couple of weeks that will begin to fulfill the promises made about the intentions of the group back in July.

For those who would like to be involved in a regional Readers Advisory Network, please send me an email. (Please note, this is a separate RAN from the Cohasset Mariner Readers Advisory Network; it is OK to belong to both).

Finally, I need to circle back with several people regarding the column I wrote at the end of October titled, "We're losing our religion." Of all the columns I've written over the past 15 months, I received the most response from this one.

I did have the opportunity to meet with the Scituate Clergy Association after the column appeared and I had email exchanges with several residents and clergy members throughout the area about our coverage of religion and religion/faith in general. I know I haven't got back to everyone who weighed in on the topic and will do my best to follow up with each of you individually.

There's probably some other unfinished business from 2011, but for now the focus heading into the first part of 2012 is on community bloggers, the Readers Advisory Network and furthering the discussion of religion/faith.

Welcoming a new year

LOUISE SMULLEN

Will we exercise more or watch our diets more carefully? Perhaps we will be more kind to those around us. We wish you success in whatever you undertake.

Where does the time go? As we grow older the days seem to whiz by faster and faster. We have said goodbye to the past year and have welcomed in the new. What will it bring us? Some have made resolutions hoping to keep them during the coming year. Perhaps dropping old habits and taking on new, but better. Will we exercise more or watch our diets more carefully? Perhaps we will be more kind to those around us. We wish you success in whatever you undertake.

In December, Kathy Dennis, Ostea Rheumatoid Technician from Braintree Rehab, offered us tips to maintain daily living activities. She talked about the development of arthritis and how it affects the body's joints. She demonstrated tools which help with daily living, such as grabbers, buttonhooks, a device which helps one put on socks, and much more. Did you know there is an electric jar opener that pops the jar open with the press of a button? Elders are pretty independent, but Kathy suggested that we accept help from those who offer it.

Carol Taylor of Allerton House and Linda Chuckran of the Welch Company paid us a visit last month. We are always pleased to welcome them. Linda led us in another game of Name that Tune, with prizes awarded. Carol provided a most delicious lunch.

The Wednesday before Christmas John Campbell, Chairman of Cohasset Elder Affairs Board of Directors, playing his guitar, led us in a Christmas singalong. He was joined by his daughter, Katy, in a delightful duet. John's wife, Linda, had made origami stars as favors, and we all received a goody bag of candies and home baked cookies. The Friends of Elder Affairs provided a delicious luncheon. It certainly put us in a Christmas mood, and may thanks to all those responsible for a lively time.

On Dec. 28, John Paul of AAA offered tips for keeping cars running during the winter months. The vehicle should be tuned up for the winter. Mr. Paul showed slides which depicted road hazards in snow and on icy roads. He told of the importance of having an emergency road kit with meds, snacks, water, a blanket and other supplies in case of a tie-up on the road.

We trust all enjoyed the Christmas holidays and wish everyone a Happy New Year.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

MBTA might sink commuter boat

Local ferry advocate, Chamber are ready for a fight

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

"The economic future of the South Shore depends on its transportation network. The major development projects underway or on the drawing board are all designed around a mix of transportation alternatives."
Peter Forman, South Shore Chamber of Commerce

The MBTA is considering eliminating ferry service from Hingham to Boston as part of an effort to cut costs. Many commuters from the area, including Cohasset, use the service.

This is not the first time the future of the popular ferry service has come into question. Fare hikes are another possibility.

Longtime commuter boat advocate Martha Reardon Bewick of Hingham said during an announcement about potential ferry elimination, MBTA General Manager Richard Davey called ferry service "very underutilized."

Bewick's take on his comments was, "If you take the ferry to Hingham, he says you can take Greenbush commuter rail instead. He said that the ferry is redundant and very expensive.

He also said that you could get to the airport by taking the Blue Line and Silver Line instead of the ferry," Bewick said. "We look forward to researching his allegations and challenging his assumptions."

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce also weighed in on the announcement.

In a letter to MBTA general manager Jonathan Davis, Chamber president Peter Forman said dropping ferry service "would severely undermine a regional development strategy pattern on the South Shore that has been actively pursued by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and strongly supported by the Patrick administration."

Bewick recalled that the Hingham commuter boat, which began in 1975, was an initiative of the Towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, and the Route 228 Committee, with participation by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Massport, the Boston Redevelopment Authority and the ferry operators, "with many professional contributions (accounting, vessel design, surveys, advertising, etc.) from South Shore residents. The MBTA didn't get involved until 1984, when expansion of the Hingham ferry service was proposed as a transportation alternative to Boston during the reconstruction of the Southeast Expressway, and service was substantially expanded," she said.

Commuter boats provide transportation from Quincy, Hingham and Hull to downtown Boston and Logan Airport. The ferries operate under contract to the MBTA.

In the early 1980s, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce obtained the funding to begin the commuter boat service.

"The economic future of the South Shore depends on its transportation network. The major development projects underway or on the drawing board are all designed around a mix of transportation alternatives," Forman said. "Water transportation is a vital part of that mix."

Forman cited the development at the Hingham Shipyard, "where one of the anchor assets to that residential and retail development is the ferry service into Boston."

"It is critical to our regional development that the state look at the ferry services not solely from a perspective of current dollars and ridership but in the context of the region's planned growth over the next decade," Forman said.

Bewick said that citizens who originally raised questions about the economics of Greenbush compared to other modes of transportation would be taking a closer look at the current ridership, operating loss, and debt and principal costs of the Greenbush Line

According to Bewick's calculations, the construction cost of Greenbush was about $525 million, "which may represent today more than 10 percent of the current MBTA debt. That does not include the interest, which could be, at, say, 5 percent, about $25 plus million a year," she noted.

The MBTA plans a series of public hearings in the coming weeks to review proposals to realign its services and fare structure.

UPDATE

School board reviews fiscal year '13 budget

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The proposed 2013 operating budget for Cohasset schools was presented by School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro during Wednesday night's school committee meeting.

The proposed budget is $15,730,441, which is an increase of 2.13 percent, or $327, 961 over fiscal year 2012.

DeGennaro told the committee that this is not a level-funded budget, meaning there are increases from last year's budget, including contractual obligations, fixed costs and new positions. Assumptions that impacted the proposed budget include step increases and column changes for staff, which is estimated to cost $167,391; 1.5 new positions at the Middle School (due to the class sizes increasing next year), which will cost approximately $79,994; reorganization of K-6 staff to accommodate the population shift at the Middle School; a new part-time foreign language position at the High School, to cost approximately $24,945; and a Circuit Breaker offset of $366,447, a 10 percent reimbursement, which will help defray costs of Special Ed out of district tuition costs.

What the proposed budget does not include: cost of living salary increases for faculty and staff. This was a point of contention with School Committee chair Helene Lieb.

"This is the first time I remember seeing the budget with no cost of living increases," Lieb said. "I would hate to be the chair of the school board when that happens."

Lieb added that she hopes the schools will have more money than is currently projected. "It's challenging not to have cost of living increases for the unions," she said. "A lot of people are getting no increases while cost of living has increased."

The chairwoman added that the school's teachers and staff "are the reason we have such a strong system.

"To not have it in the budget to give them a cost of living increase — that's not the best scenario," said Lieb.

DeGennaro explained that union contract negotiations are still pending, which is why the cost of living increases were not including in the proposed budget.

School committee member Paul Schubert weighed in, saying that the Cohasset School District manages to do a lot with the relatively small budget they have.

School budget, by the numbers:

- Proposed for FY'13: $15,730,441
- Dollar increase over FY '12: $327,963
- Percent increase over FY '12: 2.13 percent
- Percentage of total spending: 89.4 percent
- Percentage of total spending from frees, gifts, boosters, grants and tuitions: 10.6 percent
- Actual cost to run district: $17,592,802

Both Schubert and Lieb reminded everyone that Cohasset was named the number 13 public school in the state, and that of the schools in the top 20, Cohasset had the smallest budget to work with.

"The town is getting a lot for the money," said Schubert. "And only 10 percent [of operating costs] are privately funded."

The school board did not take any votes on the proposed budget; DeGennaro explained that it was merely a presentation. The budget subcommittee will present more "hard numbers" and go through all the details during their January 18 meeting, DeGennaro said.

Student chosen for state project

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

School Superintendent Barbara Cataldo had good news to share with the school committee during Wednesday night's meeting.

An eighth-grade student, Daniel Toomey, was chosen to represent Cohasset in a state volunteer program called Project 351. The program, started by Governor Patrick, sees middle school students completing a community service project in Boston to honor the memory of Martin Luther King, Jr. Patrick called the program "a celebration of youth leadership, the ethic of service and the unifying power of community" in his official letter to the schools.

This year's Project 351 will take place on Saturday, Jan. 14 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Students will meet at the State House, have a Town Meeting with the Governor, and then take a bus around the city to various service project sites.

Toomey was chosen for the project because of his essay submission, which was first chosen by the Middle School and then by the state.

Toomey wrote that he hopes to "create a positive impact on society" while striving to be "the best person I can possibly be."

The eighth-grader wrote that while he has volunteered at his church and around Cohasset, he hopes to reach out to a larger demographic.

"Being accepted into Project 351 would mean the world to me because it would give me the chance to make a difference outside of my community," Toomey wrote.

Cataldo said of Toomey, "There's a lot to be said for his letter."

She told the school board that Project 351 is "a tremendous opportunity to expose our students to community service."

The Superintendent added that she plans to invite Toomey to attend an upcoming school committee meeting to discuss his experience in Boston.

Avalon Bay offers to pay for rain gardens

Cohasset's Conservation Commission has been waiting on Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. to address environmental violations to the town's wetlands bylaw that occurred during construction of the luxury apartment complex.

The ConCom discussed fining Avalon $25,000 for the violations, which is the maximum amount allowed by state law. They also gave the developer the option of taking over the maintenance of the town's 15 rain gardens, which Carl Sestito of the Dept. of Public Works estimated would cost $17,000 per year.

Avalon Bay reportedly drafted a letter to the ConCom offering to pay the $17,000 in lieu of a fine. As of press time, the ConCom had yet to meet and decide whether to accept the developer's offer, but the item was added to their Thursday night agenda.

Commissioner Jack Creighton said that the ConCom is "making sure major developers are held to the same standards" as Cohasset residents. "When they cross the line, there should be consequences."

Volume 37 - Report No. 52 December 30, 2011

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call this week looks at six bills from the 2011 session that have been unanimously approved by the Senate without any opposition and sent to the House for action. All six bills are still languishing in the House Ways and Means Committee and have not yet reached the House floor.

OVERHAUL SYSTEM OF HANDLING RUNAWAY AND TRUANT CHILDREN (S 1963) — Y *

Senate 39-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that makes major changes in the current Children in Need of Services system of handling children who are runaways and truants. The proposal has been in the House Ways and Means Committee since July 18.

The measure basically abolishes the current system, which brings most of these juveniles to court, and replaces it with a statewide community-based intervention network that would provide community services for these children and their families. Children would be diverted from the juvenile legal process and instead be given behavioral, medical and mental health treatment; special education evaluations; mentoring, family and parent support; after-school and out-of-school opportunities; and crisis management.

Other provisions allow requests for assistance to be filed by parents or guardians, police officers and schools; require schools to establish truancy prevention programs; and prohibit children requiring assistance from being placed in Department of Youth Services custody or shackled.

Supporters say many of these children have mental health problems and need comprehensive services rather than repeatedly being dragged into court. They argue troubled children who are regularly exposed to the juvenile courts are more likely to commit crimes and end up in adult court later in life.

DAM SAFETY (S 1985) — Y *

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that would establish a Revolving Loan Fund, funded by the Water Pollution Abatement Trust, to provide low-interest, long-term loans to private dam owners and cities and towns to inspect, repair and remove some of the 3,000-plus dams in the Bay State. The proposal has been in the House Ways and Means Committee since July 29.

Other provisions require the development of emergency action plans for all hazardous dams and an inspection schedule that includes inspecting high-hazard dams every two years; and an increase in the fine imposed on dam owners who violate state safety regulations from $500 to $5,000.

Supporters say the dam repairs would be funded by some $14.5 million in Water Pollution Abatement Trust money that is not currently being used. They said the bill would help improve the safety of cities and towns with neglected and vulnerable dams.

DNA EVIDENCE (S 1987) — Y *

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill that would allow individuals who have been convicted of a crime to request access to DNA evidence for forensic testing that could grant a new trial. The proposal has been in the House Ways and Means Committee since August 1.

Supporters say 48 other states have similar laws, and it is time for Massachusetts to join them in making it easier for wrongfully convicted individuals to prove their innocence. They argue it would also lead to law enforcement pursuing the real offenders and saving the state the cost of incarcerating citizens who are wrongly convicted.

ORGAN DONATION (S 2067) — Y *

Senate 36-0, approved and sent to the House a bill requiring the state to adopt the Revised Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. The measure establishes revised rules and regulations for organ donations for transplantation or study. The proposal has been in the House Ways and Means Committee since November 16.

Supporters say the bill would bring the state law into compliance with the changes in a federal law that has been adopted in 45 other states. They note this would clarify the process of making or revoking an anatomical gift and streamline the entire donation process. They argue the bill would save lives and reduce health care costs at no cost to the state.

LIFE JACKETS FOR KIDS (S 2075) — Y *

Senate 36-0, approved and sent to the House a bill requiring all children's camps' lakes and other swimming areas, except swimming and wading pools to have one life jacket for each child. It also prohibits camps from refusing to allow a child to bring and use his or her own life jacket. The measure is called "Christian's Law" after 4-year-old Christian Frechette, who was not wearing a life jacket when he drowned in 2007 at a town-run camp. The proposal has been in the House Ways and Means Committee since November 17

Supporters say one child dies from drowning every minute across the world, and these requirements would save many lives. They argued 86 percent of children are found within 10 minutes and would likely be alive if they were wearing life jackets.

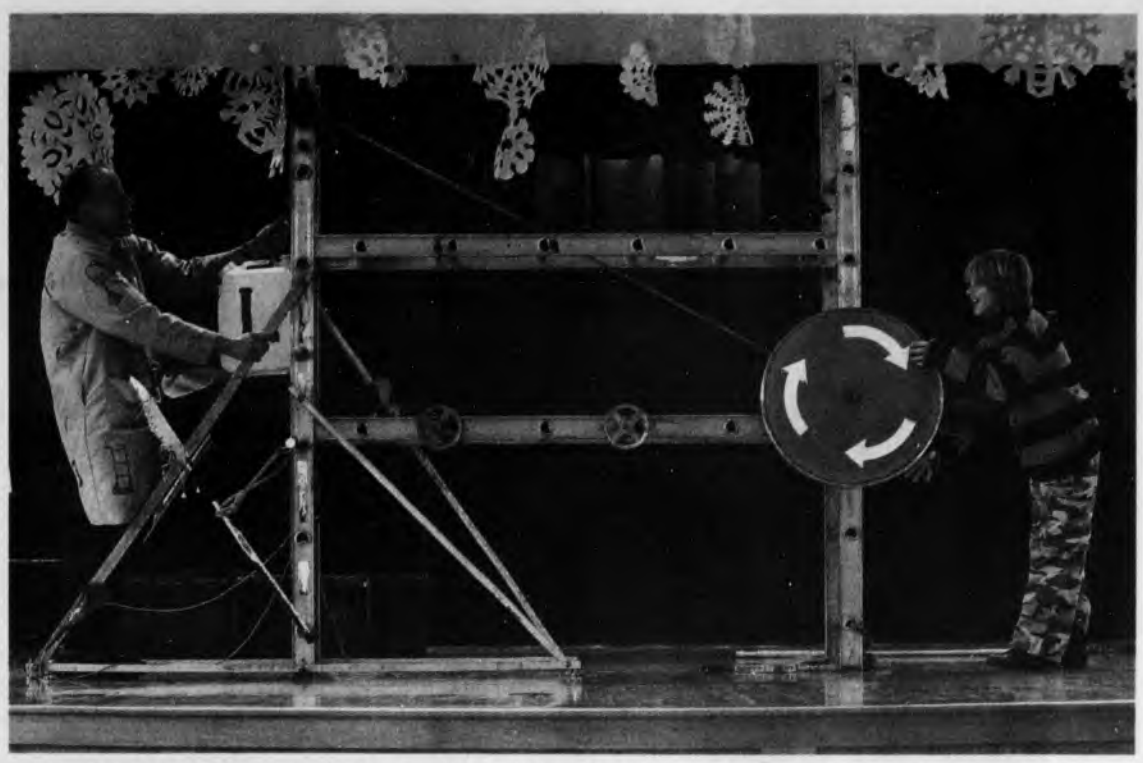
CHANGES TO STATE GOVERNMENT (S 1905) — Y *

Senate 38-0, approved and sent to the House a lengthy bill designed to make major changes in the way state government operates. The measure requires state government to regularly evaluate the worthiness, successes and failures of all agencies and programs. It would also establish a special commission to decide the fate of existing state agencies and boards based on their core missions and performance. The proposal has been in the House Ways and Means Committee since November 17.

Another key provision would require the governor to file a zero-based budget every four years — one that starts from scratch and is not based on the prior year's funding.



The measure also requires unrestricted local aid to be distributed monthly rather than quarterly and caps the state's debt limit at $17.07 billion.

Supporters say this would modernize and reform the way state government operates. They argue it would get rid of the mentality that each department's budget should almost always be funded at the prior year's level, at minimum. They note it would finally improve efficiency, transparency and accountability by implementing performance measurement requirements for all government agencies and programs.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

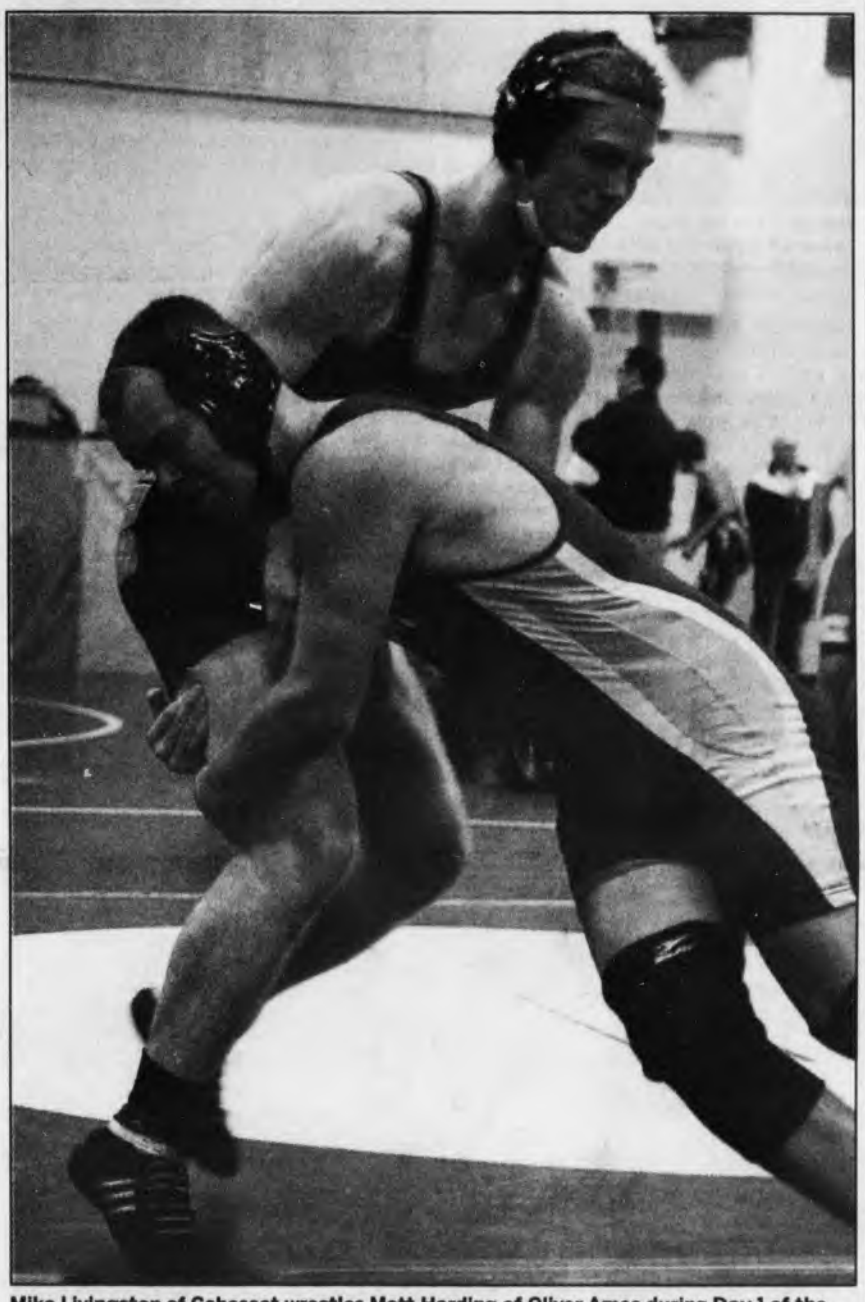
Skippers rally to victory

Rematch with Old Rochester goes to Cohasset

After finding themselves trailing 2-0 to Old Rochester in the second period, the Cohasset boys hockey team rallied for five unanswered goals in a 5-2 victory at Milton Academy in a rematch of an earlier game Dec. 30.

The rematch for these two teams started out dramatically different than the first meeting.

"Today's game at Milton Academy began with a much flatter start for the Cohasset Skippers and a much more aggressive Olde Rochester Bulldogs with ORR scoring at 9:39 of the first period with a 5-on-3 power play goal," Cohasset coach Bob Walsh said.



The balance of the period as well as the second period was a struggle for the Skippers. During the second period, at 10:16 the Bulldogs struck again making the score 2-0 in favor of the visiting Old Rochester team.

Walsh remarked that his team couldn't get out of their own way during the first two periods; while Coach Scott Hartley seemed to be getting all he needed out of his Bulldogs.

"We knew ORR was going to be tough coming in but the Skippers have been no wallflowers this season, so I expected a lot more out of them", remarked Walsh. "Going into

Productive break

Holiday a good one for Cohasset girls

The Holiday Break proved to be quite beneficial to the young Cohasset High School Girls Basketball Team.

Despite being slowed down by a number of injuries and illnesses, they managed to go 2-2 during the vacation period (4-4 overall).

On Friday Cohasset traveled to Nantucket with only seven available players and came back with a hard fought victory.

Led by the sharp shooting of Sage Stebbins, the rebounding of Allie Farren and a game high of 21 points by Anna Seraikas, they capped of a productive week-and-a -half.

During the vacation period the coaches and current players had the opportunity to practice with players from the 2008 and 2010 State Championship Teams.

The alumnae consisting of Sammy and Tori Lehr, Sam Crough, Meredith Kelly, Lindsey Davis, Rachel Fredey, and Carly Haggerty spent time working with the younger players and imparting some knowledge from their college practices.

Coach LeVangie has called his team "one of the hardest working groups he has had".

Cohasset's Old Colony League teams playing extremely well

The Cohasset girls travel basketball teams in grades 5-8 in the Old Colony League enjoyed a successful week before the holiday, with three of the four Blue & White squads defeating their Weymouth opponents. The four Cohasset squads now sport a fine 13-3 combined overall record in the OCL.

The seventh grade girls came to their holiday break with an impressive 3-1 mark. The team kicked off the season with a hard-fought 26-21 victory against a tough Kingston team.

The team was led by Charlotte Morrison, who scored nine points. Nicky Tolosko added seven points and and Nikki Federle hit for six. Marcella Flibotte and Audrey Hart finished off the scoring.

Erin McElhinney and Flibotte led a strong defensive effort, which was needed because of the loss of the team's defensive leader, Caroline O'Brien, to a season ending injury.

Tremendous progress on the ice

Hanover/Cohasset sees work paying off

GateHouse News Service

As a first-year varsity program, the going could be tough for the Hanover/Cohasset girls co-op team.

Fortunately, with veteran leadership in coach Deb Beal, and a group of players who want to excel, the initiation has been going well.

"This year's hockey team has made tremendous progress in the few short weeks we have been together," Beal said. "Their improvement is a direct correlation to the hard work they put in on the ice. Many of these kids have played competitive hockey since they were young and the skills just needed a little dusting off, they have picked up right where they left off."

Others are picking up new skills.

"For some of the players the skills didn't come as quickly, as some of them have only been skating for a year or two," Beal said. "These are the kids that we are seeing the most dramatic changes in. Skating is not easy, add the equipment, then the stick and then the puck and then add the advanced skaters whizzing by you and you can see how fast it all can be. I cannot

SOUTH SHORE BASKETBALL NOTEBOOK

Happy New Year!! Welcome back to the second year of our basketball notebook, covering boys' and girls' high school basketball on the South Shore.
In this weekly feature we will recap great games and individual performances, highlight upcoming Games To Watch and beginning next week list our Wicked Local South Shore Coaches Poll.
Also we will be checking in on stars of years past and where they are playing their college basketball.

Outstanding Performances

Damian Lugay, Weymouth. He scored 24 points in a victory over Braintree in the Adams Classic.
Megan Otto, Scituate. She scored 17 points in the final of the Scituate Holiday Classic against previously unbeaten Abington.
Tyler Gibson and Ricky Whitt, Rockland. They combined for 42 points in the finals of the Rockland Christmas Tournament.
Paige Marshall, Braintree. She has led the Wamps to a 4-0 start scoring 12 ppg.

Games To Watch

Boys: Friday, Jan. 6: Weymouth (4-0) at Wellesley (4-1). This is a match-up of the two conference champions in the Bay State Conference in 2011.
Girls: Friday Jan. 6: Norwell (6-1) travels to Abington (5-1) to see who takes an early lead in the South Shore League.

Where Are They Now

For the second week in a row former Weymouth HS star Sarah Collins was named the New England Women's and Men' Athletic Conference Player of the Week. The Babson junior leads the 8-2 Beavers with 10.2 rpg and is scoring 16.2 ppg.

Jim Dolan is currently in his 9th season as the Weymouth Boys Varsity Coach.

give the beginners enough credit, they come out day after day and push through barriers and gain confidence. It really has been a pleasure to work with them."

For Beal, Cohasset's longtime girls soccer coach, teaching has always been a priority.

"One of the biggest challenges we face as coaches is the number of players we have and the varying abilities in skating," she said. "With our program moving into the "Varsity" scene the pace and intensity of the game is much different than it was last season. Putting some of the beginners in a game situation that I know is too fast and skilled for them is difficult. Fortunately we are in a league that is most concerned with player development and coaches are collaborating and trying to create safe and fun opportunities for everyone involved."

That aspect has been a big positive.

"We have a few things planned for the New Year that will allow all of our players to participate in a few "games" with an opposing team," Beal said. "Many of the girls programs in our area are in the same boat having some skilled players, some players improving very quickly and some beginners. It's been a wonderful experience getting to know the coaches and sharing ideas and strategies."

The season has already had some nice moments.

"Currently we have played three games," Beal said. "We played Marshfield very closely and I was very impressed with our effort. Nicole Farren from Cohasset scored the first goal in the history of the program that evening. It was an exciting moment for the program and for her and her family. Nicole often skates on an offensive line with her two sisters, senior captain Amanda and freshman Valerie. That's an amazing opportunity for these three girls, it's not often you can see three siblings all playing together, it really is fun to watch. Another first we saw last week was freshman Jenna O'Brien scoring her first varsity goal against Scituate, she's a defender by nature but saw an opportunity and capitalized on it."

Beal plans on continued development both as a team and for individual players.

"This team has a lot of promise and we are working every opportunity we can to encourage the skills they have now and to push them a little further and challenge them to develop more," she said. "I am thrilled with their progress and am looking forward to the progress we will make."

The Skipping Indians coaching team consists of Paul and Sue McHugh from Cohasset, Ted Coyle the CHS cross country coach, Kathy Fenton from Braintree and Beal.

Hanover players are: Captain Taylor Graf, Julia Dares, Courtney Sepeck, Kelsi Orcutt, Kayla Garity, Erin Smith, Whitney Joy, Emily Siriioonian, Nina Slowey and Mackenzie Dunphy.

Cohasset players are: Captain Amanda Farren, Nicole Farren, Valerie Farren, Jenna O'Brien, Sophie Arnold, Meaghan Kearney, Sara Corry, Meredith Corry, Lauren McLellan, Francesca Genello, Makayla Barrow, Emily Davis, Taylor Frederick, Mackenzie Nolan, Alexandra Russell, Kylie Coffman, Sara Campedelli

Bruins win fall title

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The Bruins and the Canadiens had a great Fall Championship game won by the Bruins in overtime and the two teams started the 2012 Winter Season with another great battle.

The Bruins built a 5-1 lead, but the Canadiens came back with four straight goals to tie the game with just over three minutes left.

However, the Bruins Tom MacInnes replied with his second goal of the game with 2:27 left to give his team a 6-5 win.

John Tympanick had two goals and an assist, while Richard Spence of Scituate added a goal with two assists and John Dougenik scored a goal for the Bruins.

Lema and Harnisch both of Marshfield had two goals and Jim Donnelly also of Marshfield scored a goal for the Canadiens. Lema had two assists and Harnisch had one helper.

Pembroke's Paul Lyons scored the only goal in the shootout to give the Black Hawks a 3-2 Classics Div. win over the Red Wings. Lyons also assisted on a Norm Racicot goal and Peter Racicot added a goal for the Hawks.

Scott Varley and Steve Figioli scored a goal each for the Red Wings.

Dave Salvaggio scored three goals including an empty netter and Pembroke's Jim Smith added another as the Maple Leafs held on for a 4-2 Classics Div. win over the Rangers.

Hanover's Joe Craig and Joe O'Connell were the goal scorers for the Rangers.

Marshfield's Mike White, James McNeill, Ed Norton, Frank Elwood and Jim Callahan scored a goal each and Paul Murohy had two assists as the defending Legends champion Saints rolled to a 5-2 win over the Stingers.

The Stingers' Scott Kelly of Pembroke and Hanover's Peter MacPherson scored a goal each in the game.

The goaltending duo of Hanover's Rick Kelly and Barry Kaiser combined to post a 5-0 Legends Div. shutout for the Sharks over the Crusaders.

Dana Dolabany of Norwell scored two goals, Richard Petrosino and Mike Valenti both of Marshfield and Jay Faherty scored for the Sharks.

Norwell's John Maguire scored two goals, Jim Toner of Hanover, Scituate's Steve Concannon and Erik Jacobson of Rockland added a goal each in the Whalers 5-0 Legends Div. win over the Toros.

the room after the second period, there were no questions of how disappointed I was in the team and I conveyed that to them without question."

From the start of the third period, there appeared to be a whole different Cohasset team on the ice.

The Cohasset team that skated during the first two periods appeared to give way to a faster, more skilled and aggressive Skipper team with five unanswered goals in the third period.

The first goal of the third quarter came only 38 seconds into the period by senior Vinny Calorio assisted by senior John Collins.

The second, at 5:35 of the period was scored by Collins, this time assisted by senior defenseman Sean McKenna. Less than two minutes later (7:43) in the period.

Junior Ryan McGovern scored the game winner assisted by sophomore Chris Cohen putting the Skippers ahead 3-2. The insurance goal came at 11:39 in the period when senior Alex Evans scored on a beuatiful bang, bang pass play assisted by Collins and Calorio. Then, at 12:45, sophomore Tommy O'Brien put the lid on it with an empty netter.

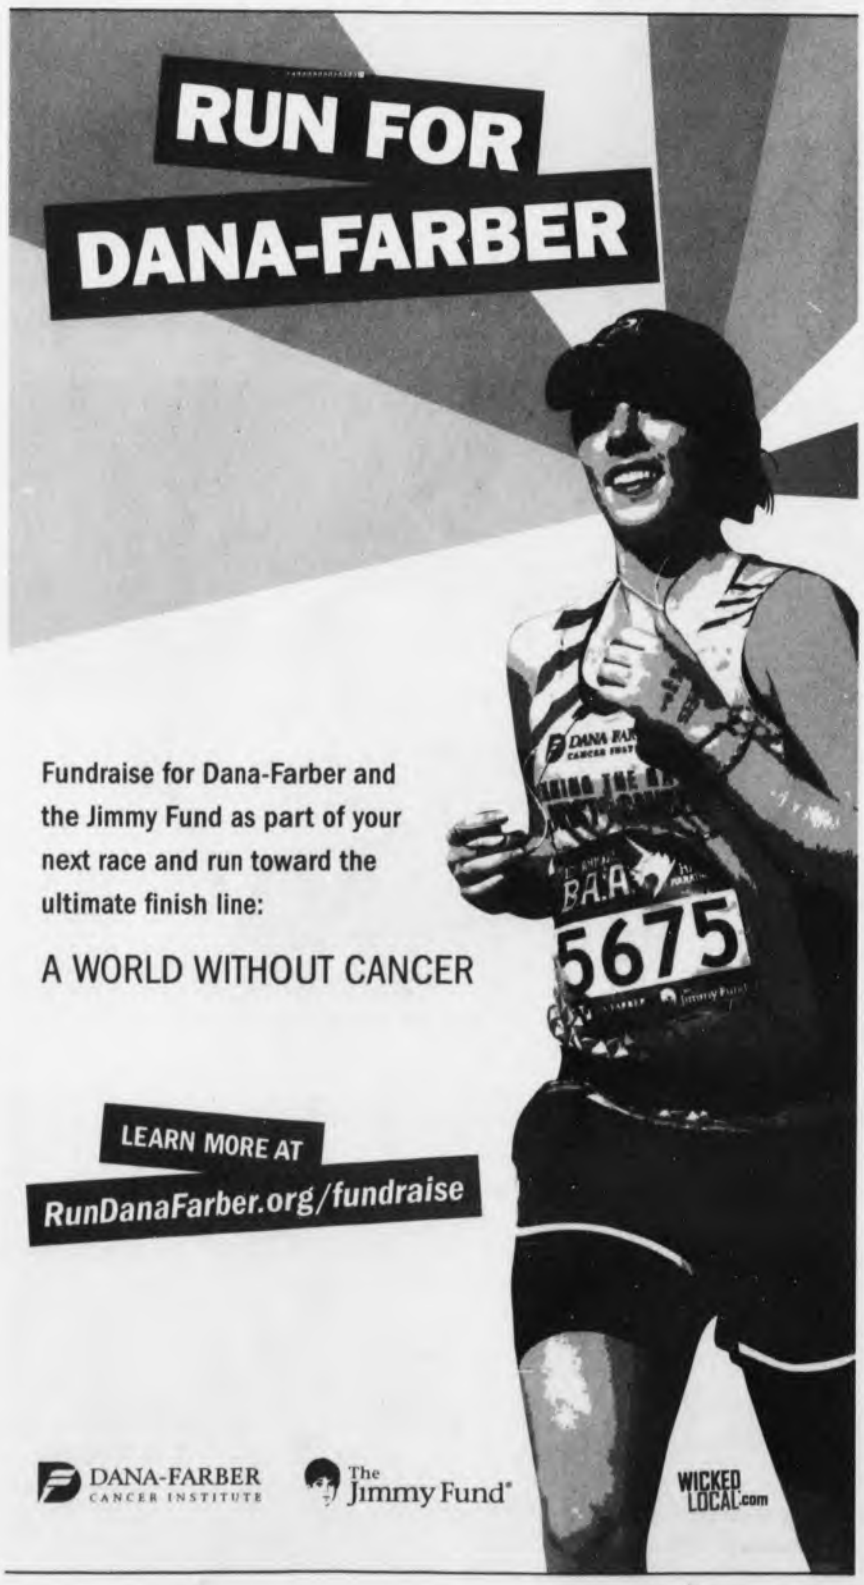
year was against league newcomer, Pembroke.

The Sensational Sevens came away with a 24-11 triumph. The team was led by Abby Osmanski with eight points and Megan McElgunn with six.

However, the game was decided by the rebounding of Caroline Adams and the defensive pressure of Margot Robbins.



After suffering a tough loss to Norwell, the Blue & White bounced back with a solid 22-10 victory over Weymouth, even though the team was shorthanded with only seven players available for the contest. Federle and Morrison led the point parade with eight points apiece. Robbins, Hart, and Flibotte completed the scoring chart. The Sevens had to withstand a strong defensive challenge, with Weymouth employing the full-court press the entire second half, but quick and smart ball movement by McElgunn and Caroline helped seal the victory.

The fifth grade Old Colony league girls basketball team has gotten off to a good start, completing the first month of the season with a 3-1 record. After dropping their first-ever travel game to Kingston, 15-12, the Fledgling Fifths have steadily improved their basketball skills each week, culminating with a 45-12 win over Weymouth. The guard play of Jane Hanson, Madison Ahern, Leah Fredey, Annie Toomey, Julia Plasek, Ally Telasco, and Anna Cunnie has been outstanding on both the offensive and defensive ends of the court. The forwards, Laney Hixson, Annie Pyne, Caroline McManus, and Alise Wimberly have controlled the offensive and defensive boards. The team's defense has stifled its opponents and has created scoring opportunities. The girls play with enthusiasm and focus in every game and are developing into skilled basketball players.

The eighth grade OCL squad, some of whose members play with the Cohasset High JV team, also has started the season with a 3-1 record. Their only loss came at the hands of Weymouth, which played a tough zone defense. The point guard play of Shea Kearney and Emily Rosano has directed the offense of the team skillfully. The wing play of Megan Rosano, Kerry Dunn, Rebecca Fredey, and Sophie Wolfe has complemented the point guard play and has executed the team's plays. Forwards Tracy Fogarty, Kyle Burke, and Lauren McManus have controlled the defensive boards and they provide excellent help defensively. The Exceptional Eighths' full court pressure has created scoring opportunities which has resulted in the Blue & White being one of the top scoring teams in the league, while the defense has allowed the lowest points per game average. All of the girls are looking forward to an exciting season.

The sixth graders remained undefeated with a 23-11 triumph over Weymouth. The Super Sixers are now 4-0 on the season and are in first place atop the sixth grade standings.

All of the teams will be back in action this Sunday, hosting Duxbury at the CHS gymnasium.

Rockland runs away from Skippers

Three-pointers key Rockland rally

GateHouse News Service

The Cohasset boys basketball team has played very well this season, but came up short after a barrage of threes from Rockland helped the visiting Bulldogs to a 56-45 win on Tuesday at Cohasset.

Cohasset came out strong, building an 11-2 lead before Rockland's defensive pressure began handcuffing Cohasset's potent offense, and the Bulldogs posted a 16-4 second quarter to go into the half ahead 24-17.

Cohasset made several nice runs, including 8 straight points to open the third period, which allowed them to take a brief 26-24 lead. But the Skippers (4-2, 3-2 South Shore League) could never stop Rockland's scoring, especially with senior guard Ricky Witt draining four of his game-high five three-pointers in the second half.

Cohasset's offense never got untracked for very long, as senior captain Kyrel Jaundoo made one thrilling, acrobatic up-and-under move for a third-period hoop, and then went scoreless the rest of the way, finishing with 6 points. Junior forward Shane Haggerty led Cohasset with 12 points, while senior captain Robbie Mahoney and junior guard Christian Davis added 11 apiece.

The 6-3 Mahoney held Gibson to a draw on the rebounding front, as each finished with eight, but Gibson's four blocked shots anchored the Bulldog defense, and the extra attention the big center demanded down low left several of his teammates open on the wings.

"I'm not pleased, but I'm not disappointed," said Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero, whose team was the state runner-up in Div. 4 last season. "We played hard and with intensity, but we became too undisciplined offensively. Rockland is a very well-disciplined and well-coached team, whose defense took us out of our normal stuff. We are not going to win too many games where Jaundoo is held to 6 points, for example. We played very undisciplined on offense, and no doubt Rockland's real good pressure was a big factor in that."

After that sluggish opening 6 minutes last night, Rockland got to the buzzer trailing only 13-8, thanks to treys from Witt and senior swingman Anthony Maldero.

"It's still a bit of a roller-coaster ride," Rockland coach Fred Damon said. " Cohasset is a very good team, and their zone makes it very hard to get good positioning. We had to slow down and that takes us out of our natural rhythm.

"We like to attack and create offense off our defense, but they weren't letting us. We just had to move the ball and find the openings – and also pick up our own defense to get some points in transition."

Witt scored 10 points in the fourth quarter to seal the win.

"Although we are a young team, if we get the injured players back and the younger players keep improving like they have then we should be very competitive the second half of the season." said Coach John LeVangie.

Becker College offers a variety of certificate programs that are a great option for adults to enhance their professional portfolios or enter a new field. CONTRIBUTED PHOTOS

Prepare for the new economy at Becker College

By Sandy Lashin-Curewitz
Becker College

The new economy demands that each individual — from the librarian to the lawyer — demonstrate their value. Whether you are employed or looking for work, finding solutions that will give you an advantage in the job market can strengthen your professional success.

Employers seek prospects who have the right combination of a focused skill set, a proven track record, broad management and organizational experience, and increasingly, a global understanding of business practices. How can adults upgrade their experience to meet marketplace demands?

"Many adult students need access to the core academic material that will deliver the foundation necessary to advance their careers," says Colleen Nelson, dean of the Center for Accelerated & Professional Studies at Becker College. To provide that access, Nelson says that Becker takes a multi-pronged approach.

"Certificate programs are a great option for adults to enhance their professional portfolios or enter a new field, with a modest investment of time and money," says Nelson. She points out that such highly regarded institutions as Northwestern University and the University of Chicago offer paths that enable adults who already have degrees to learn skills that add value for employers, or allow them to enter a new field.

Becker started with one of its strongest areas, computer game design, when developing new certificate programs. The certificate in game design is aimed at professionals with a degree in computer science, information technology, or art, who seek entre into the booming digital games industry.

"Students will finish with the skills they need to get in and start creating games," adds Nelson.

Project management, business administration management, and leadership — all must-haves in many corporate job descriptions — are the next likely candidates for new certificate programs at Becker. Nelson also has an eye on other proven degree programs, including psychology, criminal justice, and legal studies.

"We have a vision of this Center as a steward in the community," Nelson says. "By understanding the needs of local businesses, we can develop programs that will result in new jobs and promotions for local workers."

Author and management psychology expert Steven Moysey, Ph.D., recently joined the Center as director of continuing education, to further activity that Nelson has begun and to devise ways to emphasize a global perspective. Moysey is about to launch a workforce development program for medium to large businesses in the region.

Becker College President Robert E. Johnson, Ph.D., puts a priority on educating students who can contribute to a global society. This is accomplished by anticipating and meeting the expectations of a marketplace that is moving faster and in ways that we still have yet to imagine. The team at Becker knows that higher education needs to learn a thing or two — to be flexible and to discover new and creative ways to give adults what they need most: to land jobs and advance careers.

Becker College serves more than 1,700 students from 18 states and 12 countries and offers 27 diverse, first-quality degree programs that launch careers, from Nursing to Equine Management, and a variety of adult learning options. With campuses in Worcester and Leicester, Becker traces its history to 1784 and has more than 22,000 alumni. For more information, visit www.becker.edu.

Informative SEPAC meeting with speaker Tuesday

Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Counsel (SEPAC) is pleased to host "Consumer's Guide to NeuroPsychological Evaluations" presented by Dr. Tim Martin. Martin is a partner and serves as the Associate Director and the Evaluation Services Program Director at Child & Family Psychological Services, Inc.

The meeting will be held at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, Jan. 10th, at 7 pm. Please feel free to gather with refreshments and speak with the SEPAC board. Dr. Martin will begin his presentation at 7:30 p.m.

"Often children with special needs are referred for neuropsychological assessment, and the process is not always well understood and can be overwhelming. This workshop will walk families through the entire process from referral to final report and explain some of the mysteries and details involved in the assessment process. The workshop will also include discussion of issues related to costs, retesting, how it differs from school or CORE testing, what children should expect, what parents should expect, and how to review and utilize a report effectively," states Martin.

Martin received his Doctorate in Clinical Psychology from Suffolk University and completed pre-doctoral and post-doctoral fellowships at the Yale University School of Medicine Child Study Center. His research has focused on the impact of neuropsychological and psychosocial factors on academic achievement. He is an Affiliate Faculty member of the Suffolk University Psychology Department. He practices Child Clinical Psychology and Pediatric Neuropsychology. Prior to pursuing a career in Clinical Psychology, Martin was a special education teacher working directly with children experiencing traumatic brain injuries, autism, and other neurodevelopmental disorders.

LIFE AT CHS

Busy, busy, busy, busy!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

The Junior-Senior Semiformal is coming up on January 27th. The Student Council is in the process of planning the dance now, and it's guaranteed to be a good time.

That was one of the fastest winter breaks I have ever experienced. Luckily, we had Monday off so we only had a four-day week this week, and in two weeks, we have a four-day weekend! I hope everybody had a wonderful vacation, and spent time with friends and loved ones over the holidays — whether you went to New York, California, Mexico, or just stayed here in Cohasset. Seniors: I hope you finished (or ALMOST finished) all of you apps! What a relief.

On Tuesday, the regular 90-minute periods seemed to be more like 3-days long, each class moving by at the speed of molasses. Not used to getting up early, the cold, or paying attention, most students were groggy and uninterested in school. Oh, well — at least it was already Tuesday. That night, the girls' basketball team defeated Rockland on their home court. The boys, on the other hand, lost to Rockland at home. Better luck next time! The boys swim team won their first meet of the season — congrats, swimmers.

Wednesday marked a home wrestling meet versus Norwell and a debate matchup in Scituate. On Thursday, the girls' basketball team played Hanover. For results, see the sports page.

Peer Leaders went into the Middle School today. Cyber-bullying was discussed with eighth graders, and judgements and stereotypes with the younger kids. Later today, stop by the boy's ice hockey game against Quincy High School at 9:30 pm.

The Junior-Senior Semiformal is coming up on January 27th. The Student Council is in the process of planning the dance now, and it's guaranteed to be a good time. Buy your tickets soon. Frosh and sophomores: just hope that an upperclassmen will invite you so you will be lucky enough to attend such an amazing event to raise money for the senior class!

In other news, the cafeteria recently implemented a new system for buying lunches. Albeit excessively confusing and chaotic at first, the program is working quite well now. Instead of paying with cash, students are required to bring their ID cards or enter their student identification number in order to purchase food in the cafeteria. Parents will be able to make online payments and can even view their child's purchases by creating an account on www.nutrikids.com! Pretty cool, but that means no more lunches consisting of two bags of cookies, juice, and a bag of Smartfood. Sorry – mom's watching!

Seniors, if you have still yet to turn in your yearbook write-ups, do so AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. They are LONG overdue. Parents, the deadline for your ads is 1/31/12. Any other pictures must be submitted to the yearbook by 2/1/12. Deadlines, links for picture uploads, and other information can be found on the 2012 Yearbook School Fusion Page.

Make sure to buy Athletic Spirit merchandise! Who can resist purchasing a "C" flag for $50, or a Cohasset Snuggie blanket for $25? Cohasset Stadium blankets are also on sale for $20. Any questions? Email rford@cohassetk12.org.

Well, the first week back from vacation is finally over! Have a wonderful, safe weekend and I'll see you next week, Cohasset.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 17, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your batteries should be fully recharged by now, making you more than eager to get back into the swing of things full time. Try to stay focused so that you don't dissipate your energies.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to charge straight ahead into your new responsibilities. But you'll have to paw the ground a little longer, until a surprise complication is worked out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Rival factions are pressuring you to take a stand favoring one side or the other. But this isn't the time to play judge. Bow out as gracefully as possible, without committing yourself to any position.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Reassure a longtime, trusted confidante that you appreciate his or her words of advice. But at this time, you need to act on what you perceive to be your own sense of self-interest.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You need to let your warm Leonine heart fire up that new relationship if you hope to see it move from the "just friends" level to one that will be as romantic as you could hope for.

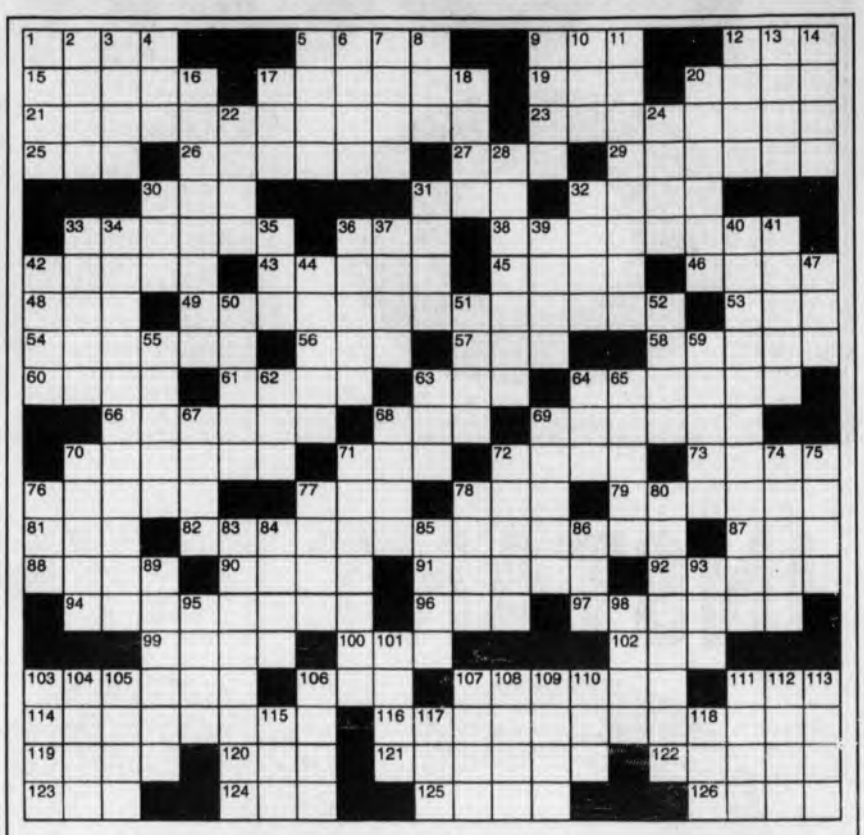
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There's still time to repair a misunderstanding with an honest explanation and a heartfelt apology. The sooner you do, the sooner you can get on with other matters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect a temporary setback as you progress toward your goal. Use this time to re-examine your plans and see where you might need to make some significant changes.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some missteps are revealed as the cause of current problems in a personal or professional partnership. Make the necessary adjustments and then move on.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Jupiter's influence helps you work through a pesky problem, allowing your naturally jovial attitude to re-emerge stronger than ever. Enjoy your success.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Set aside your usual reluctance to change, and consider reassessing your financial situation so that you can build on its strengths and minimize its weaknesses.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some recently acquired information helps open up a dark part of the past. Resolve to put what you've learned to good use. Travel plans continue to be favored.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Act on your own keen instincts. Your strong Piscean backbone will support you as someone attempts to pressure you into a decision you're not ready to make.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

NEWS UPDATE

Real estate activity in Norfolk County

There were 8,272 new Norfolk County mortgages during this year's first quarter, down 23 percent from last year's figures. Total mortgage value stood at $3.3 million compared to 2010's $4 million.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Norfolk County for the first quarter of the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 2011. The first quarter was marked by an upswing in sales activity with little mobility seen in terms of average sale prices.

First quarter sales volume reached 1.3 billion this year, a promising 13 percent increase from 2010's first quarter. Integral to this increase is the number of land transfers that took place in Norfolk County from July through the end of September. During this timeframe 3,762 deeds were recorded, an 8 percent increase from last year. There were 2,332 deeds recorded that reflected greater than nominal consideration. This total translates to a 16 percent increase from last year's total. Despite these positive signs of real estate activity the average sale price of deeds over $1,000, both residential and commercial properties, peaked at $564,445, not quite level with last year's average of $582,055.

Mortgage activity for the first quarter revealed signs of slowing down from last year's flurry, which was precipitated by historically low interest rates. There were 8,272 new Norfolk County mortgages during this year's first quarter, down 23 percent from last year's figures. Total mortgage value stood at $3.3 million compared to 2010's $4 million. It is important to note that this total mortgage value amount does not necessarily represent the true increase in indebtedness as some mortgages may be recorded multiple times against different parcels of land, are refinances simply replacing existing debt, or are recorded to secure equity credit lines which may not be drawn to their capacity.

Pertaining to existing Norfolk County mortgages, the first quarter saw a 23 percent decrease from last year in the number of homes lost to foreclosure. During this same timeframe in Norfolk County the foreclosure process was commenced with the recording of 255 Notice to Foreclose Mortgages. While the Associated Press recently reported a spike nationally in foreclosure notices, Norfolk County's numbers have remained relatively constant through three quarters. Although not affording redress against mortgage contracts, Declarations of Homestead are effective in protecting the equity in one's home from certain other types of claims and actions. During this year's first fiscal quarter Norfolk County residents took advantage of the state's new Homestead Law and recorded 3,121 Declarations of Homestead, 30 percent more than last year.

Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. Complementing the Registry's efforts to expand and increase the accessibility of land records the Registry now accepts electronically transmitted documents. E-filing allows a real estate professional from not only Norfolk County but from across the country to send and record documents within minutes at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds.

To learn more about this technology and/or the other services offered by Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call the customer service department at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Cable studio ready to launch

Community TV seeks studio director

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"It's been a long time coming," said Cohasset Community TV director and Cable Advisory Committee chair Pat Martin.

Cohasset's cable TV studio had its first live broadcast on Tuesday night since recent improvements were made to the system. Martin, along with committee secretary James Morrison and attorney Robert Hillman, told the board that following work done by Comcast and Single Source, the audio and signal were clear. Selectman Paul Carlson also serves on the committee as treasurer.

The cable committee had nothing but good news to report to the board. After hoping to launch back in April with a PSO telethon that failed due to technical difficulties, the cable studio's official launch has been delayed time and again.

Now, Cohasset TV is poised to hire a studio director — resumes are currently under review, said Martin — and hold an open house in the near future.

Martin said she envisions balloons at the open house, during which the community will be invited to tour the studio.

The community will not

Public hearing in Hingham is Feb. 8

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Citizen input on potential MBTA service cutbacks and other cost-cutting measures is key to the hearing process surrounding the T's recent proposals.

In response to the MBTA's proposed fare hike and service cut plan, which includes the elimination of the entire commuter boat subsidy and cancellation of weekend commuter rail service, Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, have arranged for a public hearing for concerned citizens to make their voices heard.

The hearing is scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 8, from 6 to 8 p.m., at Hingham Town Hall in the Central Meeting Room. The MBTA will hold another 19 meetings across the state to hear from residents concerning these proposals. Hedlund is a ranking member of the Joint Committee on Transportation.

The cutbacks and rate increases are part of an attempt to close a projected $161 million Fiscal 2013 budget gap.

"Citizens need to know that this is the start of a public hearing process that is very important," Bradley said in a telephone interview. "Bob Hedlund and I are working in a non-partisan fashion to

Avalon to pay $17,000

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Last week, the Mariner reported that Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. agreed to pay Cohasset's Conservation Commission $17,000 to maintain the town's 15 rain gardens.

A representative from Avalon attended the ConCom's Thursday, Jan. 5 meeting, during which the commission voted to accept these funds.

Whether the money will go into a general fund or a special account for the rain gardens has yet to be determined. The Commission is also discussing who will maintain the rain gardens from now on. While Avalon is footing the bill, the actual maintenance of the structures will be under local control, according to ConCom chairman David Farrag.

The Commission, which originally sought to fine Avalon $25,000 for committing "egregious violations" against the town's wetlands bylaw during construction of the luxury apartments, is glad to see the matter resolved.

"It's certainly a win-win for the town," said Farrag. "It's going to benefit the town and environment both to make sure the rain gardens are kept up."

Both Farrag and commissioner Jack Creighton said that while they're glad Avalon has "stepped up to the plate" by agreeing to donate these funds, it's the ConCom's job to hold big developers like Avalon accountable when the environment is negatively impacted.

"If people are egregious, there should be consequences for that," said Creighton. "Large developers should be held accountable, while [for] local townspeople, we should make the burden reasonable and achievable, understandable and possible, and make it easy to do the environmentally-correct thing."

Farrag also said that the Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the Citizen of the Year. Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

Selectmen approve Eagle Scout project

An Eagle Scout project presented to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night was unanimously approved.

Cohasset High School sophomore and Boy Scout Derek Benson asked the board to approve his project to create two signposts or kiosks around Straits Pond that would display the plant and local wildlife of the surrounding area.

Benson, who was approached to take on the project by Richard Avery of the Straits Pond Watershed Association, hopes to complete the project this summer and earn the rank of Eagle Scout.

POLICE BEAT

ID theft cases on the rise

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 70-year-old Cohasset man went to the police station last week to report unauthorized purchases on his Visa card that totaled $9,900, police said. He notified his credit card company and the credit bureaus were alerted, police said. The resident was provided an identity theft packet which he filled out and returned later that week.

Naked couple

A dog walker in the parking lot at Whitney Woods (across from Stop & Shop) called police at 2:58 p.m., last Wednesday (Jan. 4), after spotting a naked couple in a 2002 Nissan Altima attempting to cover themselves with a blanket. It appeared they were involved in a sexual act, police said. The man and woman, who are both 35 and live in Scituate, had arrived in separate cars that were parked at an angle.

As the couple saw police approaching, they got dressed. They were told to leave the area.

Break-ins

Police responded to a report of a break-in to a home on upper King Street on Tuesday (Jan. 3) after the homeowner called 911 reporting that her back door had been kicked in and her jewelry box was on the floor. She discovered the break-in when she returned home at 4:19 p.m.; grabbed her portable phone and ran outside to call police. It was unclear if the suspects were still inside, police said.

K-9 Officer Patrick Reardon and Erik responded. Erik checked the house and tracked the suspects through the woods to Schofield Road where police believe the burglars had a car waiting and had taken off. Police said multiple items of jewelry were taken with a value of about $5,000.

On Wednesday (Jan. 4) at 3 p.m. a resident from Forest Avenue called about her house being broken into. She had arrived home to find the door forced open and multiple pieces of jewelry and an iPad were missing.

Cohasset detectives working with their counterparts in Marshfield and Scituate gathered evidence and conducted interviews leading to the arrests of several suspects believed responsible for three recent break-ins in Cohasset (including one on Beechwood Street two weeks ago and those detailed here) and similar crimes in other towns.

As part of the investigation area pawnshops were notified and asked to put a hold on any jewelry that was pawned until police could determine if it had been stolen.

Dispute

A landlord-tenant dispute resulted in an arrest and a summons for the tenant and landlord, respectively, last week, police said. Police were called to the house by the landlord, who is trying to evict his tenant, an investigation during that call determined that the tenant, who is 51, had an outstanding warrant for his arrest. He was arrested on the warrant.

The landlord was later issued a summons for attaching plates and illegally moving a car after he allegedly called a tow company to have his tenant's car, a 1998 Ford Explorer, towed to the library parking lot where it was abandoned. Police said he attached the plates from his own car, put them on the Explorer, and then removed them after the Explorer was towed.

The plates on the Explorer had been revoked, police said.

OUI arrest

A 25-year-old Scituate man is facing a drunken driving charge after he apparently fell asleep at the wheel and rolled into a guardrail at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street at about 12:51 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 7). Officers woke the driver up and observed he was displaying the signs and symptoms of intoxication. He failed a series of field sobriety tests and was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (first offense). He was arraigned on the charge Monday.

MV crash

Police had several calls about a car crash at 3:18 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 7) on Pleasant Street. Witnesses said they saw teens running from the 2004 Nissan Pathfinder that had hit a tree. When police arrived the vehicle was empty with the keys inside. Police traced the car to an address on upper King Street.

A 21-year-old at the King Street residence called police shortly after the accident to report that his mother's car had been stolen out of the driveway. The accident and reported car theft are under investigation, police said.

Intoxicated

A 22-year-old man found roaming around the Highland Avenue area at 3:36 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 7) was apparently intoxicated and was taken home to his parents, police said. He was not identified by witnesses as having being involved in the accident on Pleasant Street but had likely been at a house party, police said.

Vandalism

Police responded to a report of vandalism at 4:34 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 7). The owner of Cohasset Plaza reported damage to the Feng Shui sign at the corner of Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Sohier Street.

Police found a brick that had apparently been thrown through the sign.

Leaving scene

A 56-year-old Hingham man is being summonsed to court for leaving the scene of an accident after he apparently hit a mailbox on Jerusalem Road and kept going, police said. Police said a caller who was driving behind the 2003 Chevrolet Malibu hnd witnessed the incident. The caller provided a plate number. Investigation revealed that Hull police stopped the car and arrested the man, charging him with operating under the influence of alcohol. Cohasset police matched a piece of the broken mirror from the Malibu found where the mailbox was damaged to the Hingham man's car.

He is being summonsed on Cohasset charges of leaving the scene of an accident and failure to stay in marked lanes.

Cupcakegate: TSA issues statement

Cohasset cupcake continues to make headlines

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

A Cohasset cupcake caused a national uproar after being confiscated by a TSA agent in Las Vegas International Airport over the holidays.

Rebecca Hains, a Salem State professor and Peabody resident, was trying to travel back to Boston with a cupcake in a jar but was stopped by a TSA agent who claimed the frosting was "too gel-like" to clear security.

Wicked Local Cupcakes, the Cohasset bakery that created the baked good, has enjoyed a boom in business following the incident. The cupcake flavor Hains was traveling with was formerly called "National Velvet" — the name has since been changed to "National Security Velvet."

The story has been reported nationally over the past few weeks, and the TSA finally issued a statement on the matter on Tuesday, Jan. 10.

The TSA's Bob Burns wrote on the official blog that the cupcake in question was not "your everyday, run-of-the-mill cupcake," but rather a cupcake in a jar. This, apparently, made all the difference in the decision to ban the cupcake from taking flight.

While most cakes and baked goods are allowed in carry-on luggage, the TSA blog explains, icing falls under the "gel" category, and only so much gel is allowed onboard. Liquids and gels in general are not allowed to exceed 3.4 ounces in a container. Enacted by the TSA in 2006, the 3-1-1 policy limits the amount of liquids allowed on a plane in order to better screen for explosive devices. Consolidating liquid items into one quart-sized bag and X-raying them separately allows TSA agents to screen items more quickly.

This "newfangled, modern take on a cupcake" did not adhere to the 3-1-1 guidelines, according to the Burns. While the TSA agent in Boston's Logan Airport told Hains that her jarred cupcake "looked delicious" and let her go, the agent in Vegas had an entirely different take. It's up to the individual agent's discretion, the TSA says.

This "newfangled, modern take on a cupcake" did not adhere to the 3-1-1 guidelines, according to the Burns.

"Every officer wants to finish their shift and go home with the peace of mind that they kept potential threats off of airplanes," Burns wrote. "They're not thinking about whether their decisions will go viral on the internet — they're thinking about keeping bombs off of planes. This incident may seem like a silly move to many of our critics, but when we can't be exactly sure of what something is, every officer has the discretion to not allow it on the plane. This is done purely for the safety of everyone traveling."

While Hains, a communications professor, told Boston's Channel 5 News that this incident was less about public safety and more about infringing on the individual's constitutional rights, the TSA stands by their agent's decision.

And if you decide to bring your own tasty treats onboard, warned Burns, you should expect additional screening and the possibility that your snack may not clear security.

EMPLOYEE OF THE YEAR

Coughlin honors finance dept.

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town Manager Mike Coughlin named Cohasset's town "employee of the year" while he was vacationing in Hawaii over the holidays. Rather than single out one staffer, however, Coughlin chose to recognize the entire finance department during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

Coughlin told the board the finance department enabled "Team Cohasset" to end the year on a high note, meeting all of the necessary deadlines to submit the town's balance sheet to the Department of Revenue (DOR), which enabled the town to set the tax rate and have new growth certified.

Coughlin said that having new growth certified at $693,000 by the DOR "speaks volumes of the professionalism of the [finance] department."

These tasks were especially daunting due to the upheaval in the finance department — with Cohasset's town accountant/finance director of nine months, John Stanbrook, leaving his post in October before the strident deadlines had been met. The department is also working to implement Soft Right, a new accounting software system. Meanwhile, Coughlin appointed Mary Gallagher, Scituate's town accountant of 20 years, to the position of finance director; Gallagher will start her new position on Tuesday, Jan. 17.

"The finance team did the impossible. No one thought it could be done; they did one heck of a job."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

Consultants Eric Kinsherf and Dan Sullivan have also been on hand to assist the finance department. Coughlin shared at a previous selectmen's meeting that the two consultants pulled an "old-fashioned college all-nighter" to meet the DOR deadline to submit the balance sheet in November.

"The finance team did the impossible," Coughlin told the board Tuesday. "No one thought it could be done; they did one heck of a job."

Coughlin listed the names of everyone being honored as an "employee of the year." The finance team includes: former finance director Stanbrook; interim finance director Kinsherf; interim treasurer/collector Sullivan; Mary Quill, Deputy Assessor; Jane Henderson, Assistant Town Accountant; Sandy Parnell and Linda Litchfield, both acting as assistant treasurer/collector; Bonnie Cordeiro, assistant to the treasurer/collector and Dianne Hindley, administrative assistant of the Sewer Commission, for her help with the sewer capital account.

Coughlin asked Quill as the senior financial officer present at Tuesday's meeting to accept the award on behalf of the rest of the department. Quill accepted a commendation certificate alongside Litchfield, Cordeiro and Hindley.

More about the performers
■ Having first worked together as students at the New England Conservatory, Orlando Cela and Aaron Larget-Caplan teamed up again in 2009 as Duo Diavolo. "Plus" Orlando say, "I was nostalgic for my country of birth, Venezuela, and Aaron was interested bringing in the Venezuelan cuatro into our duo."

MLK event postponed

The annual breakfast honoring the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., which has historically been held at St. Stephen's and sponsored by the Cohasset clergy and Cohasset Diversity Committee for the past decade, will not take place this year.

Instead, the celebration of Dr. King's life and message will take place during Black History Month: on Thursday, Feb. 23, a special forum will be held in the Cohasset Library meeting room from 7 to 9 p.m.

The topic of the night is "The Boston Busing/Desegregation Project for Truth, Learning and Change," sponsored by the Union of Minority Neighborhoods. Speaking that night is the project's coordinator, Donna Bevins.

"The project is part of a restorative justice movement around historical conflicts," said Connie Afshar, chair of the Diversity Committee. The Busing/Desegregation Project seeks to "understand the lingering effects of communities and individuals involved" with public school and busing segregation in Boston.

Afshar said that the history of segregation has left an "open wound" in the Boston public school system. "It's very apparent to people active in anti-racism work in Boston."

The upcoming forum will shine a light on this topic while also celebrating Dr. King's legacy.

Look for more information on this event over the next few weeks in the Mariner.

only be invited to check out the new studio, Martin told the board: "We're encouraging folks in the community to come in, get trained, and produce their own content."

Morrison added, "We want to make this a community resource and make it available to people to release their creativity."

During Monday night's cable committee meeting, the group said that they hope to have a large variety of skill-levels and ages producing content at the studio.

Interested folks can tap into their creativity either in-studio or out, Martin explained; Cohasset Community TV will have small, portable video cameras available for loan for those who want to record on the go, such as at a sporting event. The only caveat, said Martin, is that sports games will not be broadcasted live this way. The corporation was advised to get several small cameras rather than one large field kit, Martin told the board.

"You'll still get to see the games, just not live," Martin said.

The goal is to, eventually, broadcast content 24 hours a day, seven days a week, the committee explained.

Carlson weighed in, "Some towns have non-stop local programming. With all the creativity in Cohasset," Cohasset Community TV is hoping to do the same.

"We're encouraging folks in the community to come in, get trained, and produce their own content."
Pat Martin, Cohasset Community TV

Some of this 24-hour content will include public service announcements, community bulletin boards, and emergency information.

The cable committee also promised the selectmen brand-new equipment in their meeting room to improve their weekly broadcast. This will include new microphones, a new monitor, and a plug-in computer for PowerPoint presentations and overheads.

While the date for the studio's open house has yet to be set, Cohasset Community TV is well on its way to hiring a studio director. The cable committee is meeting today to review resumes and select the best candidates to interview.

Martin said during Monday night's meeting, "We're looking for someone who can do community outreach and education, has the technical skills and can create content."

She added that it should be noted in the job description that this is not a nine to five job. The studio director must be prepared to work afternoons, nights and/or weekends.

Once the director is hired and the studio is set up to create programming, Cohasset Community TV will be one step closer to its official launch.

"There are lots of possibilities," Martin told the selectmen on Tuesday. "Getting the studio open is the first big push... We hope when we flip the switch, it runs this time."

Viewers are picking up the tab for the cost of equipment, the director and cable-related needs of the community, through a surcharge on their cable-TV bills.

VFW to issue monthly newsletter

The VFW Post voted recently to begin to develop a monthly newsletter, to be sent out to members of all services and their dependents who currently reside in Cohasset.

The purpose of our newsletter is to inform and find a way to reach out to families and to invite them to communicate to any member of the Post, who they are, a local mailing address, members of their families who are enrolled in our various local schools.

Becoming a member is not a priority, because we simply want to support our veterans through conversation, and listening and camaraderie.

To reach us is easy, just call: Commander Ralph Perroncello at 781-383-0879; Vice Commander Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079; or Adjunct Ed Graham at 781-383-9324; or email esgraham34@aol.com.

Added Creighton, "This is what the Conservation Commission should be doing."

Farrag said that the ConCom plans to work with the Town Manager and the Operations Department, consisting of town engineers Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber, to determine where the funds will go once Avalon writes the check, and how the rain gardens will be maintained moving forward.

"It's certainly a win-win for the town. It's going to benefit the town and environment both to make sure the rain gardens are kept up."

Don't Be A Skeptic!

By Elizabeth Johnson

January is tough. Everyone is talking about Resolutions and Weight Loss and Starting Over. It's easy to be skeptical and think, "Half those people quit by March, anyway." "The gyms are too crowded now - why should I go?" "I had the same resolution last year and it didn't work."

Being skeptical won't get you the results you want. What will work is planning followed by action with the right amount of support. Getting in shape–and STAYING in shape is important to you, and so are all the benefits that go along with it. Feeling attractive...and sexy again... shopping for a new size, and looking and feeling like you always dreamed about. At Get In Shape For Women, we're here to help! With the steps and support to make it work.

By having a trainer who's with you every step of the way, we help you reach your goal using these four basic components.

Weight Training. To develop muscle tone.

Cardio. To burn fat and calories.

Nutrition. To help you customize a meal plan that works for you. And we give you a "Free Day" each week so you can live a little and still get fantastic results.

And most importantly, accountability. You need to be held accountable by someone other than yourself. We schedule your workouts, call you if you don't show up and check your weight and body fat every two weeks. Whether you need to lose 100 lbs or the same 10 lbs for the 10th and FINAL time, Get In Shape For Women could be the program for you.

"I am a 42 year old working mother of 10 year old twins, and I finally decided it was time to lose the 20+ pounds that I had not yet lost since being pregnant 10+ years ago. Get In Shape For Women not only helped me reach my goal, but exceeded it. I lost 30 pounds and went from a size 12 to a size 4. I have not felt and looked better since my mid 20s. Thanks Get In Shape!"

K-9 graduation party at Mr. Dooley's

On Monday evening, Jan. 9th, supporters of the new Cohasset Police K-9 unit and members of the Cohasset Police Department gathered at Mr. Dooley's Pub to celebrate the completion of K-9 Officer Patrick Reardon and his partner Erik's initial 16-week K-9 Patrol training program.

The event was hosted by the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, which assisted the Cohasset Police Department in securing the funds necessary to launch the K-9 program. The Foundation will continue to provide funding for the K-9 going forward. A total of nearly $15,000 was raised this past summer to cover the initial cost of purchasing Erik, outfitting the police cruiser and providing the K-9 specific supplies needed. The remainder of the start-up items such as outfitting the cruiser, dog food, fencing and the like were all donated.

Trish Morse, president of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation, and K-9 Officer Patrick Reardon.

"So many people believe in this program and understand the value that a K-9 unit can bring to the community."

"Its gratifying to see how quickly this has come together, and great to know that Erik and Officer Reardon are now on the job" said Cohasset Working Dog Foundation president, Trish Morse. "So many people believe in this program and understand the value that a K-9 unit can bring to the community. It was great to see such a nice crowd come out and wish Erik and Officer Reardon on a safe and successful career together."

Morse estimates that the expected annual costs to outfit and maintain the K-9 Unit will be in the neighborhood of about $5,000 per year. The Foundation will hold a fundraising gala on Friday, March 9th at Atlantica to support this ongoing effort.

The K-9 training the pair completed last Friday is part of a program offered free of charge to area police departments through the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department and its K-9 trainer, Ken Ballinger. Erik was trained in tracking, area searches and article and evidence searches. In addition to daily training exercises and twice-monthly in-service training with Ballinger, they will return for an additional 8-10 week narcotics training course sometime in 2012.

Currently, Erik can be used to track criminals fleeing from a crime scene, locate missing persons and is also training to find evidence of a crime like weapons, IDs or jewelry that a thief may have dropped while fleeing.

"He is a beautiful dog with a very sweet face, but its clear that he is a very fast learner and knows exactly what his job is," says Morse, who spent a day observing the team in training last month in Plymouth.

Erik lives with Officer Reardon and his wife Heather and has settled in with the family like a normal dog. "He gets along great with my wife and other two dogs" says Reardon. "He knows the difference between home and work."

Officer Patrick Reardon and his wife Heather accept a cake at Mr. Dooley's.

K-9 Officer Pat Reardon accepts a canvas-mounted photo of him and Erik.

'Sunday AuthorTalks'— Spirited Fiction Forum

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

A mix of humor and candor set the tone for last week's "Sunday AuthorTalks" at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library where authors Brunonia Barry, Randy Susan Meyers, and Ilie Ruby spoke in a panel format to an audience of 65 people.

Lynne Degiacomo's able skills as moderator created a warm, convivial atmosphere as she engaged the writers in spirited discussion. Her questions provoked refreshingly honest responses about concepts such as the value of truth in fiction and a writer's struggle to find it, the power of setting as a character, and elements the authors valued most about the fiction form.

It was an hour punctuated by frequent laughter and weighty reflection — and the pearls of insight that linked it all together gave the audience much to think about. A wine and cheese reception followed the event where the authors signed books and chatted informally with audience members.

Next month's "Sunday AuthorTalks" on February 12, at 4 p.m., will also feature a fiction writer. Jennifer Haigh will speak about her latest novel, Faith. A wine and cheese reception will follow the event. Tickets are free but seating is limited, so either pick up your ticket at the library or call the library to reserve a seat—383-1348, ext. 1.

"Sunday AuthorTalks" is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club; wine at the reception is donated by A Taste of Wine and Spirits located at the Stop and Shop Plaza.

About 65 people filled the room for the panel discussion.

Solar panels for landfill are possible

Alt. Energy Committee plans to proceed with RFP

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Caristi-MacDonald believes the situation has been handled legally and should not be a "deal-breaker for the RFP."

The quest to harness solar power in Cohasset is gaining ground.

The town's Alternative Energy Committee is slowly but surely taking steps forward in their plan to see solar panels installed on the town landfill at Cedar Street. The group is also working with the School Committee to get a solar array on the roof of the Middle-High School.

However, while the Alt. Energy Committee has been working with town engineer Tom Gruber on an RFP (request for proposals) to send out to potential solar panel vendors, the Board of Health uncovered an issue with the landfill that could prove problematic for the project.

During a recent meeting, the Board of Health addressed the issue of missing paperwork proving that the landfill at Cedar Street was deemed officially closed by the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) in the late 90s. The board was concerned that this missing documentation could affect the Alternative Energy Committee's plan to go out for bid for a solar power vendor to install a solar array on top of the capped landfill. Unless the landfill has been deemed officially closed, solar panels could not be constructed due to dangerous methane levels.

The matter made its way to Monday night's Alt. Energy meeting, and the committee does not seem all that concerned.

"It's unclear at this time whether the lost certificate will present a problem for the project," committee member Marie Caristi-MacDonald wrote in an email to the Mariner. "It may have no impact whatsoever, as the site was legally capped and is monitored yearly by the DEP."

Caristi-MacDonald added that Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik told her that he believed the document was misplaced when the DEP transferred files from Boston to their southeast regional office in Lakeville. She also explained the DEP tends to be more stringent about a clay cap versus a membrane — Cohasset's landfill is the latter.

Godzik said in a phone call that when the landfill was capped, the DEP sent a letter detailing technical deficiencies; what's missing is the response to that letter, and an official closure certification from the DEP.

Since both the Board of Health and the state monitor the landfill, and a report is generated each year, Caristi-MacDonald believes the situation has been handled legally and should not be a "deal-breaker for the RFP."

Right now, the Alt. Energy Committee is still in the early stages of their project, finalizing their list of potential bidders and working with Gruber, who is in Florida for the winter, on the RFP. MacDonald said Gruber is still working with the committee "electronically" from his vacation home.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

We want to hear from you

The Cohasset Mariner is planning a new weekly feature: a section that covers environmental news, tips and initiatives happening around town.

Whether you're a business owner, town official, board member or avid recycler, we want to hear from you: what you're doing to go green, or greener; what you think Cohasset could be doing; things you've noticed that the town is doing right.

It is important to note that Cohasset is not an official, state-designated "Green Community," but it could be! With the possible installation of solar panels on our capped landfill and Middle-High School roof, the town is going greener than ever before.

But for all of the positive steps we've taken, there is always more we can do. Send your thoughts, observations and tips to: Erin Dale, Reporter, edale@wickedlocal.com or call 781-741-2935.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION

CPC funds sought for church windows

But clock project has to be separate

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

In a word: interesting.

That would be the best way to wrap up the discussion of a proposal that is before the Community Preservation Committee that will likely end up before this spring's annual Town Meeting.

First Parish Church is seeking funds to restore the windows of the historic meetinghouse. They have also requested money to restore the four faces of the clock on the church steeple.

It is no secret that Cohasset, with its classic Town Common, is perhaps one of the most quintessential New England towns with its history firmly rooted in the colonial era. A throwback to those times is the actual ownership of the meetinghouse. First Parish owns the 1747 church structure but the town owns and maintains the clock.

For more than 70 years, the meetinghouse was used for social, civic and religious purposes. When the state withdrew support for all churches, the meetinghouse became a Unitarian Church in 1820, according to the parish's application for preservation funding.

Over concerns about ownership and state procurement law, the restoration proposal will have to be split into two projects, officials said at Monday's CPC meeting. The church will seek CPC monies for the windows' project but the town would have to request CPC funds to restore and paint the clock faces.

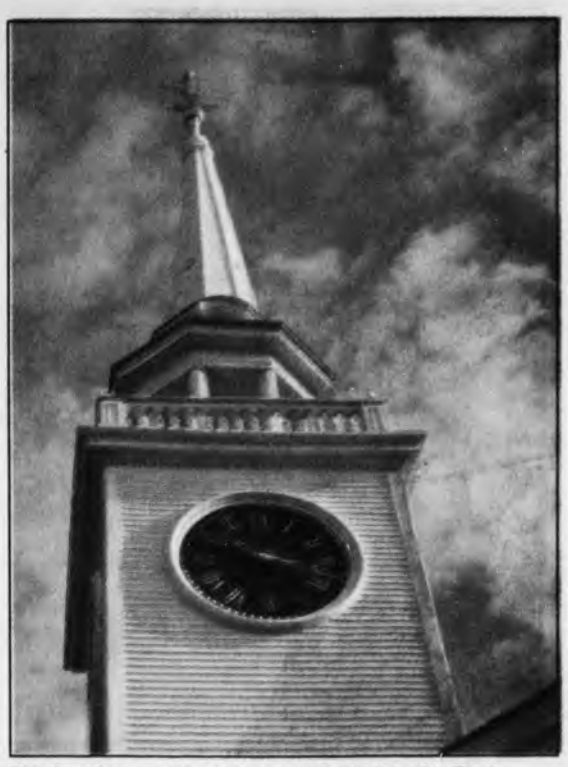
The restoration of the windows at an estimated cost of $59,300 is based on a proposal from Westmill Preservation Services (which restored the Wilson House and Maritime Museum in the village) that would include complete restoration of the sashes for the building's 33 windows, many of which are original dating back some 264 years. First Parish is seeking money for that part of the project but the parish would cover the cost of painting and repairing damaged portions of the building estimated at $42,000. Restoration of the four clock faces is estimated at $10,200 based on a proposal from the Burgess Company. Plans are to paint the building and restore the clock faces at the same time.

CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti said there was no question that the church has historical significance and would not be a hard project to defend before Town Meeting. "It is on the town seal and you cannot get more historic than that," he said.

However, Selectman Leland Jenkins, who is also a member of the CPC, raised a cautionary flag. He expressed concern that agreeing to use CPC funds for the windows might open the floodgates for other churches to apply for funds. Jenkins was the lone member to vote not to support the windows' project. He also said in his view the windows constituted a repair maintenance project not restoration. He said that windows were more visual than structural.

CPC member Susan Hoadley, a local architect, said if the windows fail ultimately the building fails. She described the windows as a critical part of the envelop of the building.

Project proponent Ronnie McMorris pointed out that the meetinghouse is indeed historic and its restoration falls within the purview of the Community Preservation Act. McMorris and fellow parishioner, Arthur Myles, presented the proposal to the CPC on Monday night.



Kathy O'Malley, president of the Cohasset Historical Society, which has given the proposal its blessing, noted that the meetinghouse sits in a National Register Historic District (as does St. Stephen's and the Second Congregational Church). She said that fact alone would qualify it for preservation funding.

Rebecca Bates-McArthur, chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission, stated in a letter to the CPC that the commission supports the project, noting that the church is the focal point of the Cohasset Common Historic District.

Bonetti tried to put to rest Jenkins' concerns about using preservation funds for a church. He pointed out there was sufficient precedent as nearly two dozen church projects have used CPA funds, including projects in Bridgewater, Dennis, Easton, Nahant, Nantucket and North Andover. He also said that money cannot be denied simply because it is a church.

"It is one of those things where community interest reaches beyond just the uses," he said about preservation funding for churches and the separation of church and state. "I am sure we will get questions and someone will bring it up – but it is not a hard one to defend."

An impetus behind splitting the projects: clock faces and windows, is the state's Prevailing Wage Law. Towns must pay union wages even if the project does not involve union labor but private entities do not.

The four faces of the town-owned clock in the First Parish steeple need restoration as do the church windows. The two projects have to be separate because the town owns the clock. PHOTO/MARY FORD

However, the CPC agreed that point might be moot if the type of restoration required for the clock faces requires the kind of expertise and therefore, expense, that might put it beyond the union rate.

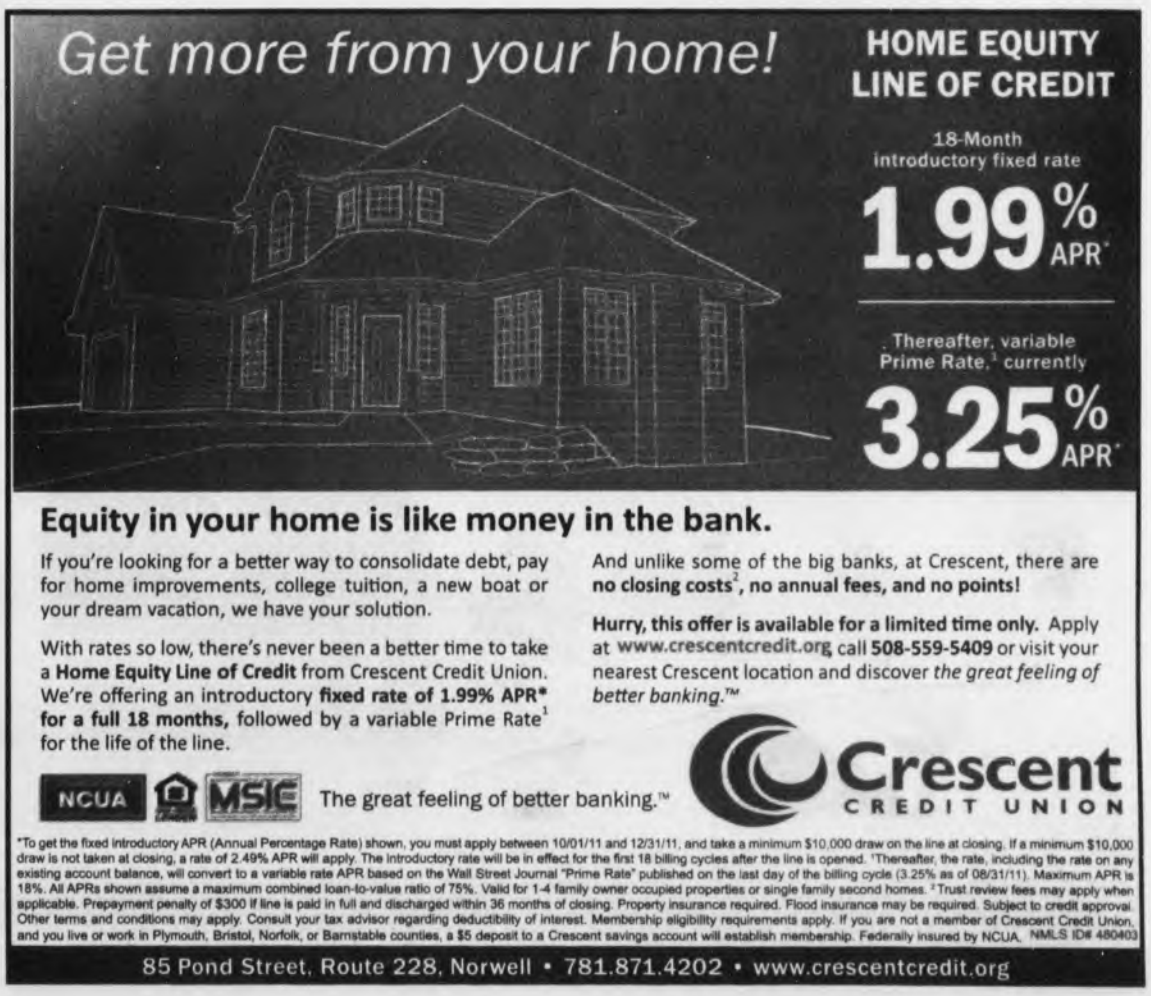
CPC member Hoadley has studied the windows and recommended that if any salvaged glass from other old buildings had to be used for the restoration that salvaged glass be put on just one of the windows that is not as visible and "patch and match" with the original glass for the other windows. She described the detail of the church as "exquisite" and said the way the sun catches the "beautiful wrinkly glass" was part of the charm.

"You should look at the whole project rather instead of just window to window," she said.

The CPC did suggest that the two projects ask for more money — $12,000 for the clock faces and $65,000 for the windows — to cover any potential overruns. The CPC, which would partner with First Parish in overseeing the project, "pays as you go" so any leftover monies would stay in the preservation fund for other potential projects.

The CPC voted their support (with Jenkins voting against) for the windows' project but put off supporting funds to restore the clock faces until they confer with Town Manager Mike Coughlin about how to proceed.

CPA funds



- The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.
- CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).
- The Community Preservation Committee reviews projects and makes recommendations to Town Meeting where voters have the final say.

Plans afoot for police/fire museum

Glenn Pratt, Merle Brown, and Fire Chief Robert Silvia approached the board with their plan to renovate the garage in the back of Town Hall to create a fire and police museum. Pratt is currently storing two old fire hand-tub pumpers in his garage that are owned by the Cohasset Historical Society. The museum would also house the bell from the old Beechwood Fire Station, along with police and fire memorabilia the public may want to donate. The plan is to ask the Community Preservation Committee for money to rework the building and have the building leased to the Historical Society. The museum would be staffed with volunteers.

Although the final plans will have to be approved by CPC and, later, a Town Meeting vote, the board voted to approve the initial concept. Pratt said that he hoped there would be enough information available on the renovation and zoning issues in time for Spring Town Meeting.

Kathy O'Malley of the Historical Society said that the Society would need to look into financing the museum down the road, but hopes that it will be "privately funded."

'TOUGH ACT TO FOLLOW'

Interim VSO appointed as McElroy retires

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Coughlin, along with Police Chief Mark DeLuca, announced Tuesday night that Sergeant Garrett Hunt, a Desert Storm veteran, would act as the interim VSO until a permanent is hired.

As of December 31, Joe McElroy ceased working as Cohasset's veterans' service officer. However, the veteran is still giving input to the selectmen and Town Manager Mike Coughlin, concerned about the future of the position, its budget, and training a permanent replacement.

McElroy came before the selectmen on Tuesday night armed with an annual report from last year, copies of VSO job descriptions from the town of Scituate, a copy of the advisory ruling for the appointment of a VSO in Cohasset. All of these documents were presented so that McElroy could express his concerns to the board and the town manager.

The VSO discussion was not on the night's original agenda; it was amended last-minute to accommodate McElroy, who said he was supposed to be on the agenda. Selectmen chair Ted Carr, who sets the agenda, was out sick Tuesday night. Acting chair Paul Carlson quickly made the change to give McElroy time to speak. Otherwise, McElroy said in a phone call Wednesday, the retired VSO would have spoken up during the public comment period.

McElroy told the Mariner that he has been trying to get on the selectmen's agenda since he announced his retirement back in June; Coughlin, who started his post as Town Manager in August, said in a phone call that he had told the board that he had plans for the VSO position. Coughlin has talked about regionalizing the position, sharing a VSO with Hull. Prior to leaving on a two-week vacation for the holidays, Coughlin had hoped to make an arrangement with Bill Leamy, Hull's VSO, to help Cohasset veterans in the interim. The plans fell through this week, Coughlin said, when he learned that Leamy had exceeded his retirement hours and could no longer work as a VSO.

Coughlin, along with Police Chief Mark DeLuca, announced Tuesday night that Sergeant Garrett Hunt, a Desert Storm veteran, would act as the interim VSO until a permanent is hired.

"Joe is a tough act to follow," said Chief DeLuca. "He's been dedicated and great for the town."

McElroy told the board that he believed he would still have to train Hunt to handle all of the state and federal paperwork.

Coughlin countered that as a JAG lawyer and Desert Storm vet himself, is prepared to step in if needed.

"I have performed interim veterans' services before," said Coughlin. "I am prepared to do it again."

Coughlin told the Mariner in a phone call Wednesday that he is a friend of the veterans because he is a veteran.

"I think this is the highest priority we have," Coughlin said of veterans' services. "I live, breathe and sleep veterans because I'm one of them."

Coughlin added that if he is needed to assist with VSO duties, he would make the time to do so. He said that while his office is often busy, he would always make time to see a veteran in need of assistance.

"I'm qualified to do it — it's not a big deal," Coughlin said.

It is a big deal to McElroy, who is upset over how the entire matter was handled.

Selectmen Diane Kennedy and Fred Koed both expressed surprise that the deadline to send a new VSO to training is coming up in only seven weeks, but they were just hearing about the issue now. McElroy said that he had been trying to come before them for months.

"We could have posted [the position] months ago," said Koed. "I feel like our hands are tied. We should have had this discussion three, four months ago."

Kennedy added that she felt "backed into a corner," and that she hoped they could "count on Joe to help us out."

She also echoed Koed's statement: "It would have been nice to have this conversation a couple months ago," and apologized to McElroy over the fact that he was not invited to a selectmen meeting sooner.

"Veterans and firefighters are my top priority," Kennedy said, adding that she meant no disrespect to the police.

Yet a police officer will be serving as the interim VSO. Coughlin also pointed out in his phone call that two new officers will be appointed next Tuesday, one of whom is an Iraq war vet.

Chief DeLuca vouched for Sergeant Hunt during the selectmen's meeting, saying he is ready and willing to serve as VSO. Hunt has decreased hours at the police department as he is recovering from an injury, DeLuca said.

Coughlin told the Mariner he believes "Sergeant Hunt will make an excellent interim service agent."

McElroy told the selectmen, "While I agree with Mark that Garrett Hunt is a great individual, I also cannot disguise my disappointment when I gave my notice seven months ago, looking for a seamless transition" to a new VSO. "That's not happening."

Coughlin told the board that he believes the permanent VSO should be their appointment going forward, whether they want to regionalize the position and share services with another town, or have their own agent in Cohasset.

The town manager also said that there are plans to have an office for the VSO in the new senior center that has yet to be built. McElroy stressed his desire for office space for both privacy and safety for the VSO; for the past few years, he has conducted business at his kitchen table, but that practice is "not advisable" — especially when many veterans have mental health problems.

Both Coughlin and McElroy agree that the new VSO should have his or her own office. They also seem to agree that improving the position, and continuing to give aid to local veterans, is crucial.

"If we don't help our veterans in distress, it has negative consequences to the community," Coughlin said.

Who is the top citizen?

See nomination form on page 10

Here at the Mariner, we invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset.

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

In keeping with a 19-year tradition recognizing an individual for outstanding service to the community or a special achievement — the Cohasset Mariner is now accepting nominations for the annual Citizen of the Year Award.

We invite our readers to take this opportunity to nominate a person who has made a significant contribution to Cohasset.

The deadline for nominations for the Citizen of the Year is 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 10. Please see the nomination form on page 10. The form may be photocopied. Letters of nomination are also accepted and should be mailed or sent by fax to The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham 02043. Our fax number is 781-741-2931. Letters of nomination by email to mford@wickedlocal.com are also welcome.

This is not a popularity contest. Following the close of nominations, a selection panel — after reviewing the names submitted by poring over the nomination letters and comments — will select the Citizen of the Year.

Nominees may be someone in elected office, a member of an appointed town committee, teacher or school administrator, clergy member, firefighter, police officer or other municipal worker. And the nominee may be a person in the business community, sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has freely given of his or her time and energy for a worthwhile Cohasset project or cause.

This year's recipient will be the19th person honored as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year, joining past recipients:

Gerard T. Keating, "Mr. Cohasset": for his more than half-century of contributions to the community, including serving as chairman of the Council on Aging, chairman of the school committee, president of the hockey boosters club, vice president of the Cohasset Historical Society, director of veterans services, and lector, eucharistic minister and usher at St. Anthony's Church.

Joseph D. Buckley, for his work behind the scenes helping seniors understand the complexities of the healthcare system and to access health benefits through SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), his service on the Council on Aging, and volunteer work over the years with the Boy Scouts, Little league, Sunday School and more.

Dr. Robert T. Sceery, for his more than 40 years of dedicated service as a pediatrician in town and school doctor. He also served on the board of health and led the fight back in the 1970s to sewer the town. He is also a familiar figure at town meetings where he speaks his mind on important issues.

The Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor of the Second Congregational Church, for being a positive force for good through his work with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP), an ecumenical volunteer effort involving Cohasset teenagers. ASP is a home building ministry in central Appalachia.

Anna Abbruzzese, for all her volunteer work including preparing and delivering meals for the Pine Street Inn, driving the senior shuttle and coordinating the Gourmet Cooking Club at the Council on Elder Affairs; and her many efforts to help revitalize Cohasset Village through the Farmers' Market and much more.

Katherine Stanton, for her tireless service to the town and its citizens over the years. She also volunteers as a case reviewer for the state Dept. of Social Services, served on the school committee and recreation committee, and along with her family was involved with the creation of the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Clark Chatterton, for his generosity of spirit and deep caring for his fellow man, his years of work as a teacher and athletic director at the high school, including innumerable efforts helping others behind the scenes. He also helped raise money for many causes including Alumni Field and the American Cancer Society.

former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for a lifetime of service to her hometown, first as den mother and Little League mother and Girl Scout leader, and then as selectman. She was also honored for her public service as state representative for more than two decades and for always putting her constituents first.

Glenn Pratt for his dogged determination over 20 years to see more cemetery space in town, remembering local soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice, helping to lead the effort to expand the community center, serving as an elected official, and spearheading the effort to build a memorial to local mothers who lost sons in wartime.

Arthur Lehr for more than 50 years of volunteer service on worthwhile projects including the Boy Scouts; serving on the Zoning Board of Appeals and as a Registrar of Voters; Clerk of the Works for the DPW garage, Little League Complex, and Mariners Park; serving on the Recycling Committee, as town Civil Defense Director, on Gravel Pit Reuse Committee and more.

Marjorie Murphy for touching countless lives through her roughly 25 years as school librarian at Deer Hill. With eyes that twinkle and an infectious smile, Mrs. Murphy devoted her life to helping children discover the wonders of reading and the value of a good book.

John Coe, a WWII veteran, for all his volunteer service at the Senior Center where he helps make the center a warm place where people come and meet friends; for his work quietly behind the scenes helping fellow citizens and his service as the "beloved Town Crier" every year at the Village Fair.

Marjorie "Margie" Steele, who is the "heart and soul of the Cohasset Food Pantry," for her energy and long-time commitment to the important service, which has helped countless people in need over the years.

Roger Whitley, a retired architect, former Advisory Committee member, and Paul Pratt Library Trustee, who has spent much time over his 50 years as a Cohasset resident "involved."

Merle Brown, former selectman (four terms), Conservation Commissioner, involvement with Beechwood Ball Park project, Boy Scouts, recycling, to name a few.

JoAnne Chittick, artist and volunteer. Chittick has been a volunteer at Rosie's Place for 30 years; 20 of which she has coordinated 50 local cooks who sign up to prepare meatloaf, vegetables or dessert once a month for 10 months a year for the shelter.

• Dick Avery, volunteer, whose community service activities – including serving on town boards, on non-profits, helping the Boy Scouts and so much more – are almost too numerous to list.

• Ed Lappen, truly one of life's "good guys" for his tireless dedication and service to his family, community and the world.

OUR VIEW

Keep the boats afloat

We know, perhaps better than anyone that Hingham can get under the collective skin of the MBTA. The town was the proverbial thorn in the side if the agency during the entire Greenbush restoration process, an issue we covered for nearly 20 years. But, thanks to Hingham, the town has a tunnel under the Square, which has turned out to be a great thing for their downtown area and quality of life that it represents. Also Hingham's efforts to get Greenbush mitigation money for other improvements helped make the case for Cohasset and other towns to do likewise.

When all is said and done – quality of life is the crux of the issue.

Having access to convenient and affordable public transportation is critical to the economic future of the entire South Shore region. Cuts, elimination of service, or huge fee hikes that would deter ridership should no longer be up for debate. Simply put, public transportation – the multi-modal variety that includes trains, buses and boats – should be enhanced and not allowed to shrink or diminish.

On the South Shore we are in the unique position to have commuter boat service. Non-coastal communities do not have that option. Rightly, commuter boat advocates are now gearing up for a fight to make sure that the commuter boat remains convenient and affordable.

Time is of the essence, as Marco Boer (Hingham MBTA Advisory Board representative) says, while the MBTA cannot legally cut the boat service, "they can effectively achieve the result of cutting the ferry by reducing the subsidies it pays to the operator or increasing the fares dramatically. They can do this with 30 days' notice, so this could all evolve rather quickly."

Please plan to attend a public hearing on proposed MBTA service cuts on Wednesday, Feb. 8, from 6 to 8 p.m., at Hingham Town Hall on Central Street in the Central Meeting Room. It is an opportunity to send the MBTA a message that is loud and clear: don't sink the commuter boat!

U.S. women on the precipice

As I have watched the Republican primaries unfold it has become blatantly obvious that this field of candidates led by Mitt Romney has an agenda to regress women's rights back to the 1930s. An ideology that with some candidates like Mr. Santorum is vociferously candid and others like Mr. Romney that is cloak and dagger like but in the end not only intends to take away a women's right to choose but eliminate birth control therefore mandating how people can live. This is fundamentalism theory with shades of Taliban suppressing women's roles in society is the vision these men have for America going forward? Forget all the glass ceilings that females have spent the last century trying to breakthrough in private, professional and corporate life this year's Republican candidate's philosophy is to repeal all your progress with one swipe of the pen in a calamitous four-year term.

The Republican frontrunner Romney has based his candidacy on returning American to his idea of greatness by taking away women's rights. The former Massachusetts governor who was so proud of that he championed state funded healthcare is now flip-flopping as a critic of a National Healthcare system, which is based on his Massachusetts Healthcare Bill. Romney our leading Republican choice who has led a privileged life among the super rich since birth having evaded military service by way of his father's influence and yet is a proponent of a strong military. A real life corporate raider Gordon Gecko like, "Greed is Good" or Mr. Potter (It's "A Wonderful Life") on Wall Street, Romney has spent his professional life not creating jobs and furthering our economy but as a pirate profiting from downsizing and exporting jobs for the almighty dollar. The only pink slip Romney ever saw were the ones he handed out as a "fat cat" who preyed on the middle class working man to make millions which is the very reason the "Occupy Wall Street Movement" has come to exist.

As I listen to debate after debate it has become abundantly clear that this group of candidates is so out of touch with what mainstream America needs to get back to the land of opportunity and freedom that an easy decision exists come Nov. 4. If I am a female I check my voter registration twice and don't walk but run to the polls with Barack Obama my choice regardless of my overall political persuasion.

Animal shelter grateful for support

All of us at the Scituate Animal Shelter thank the residents of Cohasset for their generous support during 2011. As a no-kill shelter completely independent from the town of Scituate, we depend entirely on private donations to serve the South Shore community and fund operating expenses. We simply could not exist without your support and the help of our amazing volunteers, many of whom are Cohasset residents.

On a national level, millions of cats and dogs are in need of a home, a sad situation known as pet overpopulation. Locally, the Scituate Animal Shelter provides rescue and adoption of homeless companion animals as well as community outreach programs to positively impact pet overpopulation.

In 2011, the Shelter adopted out 231 animals, visited nearly 700 elementary school students to present humane education programs, assisted 58 elderly pet owners with pet care needs, assisted pet owners with spay or neuter expenses, spayed or neutered 12 feral cats effectively preventing countless kitten births, reunited 69 lost animals with their families, and hosted a rabies vaccination clinic for the community.

Established in 1992, the Scituate Animal Shelter will proudly celebrate its 20th birthday this year. One of our birthday wishes is for fewer birth days... fewer animal births, that is! The shelter will continue to provide rescue, education and community services with a keen focus on pet spaying and neutering in 2012. We believe this focus is key to making a positive impact on pet overpopulation and we hope you will join us in support of our expanded spay/neuter campaign. We invite you to visit www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org to learn more about the shelter.

On behalf of the Board of Directors, staff, volunteers and most importantly the animals, thank you for your generosity.

Jennifer Durkin, President

Heartfelt appreciation from Worley family

My family and I are so very moved by all of the Cohasset residents who came to honor the life of my husband, Jack, on Dec. 10. Your kind and heartfelt words are a testament not only to Jack's dedicated public service but also to the quality people who reside in the community he served. He loved working with, and for, all of you, as he dedicated so much of his life to making Cohasset a great place for families to live and experience a great recreation program.

On behalf of all my family, I want to personally thank each of you for all your support, which was especially important during this time of healing. Jack was such a kind, giving, truly gentle man and it makes us so proud that you recognized that in all your sentiments.

I know he will live on in the hearts of many. As someone wrote in their card to me, there's a new bright star in the sky tonight!

Applications available for preservation funding

Cohasset has been participating in the CPA since its inception 10 years ago, and has provided funding for a myriad of projects

The Community Preservation Committee would like to remind anyone interested in applying for CPA funding of projects to please do so by the 15th of February in order to get on the Town Warrant for the spring Town Meeting.

Application forms are available on the Town website by going to: www.cohassetmass.org/cpc/index.html. Forms are available at the bottom of the page. Free legal assistance may be available for non-profit organizations applying for CPA funding through The Lawyers Clearing House. For more information please go to their website at: www.lawyersclearinghouse.org/for-nonprofits.

Cohasset has been participating in the CPA since its inception 10 years ago, and has provided funding for a myriad of projects. CPA funds come from a 1.5 percent surcharge on your real estate taxes, combined with a surcharge on all real estate filings at the Registry of Deeds. Though the rate the State currently matches town money is down from the 100 percent match in previous years, a return on your tax surcharge of 27 percent in State money is a very good return in any economy.

For more information on the application process for CPA funding, please feel free to contact Russell Bonetti at 781-383-9778.

Needless waste big part of medical overspending

BY STEVE BOBO

The main culprit for the overspend — accounting for 86 percent of the total — is the prescribing of branded statins for high cholesterol...

A recent article in one of the lesser medical journals was recently brought to my attention. Last year, according to the Mount Sinai School of Medicine, a staggering $6.7 billion of U.S. medical spending in just one year is wasted on tests that aren't needed and expensive branded drugs that could be replaced by less expensive unbranded drugs having identical contents. The Sinai School of Medicine team performed the analysis, published in the Archives of Internal Medicine, the purpose of which, they believe, is to inform those involved in the ongoing and heated debate on paying for health care in America.

The main culprit for the overspend — accounting for 86 percent of the total — is the prescribing of branded statins for high cholesterol, said the team of researchers led by Dr. Minal Kale. To reach their startling conclusion, Kale's team looked at the May 2011 study published in the aforementioned journal that rated overused treatments in three areas of medicine: Family medicine, pediatrics and internal medicine. The researchers compared this data with studies of the same time period in 2009 — from two other sources came up with the $6.7 billion wastage figure, with $5.8 billion of was spent on statins that could have been provided more cheaply by paying for non-branded versions.

Kale said: "Our analysis shows astronomical costs associated with prescribing of brand name statins when effective, generic alternatives were available. Efforts to encourage prescribing of generics clearly have not gone far enough."

Antibiotics and unnecessary testing procedures were also significant contributors to the overspend the study said. "Significant efforts to reduce this spending are required in order to stem these exorbitant activities," Kale said. And, Kale believes his research has erred on the side of caution in estimating these costs while admitting it is limited by the single study available.

While dwarfed by the statins overspend, the costs of unnecessary tests are still striking. Kale and his team reckon that $32 million was wasted on unneeded blood tests; bone density scans on younger women racked up $527 million in wasted cash; tests on back pain patients wasted $175 million; children's sore throats were responsible for $116 million worth of unnecessary medication.

The needless yearly repetition of echocardiograms were also wasteful says Kale along with unnecessary urine and Pap tests and prescriptions for children's cough medicine. And, according to Kale, these costs quickly mount up. He said: "We found considerable variability in the frequency of inappropriate care, however our data show that even activities with small individual costs can contribute substantially to overall healthcare costs.

In light of the current healthcare reform debate, we need more research examining how overuse contributes to healthcare spending. Research might focus on the potential role of reimbursement, defensive medicine practices or lack of adherence to guidelines.

In light of this and similar studies, it's only fair to assert that we patients frequently can share some of the blame. There is often comfort in asserting that ailments aside from clearing themselves up without help, can be aided in speeding up the process by using a medication about which we've heard some good word. Countless dollars are expended for sleep aids as well as narcotic substances that make one feel better. You will probably not be surprised to know the new findings from a study conducted with 25 healthy individuals who were put into a controlled setting and fed random diets. It was found that those consuming low protein diets had less weight gain compared to the individuals who had normal and high protein diets.

In summary, it's necessary for each of us to adopt a lifestyle in which we make limited use of those things known to make us feel good but which used in excess can be damaging. Remember, alcohol and candy are OK in measured proportions, but both can be health threats if used inadvisably.

COMMENTARY

MLK is a real hero

CRAIG SALTERS

If he hadn't been slain by an assassin's bullet, on Jan. 15 Martin Luther King Jr. would turn 83 years of age.

You don't see political cartoons lampooning Martin Luther King Jr. and that's a shame.

You don't see them for the obvious reason: on April 4, 1968, he was assassinated and, as a sign of respect and sorrow, he was forever grouped with other lost leaders – particularly Abraham Lincoln and John F. Kennedy – as images beyond reproach. In other words, icons.

But, like Kennedy and Lincoln, MLK was certainly lampooned in his lifetime. He was criticized as a communist, a lefty, an "outside agitator." He was portrayed as "Un-American" for his stance against the Vietnam War. He was jailed about two dozen times. Later in his life, more militant Civil Rights leaders portrayed his non-violent methods as outdated and too conciliatory. As if that weren't enough, the FBI constantly harassed him and wiretapped his activities. They even taped embarrassing moments from his very flawed personal life and tried to push him out of the Civil Rights movement using his own personal guilt and shame.

But King said "no" to all of this. Instead, he ignored the negativity and focused on the "dream" he so eloquently articulated that famous day in 1963. Ten years before he was killed in Memphis, King was stabbed by a woman at a 1958 Harlem book signing. He came close to death that day but continued with his work, understanding that what he was doing was worth than his one life. Personally, there are a few things I'd be willing to die for but I can count them on one hand and still have plenty of fingers left.

Years ago, when I was younger and far more idealistic, I was getting my hair cut at a barber shop when talk turned to the controversy over recognizing the MLK holiday. As a fairly well educated young man, I ignored some of the more common insults and felt myself insulated and superior. Then the barber, even as he clipped my hair, said: "I don't know what the big deal is. I say we shoot four more and take the whole week off."

I wanted to walk out – should have walked out – but I didn't. The pure malice of the thought caught me off guard and I hesitated that one instant too long. Then I started worrying about "causing a fuss" and what others might think and all was lost.

I remember paying for my haircut and walking out, my face hot with shame. In my life I had learned about people like King and Rosa Parks but, during a moment of truth, found out I had little in common with them. I also had good friends who, to borrow King's words, had characters of remarkable content but whose skin color was darker than mine. I began to feel sick.

If he hadn't been slain by an assassin's bullet, on Jan. 15 Martin Luther King Jr. would turn 83 years of age. Over the last 40 years, I would have loved to know the leader's thoughts on Watergate, on the Iranian hostage crisis, on the Reagan presidency, on Barack Obama, on the energy crisis, on practically anything. I would have loved to have seen him caricatured and criticized in newspapers and magazines because he was living and breathing and in the fight.

So, be careful: MLK is so much more important than a statue, a postage stamp, or a day in his honor. Flaws and all, he was a giant. Respect the icon but miss the man.

FOR THE RECORD

Political landscape taking shape

GREGORY MATHIS

Registering to vote is easier than ever, whether by mail, in person at the town clerk's office or even when renewing your driver's license at the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

With the Iowa caucus and New Hampshire primary in the rearview mirror, the anticipation of the political road ahead for 2012 is beginning to gain some speed.

The Massachusetts primary isn't until Super Tuesday (March 6), so we certainly get the benefit of sitting back and watching as the presidential landscape takes shape with regards to potential candidates.

Even though 12 states will have completed primaries and caucuses between now and March 6, 10 states will have a pretty big say on that day as to whom the presidential choices will be come November.

While much is at stake politically for the country this year with a presidential election, there is great anticipation building in Massachusetts with Scott Brown running for re-election to the U.S. Senate and the ramifications of eliminating one U.S. Congressional district in the state and leaving several of those seats up for grabs.

Presidential elections traditionally translate into high voter turnout. Combine that with the U.S. Senate and House races and we may be looking at record-setting turnouts in 2012.

To participate, however, you need to be registered to vote. If you are a U.S. citizen, a resident of Massachusetts and 18 years of age on or before Election Day, you have the right (and privilege) to cast a vote in any and all races. Registering to vote is easier than ever, whether by mail, in person at the town clerk's office or even when renewing your driver's license at the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

The Massachusetts Secretary of State's website is usually a good source for voter registration information, but the links currently under the Election Division tab need to be updated, as information is still based around 2010 elections. That information will likely be updated soon to reflect the dates and deadlines for 2012.

Before we even get to the busy part of the presidential election season in the fall, though, most towns in our coverage area will be holding local elections and conducting annual spring Town Meetings. While it's difficult to control who runs for local office and the number of contested races, the one thing you can control (other than running for office yourself) is being registered to vote and participate in the process.

While some towns have mayors, city or town councils and representative Town Meeting, open Town Meeting continues to be a great Massachusetts/New England tradition for many.

It's at this basic level of town government where you see the biggest bang for your tax buck. It's where important decisions are made as to how the town's financial resources will be used and divided. But it's only effective if enough residents take part in the process. Too often a small number of voters decide how millions of dollars is going to be spent in areas that have a direct impact on the quality of day-to-day life in a community, perhaps even more so than who sits in the Oval Office.

So keep that in mind as you follow the presidential primary/caucus process over the next several months. Don't forget to register to vote if you aren't already registered, and don't ignore the importance of using that vote locally.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief of GateHouse Media New England's South unit based in Marshfield, with offices in Plymouth, Raynham, Hingham and Randolph.

WILLCUTT CORNER

Filling seniors' transportation needs

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

As the senior population of Cohasset continues to grow, the need for this service will also expand.

Living in a small town with limited transportation options can pose a challenge if you don't have a license. To seniors who no longer drive, everyday tasks like visiting the grocery store or the post office may present insurmountable hurdles. That's why the van service coordinated through Cohasset Elder Affairs provides such value to the elders of Cohasset. When it comes to routine transportation needs, as well as more critical appointments, non-driving seniors may remain independent in their homes, knowing they have the means to get where they need to go, in spite of the lack of local public transportation in town.

The CEA Van service is juggled by Trudy Salerno, Transportation Coordinator and Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator, as well as two staff drivers and a host of volunteers. Seniors can reserve spots on vans for regular visits to Shaw's and Stop & Shop, Hanover Mall, Kohl's, The Christmas Tree Shop, "Around Town" trips to businesses in downtown Cohasset as well as to local appointments. In addition, van drivers take biweekly trips to the food pantry to pick up groceries for those in need.

Along with local van service, Salerno coordinates Cohasset Elder Affairs medical van trips, which may be scheduled Monday — Friday and be within a 15-mile radius of Cohasset. Twenty-four hour notice is required to ensure van availability for trips to doctor's offices, dentist appointments, or visits to South Shore Hospital. Although every effort is made to ensure a seat is available, demand is high and seniors are urged to let the CEA office know as soon as they have scheduled an appointment requiring transportation. For those confined to wheelchairs, Salerno will schedule pick up via the Medical Access Program (MAP) provided by South Shore Community Action.

For trips beyond the 15 mile radius, Salerno refers senior non-wheelchair-bound clients to FISH, an independent volunteer network of drivers who use their own cars to pick up at client's homes, drop them off at their appointment and then drive them back again. The MBTA provides Para Transit via "The Ride" for those requiring out of town transportation who meet certain financial criteria at a cost of $2.00 per trip.

As the senior population of Cohasset continues to grow, the need for this service will also expand. This established transportation structure demonstrates Cohasset Elder Affair's commitment to the future, by providing assurance that non-driving seniors in town now and in the years to come, can remain independent, knowing they may travel not only within Cohasset, but beyond.

For information, or to schedule van service, contact Trudy Salerno, Transportation Coordinator, Cohasset Elder Affairs, at 781-383-9112.

Willcutt Corner is named for Levi Willcutt whose daughter Mary Hooper dedicated a portion of her trust to be dedicated to senior issues and care.

HEDLUND REPORT

Frustrated over MBTA plans

BOB HEDLUND

What I cannot understand is why we would first create the commuter line — which abjectly affected a better, cheaper, and already existing means of public transportation to the tune of $513 million taxpayer dollars — then eliminate the subsidy that supported the most cost-effective alternative.

Commuters are a blur while making their way to their cars at the end of the day on Friday at the Hingham Shipyard.

On Tuesday Jan. 3rd, the MBTA outlined two proposals to reduce the over $161 million budget deficit projected for fiscal 2013 in a presentation to legislators. Both proposals included fare hikes, the reduction of services and a complete elimination of the commuter boat subsidy. As the Senator representing the South Shore, I know this will have a negative effect on my district. I am frustrated with the MBTA's proposal, especially the elimination of the Commuter Boat subsidy.

The Hingham Commuter Boat has been a means of public transportation that I have supported since its inception. In fact during the years of negotiations over the construction of the Greenbush Commuter Rail Line from 2001 to 2007, I strongly advocated for an expansion of commuter boat services both in Hingham and Scituate over the creation of the commuter rail line. I have long since believed that Greenbush represents a decision marked by poor planning and false promises.

The years since the conclusion of construction have only further supported my original concerns regarding the $513 million restoration project. In fact, MBTA Blue Ribbon commission report from 2000 warned that "in order to avoid saddling future generations of riders with overwhelming costs...the committee recommends a moratorium on all capital projects" unless they "result in measurable increases in productivity or revenues." Two years later, a Pioneer Institute study found that the MBTA was already straying from the recommendations of the 2000 report and again warned against unnecessary capital expansion. Unfortunately, these warnings went unheeded, and the Greenbush Restoration went full steam ahead.

In 2010 the Metropolitan Planning Organization conducted a study of the recently completed Greenbush line comparing the projected ridership numbers and the actual numbers. The report is clear; Greenbush has not attracted riders, has hurt the commuter boat, and not reduced any congestion on Rt. 3 or Rt. 3A as originally stated. The findings are as follows:

• Ridership is only 60 percent of what was projected

FEIR, 2001 predicted 3,320 peak hour riders by 2010

Actual peak ridership is 1,934

• Greenbush killed commuter boats

Ridership on commuter boats down 24 percent since launch

More than two-thirds of Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham riders used to use commuter boat

• Not removing cars from roadway

66 percent of Greenbush riders were already using mass transit

15.8 percent were using commuter rail

46.6 percent commuter boat

3.4 percent private bus

• Has not eased congestion

Traffic fell by greater rate elsewhere in Metropolitan Boston region

Greenbush region — Traffic down 4.2 percent

Metro Boston — down 14 percent

Study says decline has more to do with recession and high gas prices

I have never doubted the need for expanded mass transit options along the Greenbush corridor. I opposed the commuter rail because the constantly rising price tag – it jumped 25 percent alone between 2001 and 2007 – didn't justify the relatively small number of cars being removed from the roadways, especially when the MBTA was prioritizing Greenbush over projects such as the Green Line extension to Medford, which would have a much larger impact on air quality and vehicular traffic. Additionally the MBTA's own report from the Blue Ribbon Commission further supported my skepticism of the Greenbush restoration project.

On top of the sizeable annual debt service being paid by the MBTA for Greenbush, the MBTA must also pay millions of dollars annually to cover the line's operating loss.

All of this is the backdrop to the proposals the MBTA presented to the legislature on Monday. The plans include either a 35-43 percent increase in fares, a 19-20 percent reduction in service including cancellation of weekend service on the Commuter Rail, and both plans call for the entire elimination of the commuter boat subsidy.

While it is concerning to be raising fares during a down economy, I can understand the need to increase fares throughout the entire MBTA system. I would prefer that fares are not increased, but the need for additional revenue at the agency is clear. What I cannot understand is why we would first create the commuter line — which abjectly affected a better, cheaper, and already existing means of public transportation to the tune of $513 million taxpayer dollars — then eliminate the subsidy that supported the most cost-effective alternative. In addition to the elimination of the commuter boat, the MBTA would be canceling weekend service to the only remaining means of public transportation for residents on the South Shore, making this a curious decision at best.

Maintenance costs alone on the Greenbush line are exorbitant, including the now necessary replacement of all the concrete rail ties along the 57-mile Old Colony Line at a cost of $91.5 million to the taxpayers. This comes less than 10 years after the completed construction.

The commuter boat represented a better investment at the time of the Greenbush negotiations, and has only continued to look better since the new line's completion. Eliminating an economically viable and potent industry in my district is not the way the T should go about solving its debt burden. Responsibility for bad decisions and poor planning lie with the agency responsible for those decisions, not those supporting the services they provide.

The burden of balancing the T's budget should not fall solely on the commuters who use those services. It is time for real progress to be made, not knee jerk reactions by an agency that has proved its inability to live within its means.

As a long-serving member of the transportation committee, I have been vocal regarding the MBTA's repeated refusals to implement the recommendations of independent studies. The MBTA wasted hundreds of millions on a boondoggle and now wants to clean up the mess by eliminating the most efficiently run service they provide while saddling customers with an overwhelming burden which the MBTA knew all along was unavoidable. This is simply unacceptable and will not be tolerated.

Although I will be making my opposition clear, the MBTA still needs to hear directly from commuter boat riders. I encourage you to attend one of the MBTA's upcoming local public hearings to express your concerns:

• Hingham Town Hall, 6-8 p.m., Wed., Feb. 8

• Quincy, Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Wed., 6-8 p.m., Feb. 15

I also recommend you to join the Facebook page I have created called "Save the MBTA Commuter Boat" to receive the latest updates on these proposals.

Volume 38 - Report No. 1 January 6, 2012

With today's edition, (name of newspaper) begins coverage of the 2012 Massachusetts legislative session with our weekly Beacon Hill Roll Call report. This feature is a clear and concise compilation of the voting records of local state representatives and senators on Beacon Hill.

Beacon Hill Roll Call provides an unbiased summary of bills and amendments, arguments from floor debate on both sides of the issue and each legislator's vote or lack of vote on the matter. This information gives readers an opportunity to monitor their elected officials' actions on Beacon Hill. Many bills are reported on in their early stages and readers often have the opportunity to contact their legislators and express an opinion prior to the measure being brought up for final action.

The feature "Also Up on Beacon Hill" informs readers of other important matters at the Statehouse.

Beacon Hill Roll Call is provided by Bob Katzen who has covered the Legislature for 36 years. He has been providing this feature to hundreds of newspapers across the state since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

The Legislature convened the 2012 session on Wednesday and most of the activity was ceremonial.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 39 state senators from January 1, 2011 to December 31, 2011. The list reveals that senators have collected a total of $63,918.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to senators above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions.

Some opponents argue most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others say the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes, the state is in the midst of a recession, and funding for important programs has been cut.

The 2011 statistics indicate that 19 senators, a little less than half of the 39 members, have received reimbursements ranging from $558 to $9,360, while 20 senators have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who has received the most per diem money in 2011 is Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $9,360. The other senators rounding out the top five with the highest amounts in order of the amount of money received include Sens. Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst), $7,380; Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport), $6,930; Michael Knapik (R-Westfield), $6,732; and Daniel Wolf (D-Harwich), $6,240;

LOCAL SENATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2011

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of per diem money the state has paid him or her for 2011. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the senator certified that he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

$1,242 (69 days) *

A total of 20 of the state's senators did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean these senators were never at the Statehouse in 2011. It simply means they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

RESTORE $41 MILLION FOR QUINN BILL (H 3633) - The Public Service Committee will hold a hearing at 1 p.m. on January 17 on a proposal to restore $41 million in funding for the Quinn Bill, which provides police officers with increased salaries for furthering their education. In 2009, the Legislature cut the funding for the program from an estimated $51 million to $10 million. The cost of the program is usually split 50-50 between the state and the participating city or town.

Supporters say it was unfair to cut this funding when many police unions gave up increased health benefits and pay raises based on the assumption that the Quinn Bill would remain in effect.

Opponents say the state just cannot afford the money anymore.

NO ROBOCALLS TO CELL PHONES (H 3858) - A late-filed bill before the Consumer Protection and Professional Licensure Committee would prohibit robocalls to cell phones and other mobile electronic devices. The measure exempts messages from school districts to students, parents or employees; from companies advising employees of work schedules; from correctional facilities advising victims; and from municipalities and state government. It also would fine companies up to $10,000 if they make a robocall except as defined by the law and allow an individual who is called to sue a company for $10,000 in damages.

FOUR POSSIBLE BALLOT QUESTIONS GO TO HOUSE - Four initiative petitions for laws have been officially transmitted to the House for possible action. Groups promoting each law gathered more than the minimum 68,911 signatures needed to bring the proposal to the Legislature. The four questions would allow medical use of marijuana; allow terminally ill patients with fewer than six months to live to obtain medication they can self-administer to commit suicide; require auto manufacturers to sell to non-dealer repair shops complete repair information and diagnostic tools; and require that teachers' effectiveness rather than seniority, be the prime consideration in the hiring and firing process. If the Legislature does not approve a proposal by May 2012, proponents must gather another 11,485 signatures by July 2012 in order for the question to appear on the November 2012 ballot.

BALLOT POSITION OF GOP PRESIDENTIAL HOPEFULS - The order in which the Republican candidates for president will appear on the ballot in the March 6 Massachusetts primary was determined by a random drawing held by Secretary of State William Galvin. The order is as follows: Congressman Ron Paul, former Gov. Mitt Romney, Gov. Rick Perry, former Sen. Rick Santorum, former Gov. Jon Huntsman, Congresswoman Michele Bachmann (even though she has dropped out of the race) and former Congressman Newt Gingrich.

The random drawing eliminates any order benefit some candidates would get from a listing in alphabetical order. Political experts are split on whether ballot position actually has any effect on the outcome of an election.

oppose any service reductions, fare increases, or subsidy or service cuts."

Bradley urges opponents of the proposed T cost-cutting measures to express their thoughts and concerns – "Do we need weekend Greenbush service; what about Hingham bus service cuts? Let's have these and other conversations to get everything on the table for discussion," he said. "Right now this is a proposal, and people can weigh in."

The MBTA's proposed cutbacks follow reports of overall MBTA ridership gains in recent months. 2011 marked the T's busiest year since 2008, averaging more than 1.3 million riders per weekday in November for the third straight month. "It is unclear what impact service cuts, rate hikes, and the elimination of service will have on these most recent ridership numbers," Hedlund states in the press release.

While it's unclear what the end result will be, one thing is certain – it's important for citizens to attend the Feb. 8 meeting to express their ideas and concerns. For those unable to attend, comments may be sent to fareproposal@mbta.com. Hedlund has also set up a Facebook page "Save the MBTA Commuter Boat." Also watch for updates on garrettbradley.com.

Brainstorming session

In the meantime, Hingham Selectman Laura Burns arranged a brainstorming session last Saturday, Jan. 7, at 9 a.m. at Hingham Town Hall to talk with Hull MBTA Advisory Board member Joan Meschino, a Hull selectman, fellow Hingham selectmen, and concerned citizens about the proposed MBTA cutbacks (including the Hingham and Hull Pemberton Point commuter boats) that would affect both towns.

About 25 citizens attended, including Hingham MBTA Advisory Board representative Marco Boer; commuter boat advocates Martha and John Bewick; Bradley; a representative from Hedlund's office; South Shore Chamber of Commerce Vice President and Hingham resident John Stobierski; and some commuter boat riders – about 25 to 30 attendees in all, with only two days' notice.

The Chamber has publicly called for the MBTA to "back away" from a proposal to eliminate ferry service between the South Shore and Boston.

"Bob Hedlund and I are working in a non-partisan fashion to oppose any service reductions, fare increases, or subsidy or service cuts."
State Rep. Garrett Bradley

"The MBTA is holding these hearings across the state, and MBTA officials are likely to be getting criticism everywhere they go," Boer told the Hingham Journal. "While the ultimate decisions on what happens to the ferry, train, and bus service will likely come down to financial numbers, the impact we as a town can make on their decision process can be quite significant.

"If ferry proponents want the service retained, they have to come out in person and voice their interests on February 8," Boer emphasized. "This is the one and only chance to show the MBTA officials people care before the March decision on cuts."

(Following completion of the T's public hearings in February, a final plan will be presented to the Massachusetts Department of Transportation board of directors in March. A board vote is set for April, all under a timeline put forth by MBTA officials.)

Public transportation is "critical to the economic vibrancy of the South Shore, especially in light of the Neponset River bridge construction that will be on-going for 18-plus months and the upcoming replacement of the Fore River Bridge," Boer said.

Burns considers it "crucial that area residents bring suggestions they may have about how to mitigate the impact of the service cuts and how to balance the T's budget to the Feb. 8 meeting," she said. "It's important to strike a constructive tone in this process. The T has a real problem which they must solve, and we must acknowledge that before we can arrive at any solutions."

What they say about the ferry issue:

Local legislators, town officials, commuter boat riders, and other citizens are adamantly opposed to the MBTA's proposal calling for fare increases and service cutbacks that could result in the elimination of the Hingham and Hull commuter boats, all part of the T's efforts to resolve major budget gaps.

They recently spoke out about the issue:

• Senator Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth: "To eliminate the subsidy for the most efficient, environmentally and financially sound form of public transportation in the MBTA system makes no sense. For the past 20 years the T has gone on a capital spending spree and now the chickens are coming home to roost. The T is the most indebted transit authority in the world. Between its crushing $8 billion in debt and its operating deficits, they're on the edge of a precipice."

In Hedlund's opinion, "the [state] administration keeps kicking the can down the road. They're still talking about building a line to Fall River and New Bedford, which is completely pie in the sky," he said.

With regard to ferry service, Hedlund thinks Massachusetts is "behind the times. We have an underutilized coastal area and ferries are getting short shrift," he said. "Now we are in a most difficult position."

Hedlund said he would not object to fare hikes "if the pain was spread across the entire MBTA transportation system. But to carry any bias against the boats is unacceptable," he stated.

Hedlund noted that while commuter boat ridership is down "a little" due to the train, "commuter rail ridership projections have never materialized. The bulk of train riders are coming off existing forms of mass transit, mainly the boats," he said. "We all knew this was going to happen. The T has put itself in the position of competing against itself, and now it can't afford to run all its different transportation lines."

• Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham: "We're trying to understand what the overall problem is and what the budget figures are. This issue needs to be dealt with in a long-term fashion rather than every two years, when more proposed cuts are put on the table."

Bradley noted that significant federal and state tax dollars have already been earmarked for a $4.5 million-plus intermodal terminal at the recently redeveloped Hingham Shipyard and that an additional $2 million Public Works Economic Development grant paid for earlier roadway improvements there.

Bradley also pointed out that Hull was recently awarded a $550,000 federal grant to upgrade the Pemberton Point pier. "We have asked those making the decisions to visit the Hingham and Hull commuter boats so that they can see the investments that have been made and the number of [commuters'] cars that are off the road on a daily basis," he said.

• Marco Boer, Hingham MBTA Advisory Board representative: "The short-term problem is meeting the immediate budget crunch which seems to be caused in large part by debt and a systemic decline in the quality of the rolling stock (the train/bus infrastructure). There are three options to solve this: a statewide reduction in service, an increase in fares (upwards of 40 percent), and going back to the legislature asking for more funding support. My guess is we'll see a combination of all three."

While the MBTA cannot legally cut the boat service, Boer said, "they can effectively achieve the result of cutting the ferry by reducing the subsidies it pays to the operator or increasing the fares dramatically. They can do this with 30 days notice, so this could all evolve rather quickly."

Boer explained that sales tax is the principal financing source for the MBTA. "Between 1990 and 2000 the Massachusetts sales tax grew at an average of 6.5 percent per year. When the MBTA received a dedicated portion of this revenue source in 2000, many believed that the T's budgetary problems were over," he said. "But, since 2000 the sales tax has grown at a meager one percent per year on average," due in part to the 9/11 aftermath and the more recent economic downturn. "By 2003 it was clear that the sales tax had failed as the principal financing source for the MBTA," according to Boer.

He urged widespread participation by Hingham residents in the upcoming Feb. 8 public hearing about the proposed changes. (See related story.)

• Martha Bewick, commuter boat advocate:

Bewick wonders whether trains would have sufficient capacity to carry ferry riders if the commuter boats were cancelled. "From the environmental studies for Greenbush, it seemed that the trains are limited to a capacity of 3,300 at rush hour, and that capacity cannot be expanded because of the track bottleneck at Braintree," Bewick said.

She noted that at a recent Hingham Selectmen-hosted meeting about the T proposals, "We talked about how other cities have been building in redundant ferry services, and how the Boston Harbor ferries have been used for emergency and contingency planning. We talked about the role of the ferries in providing backup for the Democrat National Convention in case of need, and when there were crises in New York and San Francisco Bay," she said.

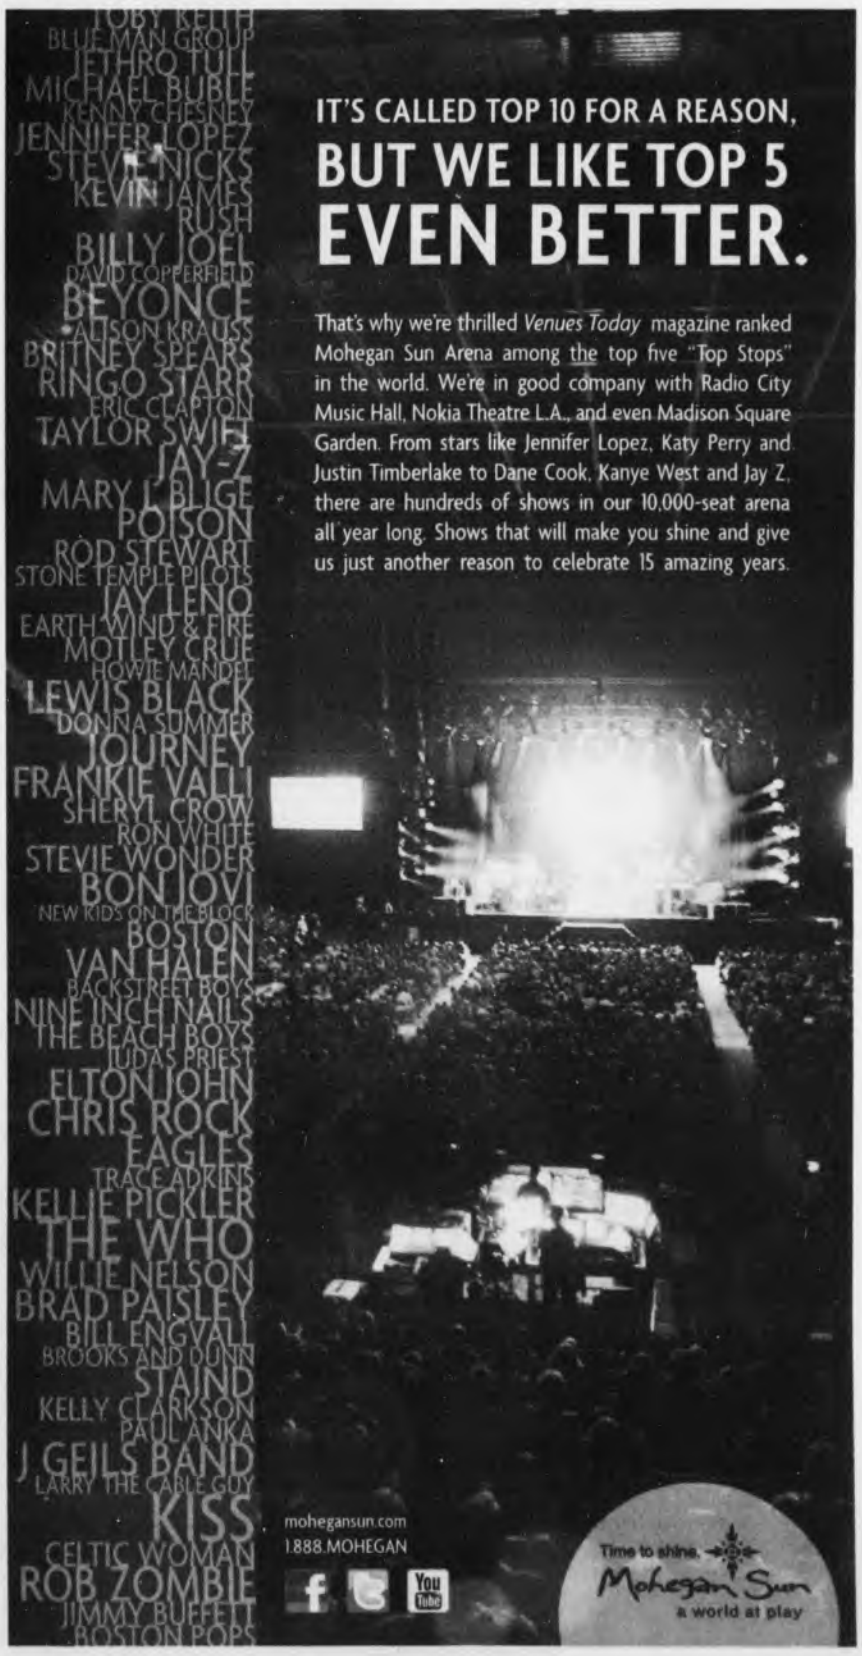
MBTA agrees to hold public hearing in Hingham

The following is a press release from state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, ranking member of the Joint Committee on Transportation, and state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, have secured a public hearing for South Shore residents to voice concerns over the MBTA's proposed fare hike and service cut plan, recently unveiled in a briefing to legislators on Jan. 3.

The MBTA has proposed two plans in an attempt to close a projected $161 million dollar budget gap in fiscal 2013. The plans include a 35-43 percent increase in fares, a 19-20 percent reduction in service including cancellation of weekend service on the Commuter Rail, and the entire elimination of the commuter boat subsidy.

These proposed cuts come on the heels of reported ridership gains the MBTA has made in recent months. The year 2011 marked the T's busiest year since 2008, averaging more than 1.3 million per weekday in November, the third straight month above 1.3 million riders. It is unclear what impact service cuts, fare hikes and the elimination of service will have on these most recent ridership numbers.



"It is clear that the MBTA has made gains in ridership over the last two years, and taken the first steps toward reducing inefficiencies," said Hedlund. "We should be expanding the reduction of inefficiencies instead of balancing the T's budget on the backs of the riders and eliminating the very services that have made ridership gains over the last two years."

There is concern among the South Shore commuting public about the elimination of weekend rail services and the elimination of the commuter boat subsidy. Anticipating this concern, Hedlund and Bradley pushed for the inclusion of a local public hearing on these proposals. The MBTA agreed to hold a public hearing on Feb. 8, at 6 p.m., at the central meeting room at Hingham Town Hall. The MBTA will hold another 19 meetings around the state to hear from residents concerning these proposals.

"I have heard from many constituents who are frustrated over the MBTA proposal to reduce and eliminate services, especially the commuter boat," said Hedlund "I am hopeful that the MBTA will listen to the concerns of these residents with an open mind and respond to them appropriately as they did most recently in 2009."

Bradley said, "The Hingham and Hull commuter boats are a critically important mode of transportation for my district. To eliminate this service would severely impact individuals who commute and do business in the area. If the ferry boat service were to be eliminated, along with bus service to Hingham, residents of Hull would have no direct access to public transportation. I disagree with this approach and will work with legislative leaders and state officials to discuss alternatives that address the MBTA financial situation."

Following the completion of the public hearings in February, a final plan will presented to the MassDOT board of directors in March, followed by a board vote in April, under a timeline suggested by MBTA officials.

LOCAL INTEREST

New director enthusiastic about her role

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

By day she's the new director of Hingham Community Center. By night she's a Cohasset selectman.

That's a lot to have on one's plate, but Diane Kennedy is up to the task with her seemingly boundless energy and flexibility. She enjoys her work at the Community Center, juggling schedules, coming up with new programs, and keeping track of all the classes and activities. It's no easy task, but Kennedy enjoys every minute of it – "the busier the better" is her philosophy.

"I like to keep busy, so thank goodness people are coming through the door all the time!"
– Hingham Community Center Executive Director Diane Kennedy

There are programs and activities for all ages, including gymnastics, karate, Pilates, yoga, ballroom dancing, Zumba (a dance fitness program), tai chi, CPR/First Aid certification, Mom & Me music and art enrichment program for pre-schoolers, and much more. Among the most popular offerings is the dance program.

The Center offers programs and activities for toddlers, children, teens, and adults. Its dance program has won awards at regional dance competitions, and the different levels of karate classes attract both "tiger tot" students and adult black belts. The ballroom dance, performing arts, exercise, and children's enrichment programs are popular and continue to thrive.

Diane Kennedy is not only a Cohasset selectman but she is also the director of the Hingham Community Center.

"In addition to further improvements to the building, we're committed to providing a broad range of classes at a reasonable cost, with maximum participation by people of all ages," Kennedy said. "We want to complement our current activities with more adult programs. I'm still feeling my way." Hingham and other Shore residents are welcome to participate in any of the programs.

HCC, always bustling with activity, is housed in the 1718 John Thaxter House.

"We take very seriously our responsibility to protect and preserve this historic building," Board of Directors President Jody Nash said.

She considers the Community Center "a great town resource" that provides programs and classes for children, teens, and adults. "I love stopping by and seeing all of the activity going on," she said. "Hundreds of people utilize the Center each day."

The Board is excited to have Kennedy as HCC's new executive director. "Diane brings with her a great deal of experience and enthusiasm and is already working on new programs to add to our current offerings," Nash said. "She has also spearheaded the effort to provide online registration for our classes, which we hope will be up and running soon."

This will allow Kennedy to get beyond the paperwork and focus more on programming. "I have 8,000 ideas!" she quipped. "One thought is to partner with other organizations to offer some of their programs here."

It's not surprising that as former assistant director of South Shore Art Center and coordinator of the annual Arts Festival, Kennedy has a passion for art. As a first step in partnering with the community, Kennedy has collaborated with South Shore Art Center to offer a parent and child art class one morning a week and basic watercolor and drawing classes for adults each week at the Community Center.

When Kennedy left her position at SSAC this summer after a "wonderful experience" of working there for 12 years, her goodbye gift was a painting of the New England Patriots playing in the snow by Hingham resident and friend Vcevy Strekalovsky. "I'm a huge Pats fan," she said. "In fact, I like all the Boston sports."

Diane Kennedy sifts through the records for a dance class while fielding a call from a parent who had registered for a fall class.

Perfect fit

Kennedy is the perfect fit for the Community Center. "It is a nice balance to my other Cohasset life," she said. "I have my work life here in Hingham and can focus on what's happening here during the day."

Now that she works in Hingham, Kennedy has found opportunities to reconnect with some of her friends who live here. "It's fun bumping into them on the street," she said. "I love it!"

In the evening, she shifts her focus to her selectman role and family life. "I really enjoy people and helping them channel their interests. I'm also a problem solver," she said.

Kennedy enjoys interacting with the HCC instructors, as she did at the Art Center, "bringing everyone together so that we're all singing from the same song sheet."

But the best part of the job is the kids. "They are so adorable as they come through the door each day," Kennedy said.

From her vantage point in her office between the sitting and waiting rooms, she sees it all. "I love the energy of this place," she said. "I like to keep busy, so thank goodness people are coming through the door all the time!"

A great deal of work has been done on the historic building recently — interior and exterior painting, refinished floors, and landscaping. "The Center has never looked better," Nash said. "In addition, Diane has been working with local artists to have their work displayed at HCC. Even if not enrolled in a class, we hope the community will stop by and see the beautiful artwork."

Nash and the entire board welcome input from Hingham residents and others who use the Center. "We want to know how we can best serve our community," she said.

Classes in the works

Kennedy would eventually like to offer a social networking class, personal finances for teens, dance programs for adults, digital photography, and cooking classes. A new Math Kids program will start in January.

The focus of HCC's children's programming is for them to have fun within a safe, supervised setting. "It's important for kids to just play," Kennedy said. "They need to run through the sprinkler and enjoy a popsicle on hot summer days."

This is a good way for kids to get to know each other. "In some instances this is the first experience away from home, and we want they to feel comfortable," Kennedy said.

In the midst of a busy day, Kennedy somehow manages to put everything in its place. "You've got to lose the noise and listen to the music," she said.

In her spare time, she and her family enjoy skiing. "We can't wait for the first snowfall!" she said.

Besides art, Kennedy has a passion for music. "I play the piano," she said. "Practicing is the best eight minutes of my week. It used to be eight hours! Music is my thing, even if it's just three minutes playing "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star."

All joking aside, on Dec. 9 Kennedy accompanied on piano the Cohasset High School Chorus during their annual Holiday Tour – first to the other Cohasset schools, followed by a joint concert at Scituate High and a performance at Linden Ponds.

Skippers face Cape teams

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys basketball team took their game to the Cape this week and came away with a couple of solid victories.

The Skippers played a non-league match at Chatham over the weekend that ended with a 51-38 victory courtesy of Shane Haggerty.

Haggerty connected for a career-high 30 points, including a three-pointer and nine-of-10 free throws.

Cohasset took control early and never let go.

The Skippers led 16-9 after the first quarter and held a 26-21 halftime advantage.

Cohasset pulled away a bit in the third quarter, outscoring Chatham 13-9 to up the lead to 39-30.

Cohasset made 20-of-29 free throws in the win.

Tuesday night, Cohasset made the trip to Harwich for a South Shore League battle.

Again, Haggerty was the scoring machine, with 23 points in a 70-61 victory. Haggerty was superb from the line in that win as well, making nine-of-10 freebies.

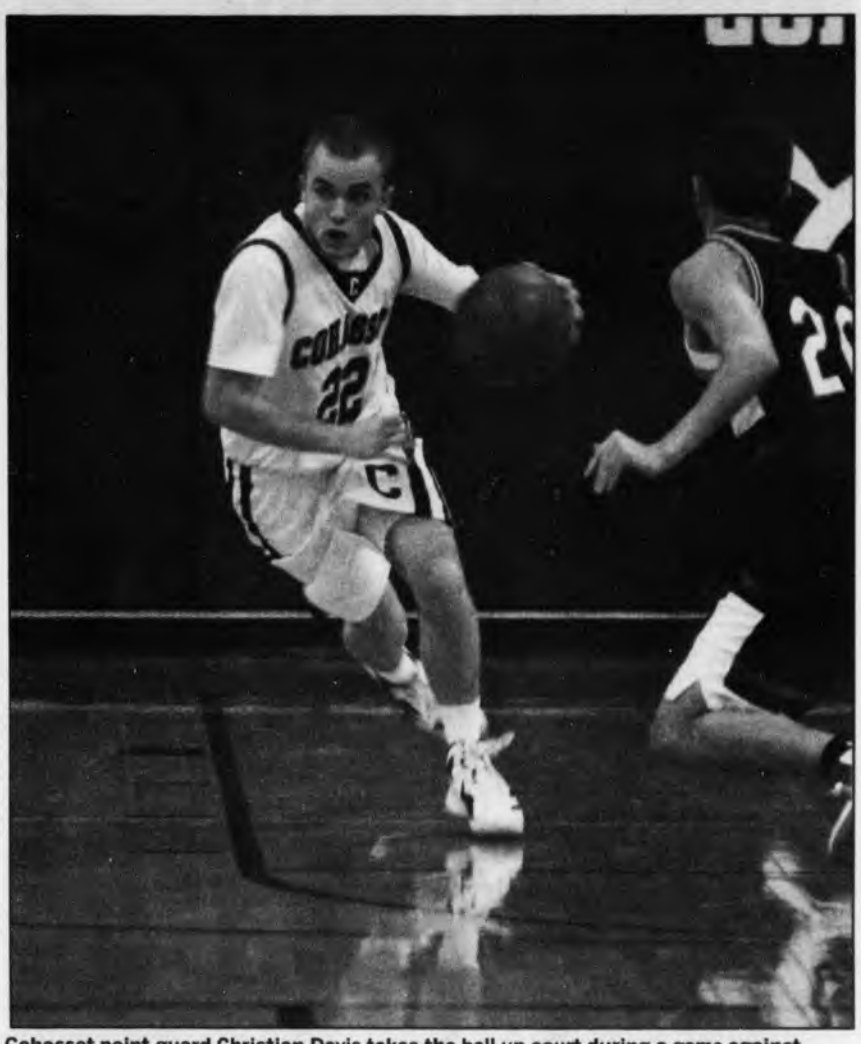
Kyrel Jaundoo had a big game with 16 points and 10 rebounds and Robbie Mahoney chopped in 13 points and 11 boards.

Seven players scored for Cohasset.

One big factor that has gone in the Skippers' favor this season has been free throws.

Cohasset is making them, especially late in games.

"We were 20-of-26 from the free throw line," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero said. "If we keep that up, it keeps us in games."



Ruggiero said his team has been playing well.

"We've done a nice job the past few games," he said. "Now we have three in a row at home. We have Mashpee, East Bridgewater and Abington at home."

The wins improved the Skippers to 6-2 for the season.

Ruggiero credited his young team, that lost two stars, Sam Richardson and Robert Jones to graduation, for maturing quickly.

"The guards are getting more experience," he said. "And Shane makes me a good coach."

BEST GAME: Scored 14 points, including a key three-pointer in a 36-30 win over Abington. He also scored 30 points in a 51-38 win over Chatham, although that game was in January and didn't count in the vote for December's AOM.

Haggerty has filled much of the scoring void left by Robert Jones and Sam Richardson and has been able to ice games with clutch free throw shooting and consistency from the free throw line.

Strong down the stretch

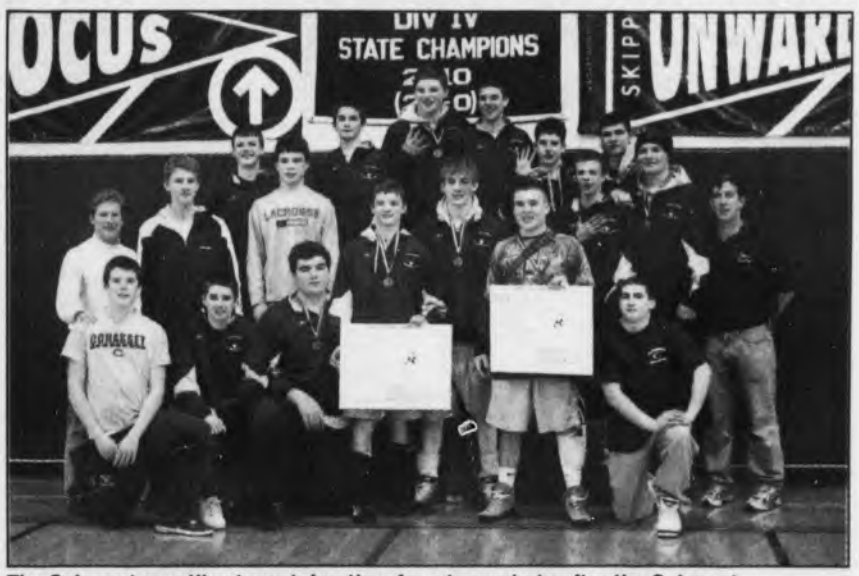
Skippers fare well at own tourney

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset wrestling team celebrated the 20th anniversary of their Cohasset Invitational Wrestling Tournament with a solid fifth-place finish in the 11-team field and was another positive in what has been a very good season for the Skippers.

Cohasset placed 10 wrestlers in the top eight, and had two winners, two second place finishers and a third place.

Senior captain Gus Helbock had a huge tournament at 132.



"Gus beat Dana Batista from Nauset," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "He was the No. 1 seed. Gus beat him 3-2 in what was probably the most exciting match of the night."

Helbock improved to 17-3 for the season with the tournament victories.

Also claiming gold was Derek Froio at 152.

Norwell/Cohasset remains perfect

Girls beat Brockton, improve to 2-0

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The 2012 portion of the season began exactly the way 2011 ended, with a victory and with Norwell/Cohasset sitting comfortably with a perfect record.

Monday's 121.4 -112.7 win over Brockton at Spectrum Gymnastics improved the team's record to 2-0 on the season. Amber Silvia finished first in the all-around with a 31.9, and teammate Christina Tedeschi took second with a 29.7.

Silvia won the bars with a 7.9 and the floor with an 8.3. She came in second on both the vault (7.9) and beam (7.8).

Emma Basso finished second on the bars (7.7) and third on the floor (8.0), while Kelsey McCunney tied for third on the bars with a 7.4.

South Shore hoop notebook

It was another great week of high school basketball on the South Shore. Teams are starting to separate themselves from the pack and make claim for their conference title and a birth in the state tournament. Message to all the seniors out there; enjoy every moment of your final season. We have a saying in Weymouth called LAST PLAY. You cannot be quiet, you can't be unemotional you play every play as if it were your last, or it will be. Enjoy the games and practices, but take a moment to really let all the little things sink in. The bus rides, pasta fests and shootarounds. Good luck to all!!

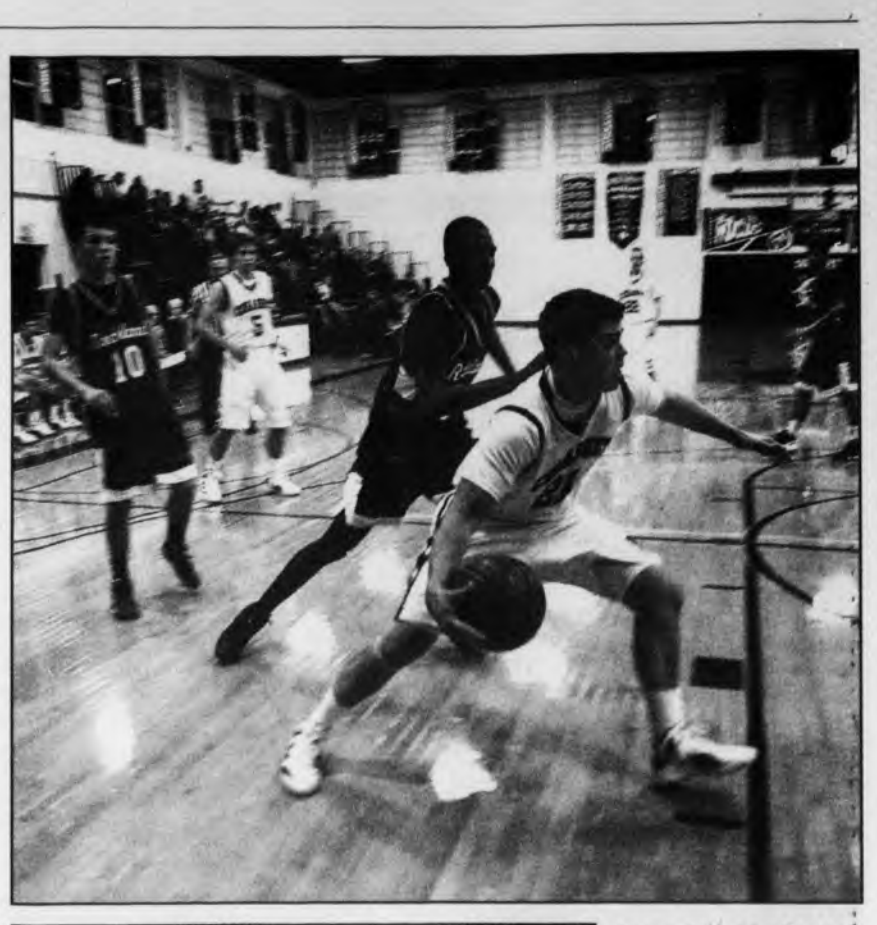
Outstanding Performances:

Damian Lugay of Weymouth scored 31 points in a 73-61 victory over Wellesley
Jackie Sullivan of Duxbury hit a game winning shot to lead the Dragons past Silver Lake
Tyler Gibson (Rockland) had 31 points and 15 rebounds in a win over Carver
Nick Volpe led Norwell with 22 points and 14 rebounds as the Clippers beat Abington
Dan Palmer of Scituate led the way with 32 points in a 67-54 win over Quincy
Braintree Center Pat Delano led Braintree over Milton with 29 points and 15 rebounds
Brenna Diggins of Norwell had a career high 31 points in a 63-62 win over Harwich
Shannon Brady led Scituate to a non-league win over Cambridge with 20 points

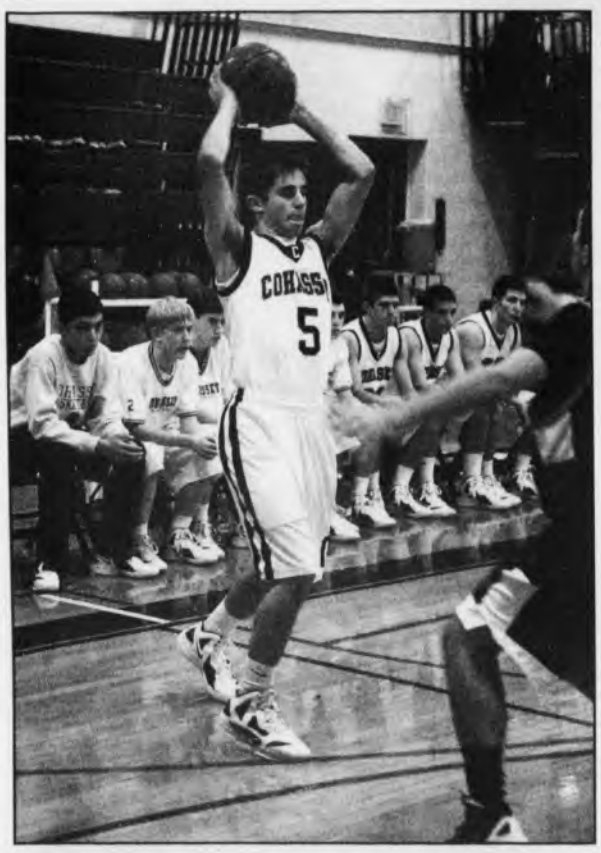
South Shore Coaches Poll

Boys – Braintree 4-2, Marshfield 5-1, Norwell 6-0, Rockland 7-1, Weymouth 6-0
Girls – Abington 7-1, Braintree 6-0, Marshfield 7-1, Norwell 7-2, Scituate 5-0
(Due to difference in divisions teams are listed in no particular order.)

Games To Watch:



Boys
Friday, Jan. 13: Hanover (3-3) travels to Hingham (4-2) in what should be an exciting match-up. I really like what Coach Molloy and Coach Kniffen have done with their programs.



Girls
Friday, Jan. 13: Weymouth (4-3) will host BSL rival Needham as the Lady Wildcats look to get back to the tournament.

Where Are They Now:

Former Weymouth captains and members of the 2011 Bay State League Champions, Patrick Deegan and Jon Perez, have both continued their basketball careers at the next level. Perez is playing at Salem State while Deegan is at Connecticut College.

Jim Dolan is currently in his ninth season as the Weymouth boys' varsity coach.

NDA skiers capture first place

With the first two races cancelled due to lack of snow, the Cougars were itching to get into the gates and start their quest for a 14th league championship.

The Notre Dame Academy ski team's 2012 season got off to a strong start Saturday at Ragged Mountain in New Hampshire with a convincing first place finish in the opening Ski East League race.

With the first two races cancelled due to lack of snow, the Cougars were itching to get into the gates and start their quest for a 14th league championship.

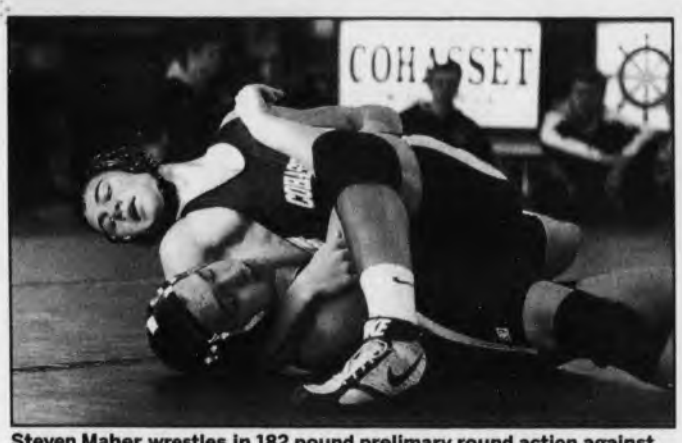
NDA is coming off their best season ever, winning every race on the way to the Ski East Championship, and topping it off with the best ever finish in the MIAA state championships with a third place finish. The first race of the season was a two run giant slalom on very soft snow on top of boiler plate ice.

Coming in first overall for the girls was junior Amelia Brown. Brown, who is the two time defending Ski East Champion as well as the MIAA state individual slalom champion last year, laid down two blistering runs on the way to a combined time of 51.15 seconds and the first place overall finish. Coming in fourth place overall was senior captain Marie Gilman (Cohasset), who was a big part of last seasons Ski East championship and great finish at states.

Gilman had two very fast runs and gave her a combined time of 52.47. Coming off an incredible first varsity season as well as qualifying for last years states was junior Erin Murray, with a fantastic two run time of 56.16, good for sixth place overall. It was Murray's best finish ever in a Ski East race. Coming in 7th place overall was junior Audrey Madigan. The Milton native put down two great runs to finish with an overall time of 56.41. Finishing in 10th place overall was sophomore Victoria Mulkern with an impressive combined time of 57.26.

Mulkern's first season last year was very successful as she qualified for the states and finished 7th overall in Ski East for the season. Grabbing the final scoring points for NDA was junior Katie McNamara with a 13th place overall finish and a combined time of 57.99.

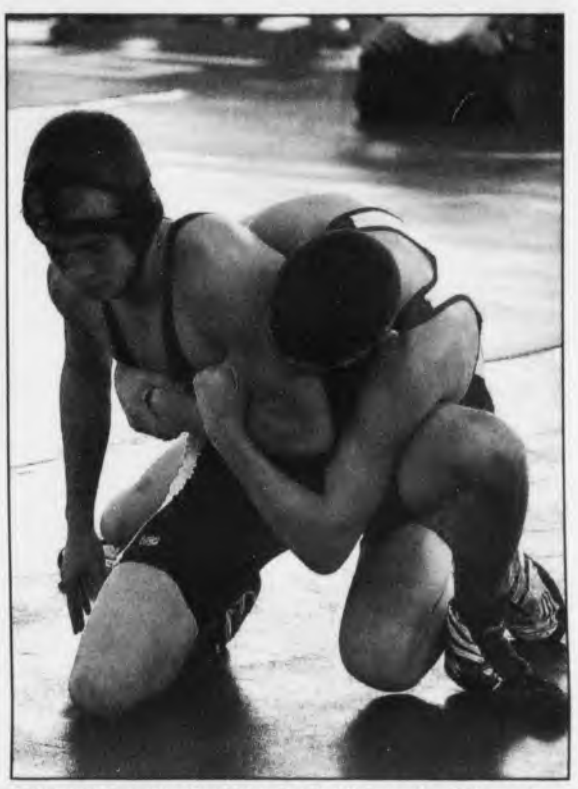
Junior Grace Petro was right behind McNamara with a 14th place finish and a time of 58.17. Petro was another reason for NDA's fantastic 2011 season and the best showing ever at states.



Freshman Julia Flanagan had an impressive first ever varsity race for the Cougars finishing in 17th place overall with a very fast time of 59.65.

Mimi Teixeira had a great first ever varsity race as the sophomore finished in 24th place overall with a time 62.29. Junior Brooke Morley, coming off a great sophomore year in which she qualified for states, finished with a time of 62.37, good for 25th place overall.

Notre Dame finished with a total of 41 points, far ahead of second place Hingham High school with 119 and third place Needham with 171. Natick, Norwell, Belmont, Scituate, Cohasset, Hanover and Sacred Heart finished third through 10th respectively.



The Cohasset Ski Team came away big this weekend in Girls Alpine Skiing at Ragged Mountain. Sophomore Mackenzie Axelson captured third place in a very competitive field and freshman Caty Gilman was fifth, just behind her sister Marie Gilman, a senior at Notre Dame Academy. For the Boys Hollis Hunnewell came in 47th and Ross Erler finished 58th. The team is small but growing. COURTESY PHOTO

Gieke in the final to take the title.

"It was a great win for him," Sweeney said. "He did a great job."

Froio won three matches in the tournament to improve his season record to 15-2.

At 145, senior Graden Foley finished second.

"Graden lost to Holliston's Tim Lemieux," Sweeney said. "It was a real back and forth battle."

Mike Yerardi also finished in second place at 285.

"Mike lost to Nauset's All-State champion," Sweeney said. "He beat two really good heavyweights to get there. The Tri-County kid was 16-1. Mike beat him in overtime. He also beat Norwell's heavyweight who was a returning Sectional Finalist. Those were two big wins for him."

Junior Mike Livingstone went 4-1 to stake a third-place finish in the 195 division.

"Matt Froio avenged a loss to a Norwell kid who beat him Wednesday night," Sweeney said. "He came back and beat him Saturday."

The Skippers had three wrestlers finish fifth.

Sophomore Harry Helbock (108), Greg Berube (120), Joe Sestito (128) and Steven Maher (182) all finished fifth.

"I'm very pleased," Sweeney said. "The kids wrestled very well. I thought we'd finish about where we did. The teams ahead of us are very good, experienced, senior laden teams."

Tri-County finished first, followed by Lynnfield, Holliston and Nauset.

While he didn't place, Sweeney had a word for Chris Brash, who wrestled at 172.

"Chris is doing a great job as a senior leader," Sweeney said. "He's helped the young kids who are coming on strong."

The schedule doesn't get easier.

The Skippers, who are 9-5 as a team this season, face New Bedford, Pembroke, Hanover and Quincy at New Bedford on Saturday, then host a Super Quad with eight teams and four league matches Jan. 21 at 10 a.m.

There's also a league match with Rockland next Wednesday night.

"We should be challenged the next few weeks," Sweeney said. "I think we're ready to make some srides and get some wins. I'm looking forward to it."

LIFE AT CHS

Looking forward to 4-day weekend

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

In two weeks, the first semester will be over. For seniors, that means our last semester of high school is beginning. How weird is that?

Congrats on making it through the first full week of school since the week of December 5th and happy long weekend! Now we can all relax until Wednesday. Although we just finished vacation, I feel like this 4-day break is much needed. On Monday we all woke up to a blanket of snow on the ground — the first we've seen all winter. Unfortunately, it had all washed away by the time we stepped outside of school. It finally feels a little bit like winter; however, I just wish it would snow more, considering we are long overdue for a snow day.

In two weeks, the first semester will be over. For seniors, that means our last semester of high school is beginning. How weird is that? After we all finish with midterms, finals, and last-minute cram-sessions, new classes will give us a fresh start. Unless, of course, you're stuck in year-long AP or English classes...

This weekend was crazy busy with sports. On Saturday, the wrestling team hosted an all-day match with 11 teams at the high school. We had three wrestlers in the finals, congrats guys! Also on Saturday, the girls' ice hockey team made the long trip to Martha's Vineyard. Despite a loss by a narrow margin, the girls returned home in high spirits as the game was much closer than the last time the teams matched up a week ago. The boys' hockey team, boys' basketball team, and boys' and girls' swim teams also competed on Saturday. Check out the Sports Section for more information on these intense match-ups.

On Tuesday, the girls' basketball team lost to Harwich in overtime. The boys also played Harwich. The gymnastics team had a Monday night meet in Brockton and a Thursday meet against Notre Dame Academy. The swim team had back-to-back meets on Wednesday and Thursday. Come see the boys' basketball team play league rival Mashpee tonight at home! The JV game starts at 5 and the Varsity tip-off is at 6:30. It's guaranteed to be a great game.

Yearbook write-ups were due on Tuesday, so if you are still slacking and have yet to turn them in, do so as soon as possible so you can have a chance of being in the yearbook. Parents' ads are due on the 31st and other pictures can be submitted online by February 1st.

The Junior-Senior Semi Formal Dance is coming up! Make sure to purchase your tickets ASAP or it could be cancelled.

That's it for this week Cohasset. Have an awesome MLKJ Weekend hanging out with friends leaving to go back to college, studying for your midterms/finals, and relaxing!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

GIMME SHELTER

Can you open your heart for Lola?

Lola wants to be an only cat and needs a lot of attention. COURTESY PHOTO

Lola is now ready for a new home and would make a great companion for someone who is willing to give her the attention she craves.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Lola, a white with gray, three-year-old, shorthaired female.

Lola is quite large, not overweight, just "big boned." She was surrendered when the couple she lived with, had a baby and Lola was very jealous. She was quite angry when she came to the shelter last June. She does not get along with other cats and would have to be an only. She is now ready for a new home and would make a great companion for someone who is willing to give her the attention she craves. She's quite lonely, but is patiently waiting for that special someone to take her into her home and her heart. Please stop by and visit this lovely lady.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

NUTRITION

It's that time of year

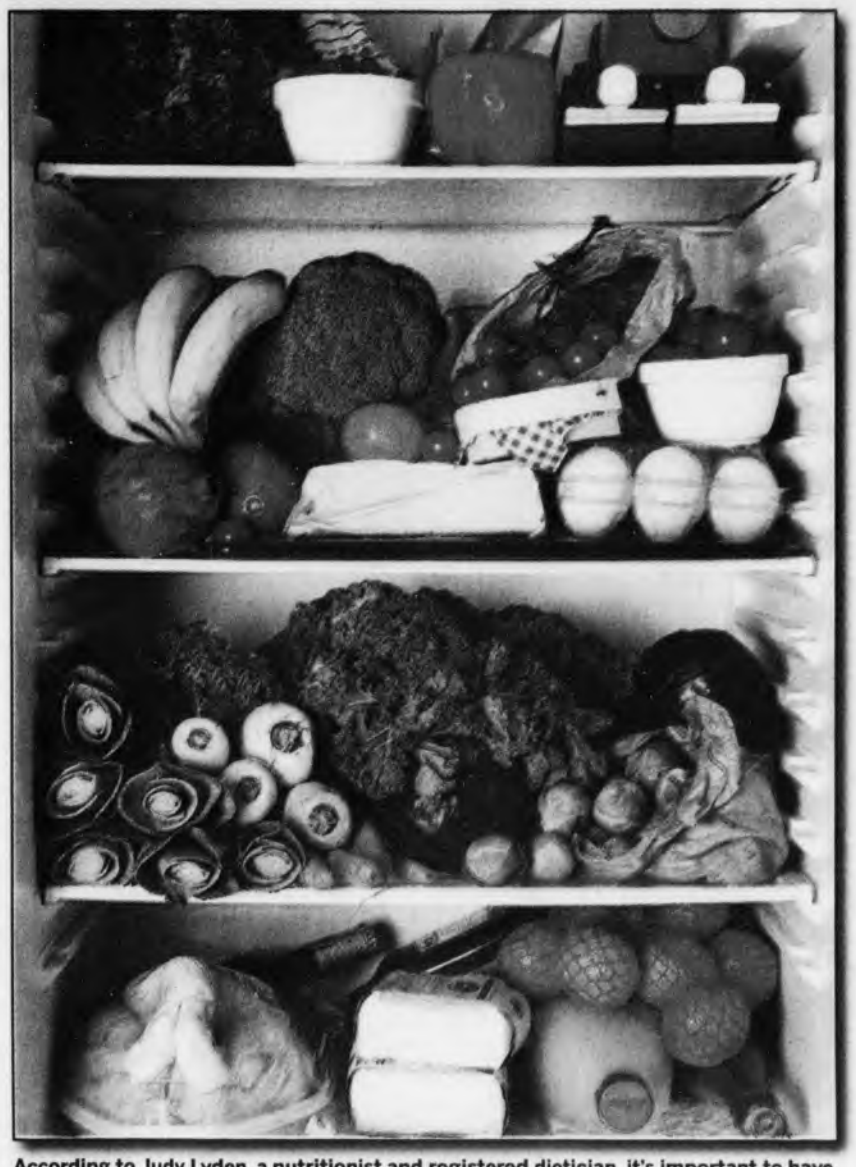
Design a weight loss plan that will work for you

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

Now that the New Year is upon us, it's time to find a way to stick to those resolutions you made on New Year's Eve. If you're like most Americans, you probably vowed to eat less junk food and exercise more but often those resolutions fall by the wayside by mid-February. It's time to take charge and make lifestyle changes to ensure general nutrition becomes a bigger factor in your life.

"One of the most popular New Year's resolutions is to eat healthier, but, for many of us, we are either too busy or too tired to make healthy choices and we reach for something that is quick and convenient," Tom Drummond, the owner of Ideal Weight Loss in Pembroke, said. "This is not always the healthiest choice. Once a person decides 'OK, I'm really going to make some changes and make a commitment to lose the weight and make nutrition on the forefront,' it can be a daunting task. We teach people how to understand food and food combinations. The Ideal Weight Loss Plan is a medically supervised four-phase program that reduces calories, carbohydrates and fats while maintaining the right amount of protein, to ensure optimal nutrition for weight loss, and achieve a healthy weight. Clients are given an eating plan specific to their health needs, with guidelines of what to eat and what to avoid, as well as when to eat. Weekly visits with a health coach are also an important part of the process to provide support and guidance throughout the program. We truly believe that this is 'your last diet' because you learn how to eat and you are guaranteed results."

Dr. Loren Ross, of Ross Chiropractic in Hingham, has a simple approach to diet and weight loss.



"You have to burn more calories than you are taking in," he said. "It's really important to have a balanced diet but you need to control portions. To do this, you have to eat less and exercise more. It's something everyone knows they have to do but it's tough to actually do it. If you have some form of counseling, that can keep you motivated through the rest of the year."

Rebecca Sauer of Wicked Good Chiropractic in Mansfield agrees with Ross.

"Nutrition will improve your quality of life and prevent diseases like Type 2 diabetes," she said. "We offer several weight loss programs and have one designed for people needing to lose more than 25 pounds and another geared to someone with health issues like celiac disease. A weight-loss program is safer than jumping into a fad diet. We teach our clients how to be healthy."

Judy Lyden, a nutritionist and registered dietician, believes in the power of positive thinking.

"We have several patients coming in now saying they want to set new goals but we tell them they need to be happy now during the process," she said. "It's important to focus on being content now so you don't cut yourself down. That's self-defeating thinking. We work on positive self-messaging. It's important to have a plan in place and a refrigerator full of the right foods. You may have to spend some time on the weekends to batch cook. It's all about changing your behaviors and habits while getting into a routine and building exercise into your schedule. It really is a commitment."

HOME

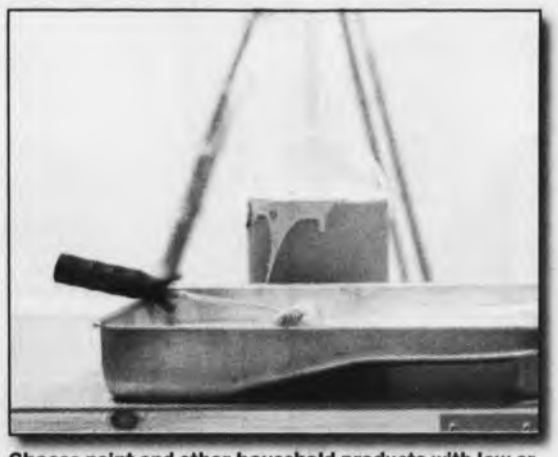
Healthy home, healthy family

Maintaining a healthy home is critical for your family's welfare – especially now as the weather cools and you begin to spend more time indoors. Applying a few simple solutions now will ensure your indoor living environment is safe and healthy for seasons to come.

Reduce toxins
Less desirable weather outdoors may make winter seem like an ideal time to tackle your indoor painting projects. However, you need to be mindful of the volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, found in many interior paints and finishes. VOCs are one of the biggest threats to indoor air quality because they include a variety of chemicals, some of which may have both short- and long-term health effects. For indoor jobs, select paint or finishes with low or no VOCs to keep your air safer. Additionally, some houseplants, such as ivy and gerbera daisies, can help naturally remove VOCs from your indoor air.

Remodeling? Redesigning?
When tackling a remodeling project or even redesigning your décor, it's important to consider all of the compounds you'll be using.

"You want to think about what you're putting into your home more than anything else," Nicole Goldman, founder of gGreen Design Center with locations in Mashpee and Boston, said. "We spent the larger part of the 20th century tightening up our houses to reduce air flow and we'll spend the 21st century trying to get the chemicals out."



"It's important to reduce the amount of chemicals in products that we bring into our homes," said Goldman, who will be presenting at the Be Healthy Boston conference Jan. 28 and 29 at The Westin Boston Waterfront.

"Urea formaldehyde is the biggest offender. It's in many, many products," Goldman said, noting its presence in adhesives, carpeting, countertop materials, paints, furniture, cabinetry and more.

"These are all off-gassing," Goldman explained. "The smell goes away but the chemicals continue to off-gas for many, many years.

gGreen specializes in all green building: products that are eco-friendly, energy efficient and promote healthy living, Goldman said. When building or remodeling, there are non-toxic, durable options for materials that won't introduce chemicals into your home.

And that's the best option you can choose.

Choose paint and other household products with low or no volatile organic compounds to keep your home, and yourself, healthy. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

Clean your indoor air
Ragweed and pollen trigger allergy symptoms for millions of people in the fall, but the worst allergy triggers are often found inside the home. Installing a whole-home air filtration system can help to remove indoor allergens including dust, mildew, pet dander and pollen from the air you breathe. A whole-home air filtration system keeps indoor air clean by removing up to 99.98 percent of allergens from filtered air and reduces dust accumulation in the home by more than 50 percent.

Prevent mold
During the winter months, people tend to seal their homes from the cold and spend more time inside, which traps moisture and humidity – significant contributors to indoor mold growth. Maintain healthy indoor humidity levels by venting bathrooms and clothes dryers, and using an exhaust fan while cooking. Install an air humidifier to provide year-round control of your indoor moisture level, and keep your home at 50 percent humidity or lower, to reduce the chance for mold growth.

Protect against carbon monoxide
Protect your indoor living environment from carbon monoxide installing carbon monoxide detectors or alarms throughout your home. Make sure your home's heating system, including items such as a furnace or heat pump, vents and chimney, are inspected and serviced by a professional contractor. If there is a fireplace in your home, open the damper before lighting a fire to help prevent the buildup of potentially poisonous gases inside your home.

Keep a seasonal routine
Most homeowners already know it is important to test their smoke alarms on a monthly basis, but how often do you change the alarm's batteries? One way to keep track of alarm maintenance is to make battery-changing a seasonal activity. For example, replace the batteries in your smoke alarms and carbon monoxide twice annually when you reset your clocks for daylight-saving time.

By taking these simple steps now, you will create a safer and healthier home, allowing your family to relax and enjoy all the delights the season has to offer – both outdoors and indoors.

Kick it! Quit smoking for good

By Mazhar Jakhro, M.D.

Approximately 46 million people in United States smoke cigarettes. About one fifth of the adult population smoke, and more people smoke in the South Coast region than in the rest of the state of Massachusetts.

Tobacco use is the leading cause of preventable death and illness in Massachusetts and in the nation. More than 8,000 Massachusetts residents die each year from the effects of smoking. Tobacco kills more people each year than car accidents, AIDS, homicides, suicides and poisonings combined.

Nicotine dependence

Tobacco contains nicotine, which is the psychoactive drug that produces dependence. Nicotine dependence is the most common form of chemical dependence in the United States. Research suggests that nicotine may be as addictive as heroin, cocaine or alcohol. Examples of nicotine withdrawal symptoms include irritability, anxiety, difficulty concentrating and increased appetite.

Health benefits of smoking cessation

Smoking cessation lowers the risk for lung and other types of cancer. It also reduces the risk for coronary heart disease, stroke and peripheral vascular disease. Smoking cessation reduces respiratory symptoms, such as coughing, wheezing and shortness of breath. Smoking cessation reduces the risk of developing chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), one of the leading causes of death in the United States. Smoking cessation by women during their reproductive years reduces the risk for infertility and also reduces their risk of having a low birth weight baby.

Methods to quit smoking

Talk to your primary care doctor to learn about easy and successful ways to quit smoking. The proven effective treatment for smokers includes:

- Understanding nicotine addiction
- A commitment to smoke-free living
- Counseling and behavioral cessation therapies
- Cessation medications such as nicotine gums, patches or medications such as bupropion SR (Zyban) and varenicline tartrate (Chantix).

QuitWorks

Southcoast Hospitals Group is a leader in promoting smoking cessation through support programs at the hospital and through its QuitWorks collaboration with the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Southcoast Hospitals last year continued to be among the highest health care provider referrers to the QuitWorks program, referring 635 patients who were smokers. Southcoast also introduced a new program in its Emergency Departments that uses "brief negotiated interview" techniques to provide intervention and referrals for patients who may be at risk for any type of substance abuse, including QuitWorks referrals for patients who smoke.

The QuitWorks program is a fast and easy way to link patients who want to quit smoking with proven tobacco cessation services. Upon referral from a health care provider, counselors from the Massachusetts Smokers' Helpline contact patients and offer quit smoking services. Counselors also screen patients for eligibility for two weeks of free nicotine patches. Six months later, the Helpline evaluation team attempts to contact patients who completed an initial screener call. During this call, they assess smoking status and success with quitting.

Freedom from Smoking

The American Lung Association's "Freedom from Smoking" program, offered at Southcoast Hospitals Group, is for adults who are ready to quit smoking. It consists of eight, 90-minute sessions over seven weeks. It is focused almost exclusively on how to quit, not why to quit. The sessions are facilitated by an American Lung Association s trained facilitator and are offered in a small, group settings to ensure personalized attention. The program will help you gain control over behavior and includes a comprehensive variety of evidence-based cessation techniques.

Classes begin in January 2012 at a cost of $150 per person. Participant guide and support materials are included. Classes will be held at one of Southcoast's facilities. To register for this program, call the Southcoast Wellness Line at 800-497-1727.

Other smoking cessation programs available in Massachusetts

Many employers offer smoking cessation programs at the workplace. Help is also available through the following:

- 1-800-QUIT-NOW
- 1-800-CDC-INFO
- Massachusetts Tobacco Cessation & Prevention Program 617-624-5900

Seven tips to help you quit smoking

As we usher in the new year, many of us think about making lasting, positive changes in our lives, and countless Americans will make the New Year's resolution to quit smoking in 2012. Are you one of them?

While quitting smoking is extremely difficult – six out of 10 smokers require multiple quit attempts to stop smoking – preparing a quit-smoking plan can greatly improve a person's chance for success.

"Quitting smoking is the single most important step smokers can take to improve their health," Norman H. Edelman, M.D., chief medical officer of the American Lung Association, said. "The start of a fresh new year is a great time for smokers to implement their plan to quit smoking – and reap the health and financial benefits of a smokefree lifestyle."

What can you do to prepare?

Here are seven proven tips and resources from the American Lung Association that have helped thousands of people give up smoking for good:

- Talk to your doctor or pharmacist about the various types of treatments and different over-the-counter and prescription medications that are available to help you quit smoking.
- Look into the different options available to help smokers quit. Visit www.lung.org/stop-smoking or call 1-800-LUNG-USA (1-800-586-4872) for suggestions.
- Take time to plan. Pick your quit date a few weeks ahead of time and mark it on the calendar. If you can, pick a day when life's extra stresses are not at their peak, such as after the holidays. Mark a day on the calendar and stick to it. As your quit day approaches, gather the medications and tools you need and map out how you are going to handle the situations that make you want to smoke.
- Get some exercise every day. Walking is a great way to reduce the stress of quitting. Exercise is proven to not only combat weight gain but also to improve mood and energy levels.
- Eat a balanced diet, drink lots of water and get plenty of sleep.
- Ask family, friends and coworkers for their help and support. Having someone to take a walk with or just listen can give a needed boost.
- You don't have to quit alone. Help is available online and in your community. Consider joining a stop-smoking program like Freedom From Smoking (www.ffsonline.org) from the American Lung Association.

These seven proven tips and resources from the American Lung Association have helped thousands of people give up smoking for good.

"Smokers don't have to go it alone when they attempt to quit smoking," Edelman said. "In fact, research shows that people who develop a support system and use programs like Freedom From Smoking Online have greater success in quitting for good, compared to those who try to quit cold turkey."

Helping Americans quit smoking remains a public health priority for the American Lung Association. Its Freedom From Smoking group clinic program – which began in 1981 and includes a comprehensive variety of evidence-based cessation techniques – has helped hundreds of thousands of smokers quit. The American Lung Association more recently introduced Freedom From Smoking Online, a highly successful, self-paced online adaptation of the group clinic that is available 24 hours a day.

FINANCIAL

For optimum financial health, it's important to create a plan that defines your long-term goals and establishes a strategy to achieve them. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

Improve your financial health

Rules of the road for investors

Just as every new driver needs to learn the rules of the road in order to avoid harm and stay healthy, the same is true of investors. We all need to follow common sense, tried-and-true rules to keep our investments healthy. As an investor, you may sometime wonder what on earth is going on in the financial world. One day, the stock market is down 200 points; the next day it's up 300. One day, a scandal rocks a company; the next day, another firm declares a poor earnings report. Isn't there any completely smooth route for you to follow as you pursue a comfortable retirement and other key objectives?

Actually, there isn't. But you can help smooth out your journey by learning basic rules of the road for investors.

Here are a few to consider:

Create a plan

You can waste a lot of time, effort and money through haphazard investing. That's why you need to create a plan that defines your long-term goals and establishes a strategy to achieve them, taking into account your individual tolerance for risk and your time horizon.

Take action

The best plan in the world is useless unless it's implemented. Once you've set a course of action for yourself, follow through on it. Don't wait for the time to be right before you invest – because you can always find excuses to delay. The best time to get started is right now.

Stay invested

When the market is hot, it's easy to for people to keep on investing. After all, everyone else is doing it, with apparent good results. But it takes far more courage to continue investing during a long bear market, when so many people head to the sidelines. And yet, it's essential that you do stay invested, through good times and bad. Ultimately, the long-term performance of the investments you have chosen will have far more impact on your portfolio's success than the daily price fluctuations that are an inevitable part of investing.

Look for quality

Persistence in investing, by itself, isn't enough to help you reach your long-term goals. You also need to be investing in quality. Look for the stocks of those companies that have solid track records, strong management teams, competitive products and well-defined business plans. Of course, you'll experience ups and downs even in quality stocks – but if you hold them over time, you'll greatly increase your prospects for success.

Diversify your holdings

During any given market environment, some investments will be doing well, while others will not. You could try to pick the winners, but that's almost impossible to do with any degree of consistency. You'll be much better off by diversifying your dollars among a wide range of high-quality stocks, bonds, mutual funds, government securities and other vehicles. By staying diversified, you'll help cushion yourself against downturns affecting just one type of investment – and you'll multiply your opportunities of benefiting from assets that are performing well.

Review your plan

You should review your investment plans and strategies at least once a year. Your life will constantly be evolving – new job, new house, new children, etc. – and you may need to adjust your plans to accommodate these changes. If some of your investments no longer suit your needs, you'll need to find other opportunities. A qualified financial professional can help evaluate your situation and make appropriate recommendations on rebalancing your portfolio.

As you can see, there's nothing magic, or even terribly complex, about any of these rules of the road. However, to follow these guidelines, you'll need patience and perseverance. If you've got these traits, then you're well prepared for a fulfilling investment journey.

This article was written by Edward Jones and submitted by financial advisors Deborah and John Flanagan. For more information, visit their Edward Jones offices in Scituate or Cohasset, or you can reach Deborah at 781-545-5256 and John at 781-383-1996.

If you have made that New Year's resolution to get in shape, now just might be the best time to sign up for that gym membership you thought of over the holidays. Whether you need to shed a few unwanted pounds or just want to get into better shape, getting into the routine of going to a gym may be the step in the right direction that you need.

"Going to the gym is great for your health but it's also good socially, as well," Jill Murmes, owner of South Shore Athletic Club of Cohasset, said. "Our gym is different in that we don't have a corporate feel. It's more of a family feeling here. Some people benefit from self-motivators but we have trainers here who can help people get back on track. If you sign up for a class here, you get personal training within the class. Cardiovascular strength and performance is very important, especially as you get older."

If you are looking for something a little different than the typical gym model, head over to Koko FitClub.

"We're not a gym and we are unlike anything else in the marketplace," Craig McMahon, of Koko FitClub of Easton, Mansfield and Marshfield, said. "Koko FitClub is a new hybrid product. Most people are familiar with the typical gym environment and many people will go to the gym for three weeks and then stop going. Now that it's January, you see people sticking to their New Year's resolutions but a lot of times, people will go to the gym, then take a week off and donate their membership for the rest of the year. Life often gets in the way so they don't go to the gym."

McMahon believes it is important to get into a routine and stick with it to become successful.

"A personal trainer can be helpful because it holds that person accountable, but they are not always flexible with schedules. That's where Koko Fit fills the gap. We're like a gym but we're not per se. You can use the club, but we have a customized program for you that will keep you on track. You have to come in to see it and believe it. A person who comes to Koko Fit will receive a Koko key, which could be designed for a program from weight loss and diabetes to programs like skiing and even a beautiful bride. Each member has a key and that key is for one machine with 100 different exercises. You don't have to go from one machine to another, wipe it down or wait for the next machine. The machine you are working on tells you exactly what to do and how long to do it. Our program is set up for people to come in three times a week and we track strength gains and improvements so you can monitor your improvement."

Another affordable option is to join your local YMCA. The South Shore Y, with locations in Hanover, Quincy and Sandwich, offers a variety of fitness programs for adults, seniors, youth, teens, and individuals with disabilities. Fitness programs include aquatics; sports programs; tennis; health and well-being, like yoga, cycling and tai chi; strength training; personal and small-group training; among many others. Visit www.ssymca.org for additional information.

Koko FitCoaches are available to help members with proper form and to stay on track.

Rethink resolutions

Changes for a better way of life

As each year comes to a close and the new one begins, people tend to make resolutions – typically, vowing to lose weight, get a new job or save money. This year, consider different kinds of resolutions – the kind that you will want to keep. Making resolutions that enrich your life for the long term might just be the ones you need. Setting simpler goals such as carving out more family time, reconnecting with friends and taking care of yourself will give you a sense of well-being and accomplishment. Start 2012 on the right foot, with some creative ideas for New Year's resolutions.

Help the environment

• Growing concern for the environment prompts many people to resolve to be more green. Your refrigerator runs all day, every day, which accounts for a large percentage of your home's energy usage. Keeping your refrigerator's thermostat set between 38 and 42 degrees will help save energy and keep your food from spoiling.

Give to others or volunteer

• Clean out your closets and collect any gently used items you and your family no longer use or need. There are a number of national and local organizations that accept clothing donations; some will even pick up the items directly from your home. Several veterans' organizations accept both clothing and small household goods. For details, visit www.clothingdonations.org. The Big Brothers Big Sisters organization offers opportunities for mentoring and volunteering, as well as donating. For more information, visit www.bbbs.org. Beyond clothing, consider giving previously used toys, games, books or craft materials to a local hospital or day care center.

Learn something new

• Maybe you have always harbored that inner artist or chef or ballroom dancer. Indulge and enrich yourself by taking advantage of the wealth of adult education classes offered in your community. Both the Plymouth Center for the Arts and the South Shore Art Center offer beginner classes in drawing, painting, ceramics and photography. In addition, the South Shore Art Center is approved by the Massachusetts Department of Education as a provider of professional development points. Many local adult education programs offer fitness and exercise classes as well as enrichment courses in foreign languages, cooking and computers. Weymouth adult education offers a timely course in caring for the elderly, while the Hingham Community Center is the unofficial home of the South Shore Men of Harmony – for the aspiring vocalist. Consider a membership in the YMCA, taking advantage of its first-class facilities and numerous class options.

Consider online education

• Enrollment in online education has grown exponentially over the past decade. Many schools offer flexible and part-time scheduling, which makes it easier to complete a course. However, the journey back to the classroom can be daunting, particularly for adults trying to balance work and family. Learning how to manage your time by planning your weekly schedule in advance and blocking off a specific time dedicated to homework and study can help make online learning a success. Online sites such as the Online Education Database, at http://oedb.org, offer detailed information on online education sites, while U.S. News & World Report provides important information to consider before you commit to online education. Visit www.usnews.com/education/online-education to get the facts.

Rethink housework

• The last thing you want to do is spend precious free time on housework. Look for products and tools that streamline the job, keeping cleaning time to a minimum, and making more time for your family and friends. Take a look at your home and challenge yourself to tackle home improvement projects on your own. Think big and finish an unfinished basement, build an outdoor play space for the kids or renovate a bathroom. Not only will you conquer do-it-yourself fears, but also any revamp of your home will add to its value and resale potential.

New Year's resolutions can be a challenge. Set yourself up for success by setting realistic goals, and do not be afraid to break bigger goals into a series of smaller steps, to avoid feeling overwhelmed. It has been said that four out of five people who make New Year's resolutions eventually break them. Make this the year your resolutions become a new way of life.

FAMILY

Caregivers need care, too

The importance of respite for family caregivers

Every caregiver needs respite time if she or he is to last. It may be hard to think of yourself and your needs at this time, but if you don't, your life will be consumed by your duties and you will burn out. Respite – a temporary break from responsibility – is not a luxury, it is a necessity.

Your friend or relative's level of disability determines whether he or she can be left alone and for how long. Care options include:

• Asking a family member or friend to stay with the patient for an hour or two
• Taking him or her to an adult day health care facility
• Employing a professional sitter or healthcare aide for a few hours a week or month
• Hiring a college student (if skilled care is not needed) to stay with him or her
• Enrolling the person in your care in a support group

Check with your local area agency on aging for respite-care programs in your area. Larger churches often have outreach programs that include respite care.

However you are able to arrange for some help – and it will take some effort on your part, it won't happen by itself – commit to taking some time at least once a week to do something for yourself.

Note: To make this happen you will have to defend this time because other things will demand to be made a priority. If you do not defend your respite time, you will not get it or the renewal it generates. Remember, caregiving is a marathon, not a sprint – respite time helps you finish the race.

Other ways for caregivers to reduce stress

• Learn to say no. Good boundaries improve relationships.
• Control your attitude: Don't dwell on what you lack or what you can't change.
• Appreciate what you have and can do.
• Go on a TV diet. Find simple ways to have fun: Play a board game, organize family photos, listen to music you enjoy, read the biography of an inspiring person.
• Learn a time-management tool, like making a to-do list (specifically include items that you enjoy).
• Knowledge is empowering; get information about your survivor's condition.
• Limit coffee and caffeine.
• Find a support system and nurture it.
• Share your feelings with someone who wants to listen.
• Keep a gratitude journal – record three new things you are grateful for every day.
• Memorize an inspiring poem.

Note: The No. 1 thing you can do to improve your situation is to acknowledge your role. A survey of family caregivers by the National Family Caregivers Association showed that spouse caregivers often refuse to accept that caregiving is a separate role from their role as spouse. The survey found that shifting this attitude – accepting that caregiving is a separate role – had a profound impact on their situation.

The job of long-term caregiving is too big for one person – no matter how much love the caregiver has for the care receiver. Ask for and accept help from as many sources as you can find.

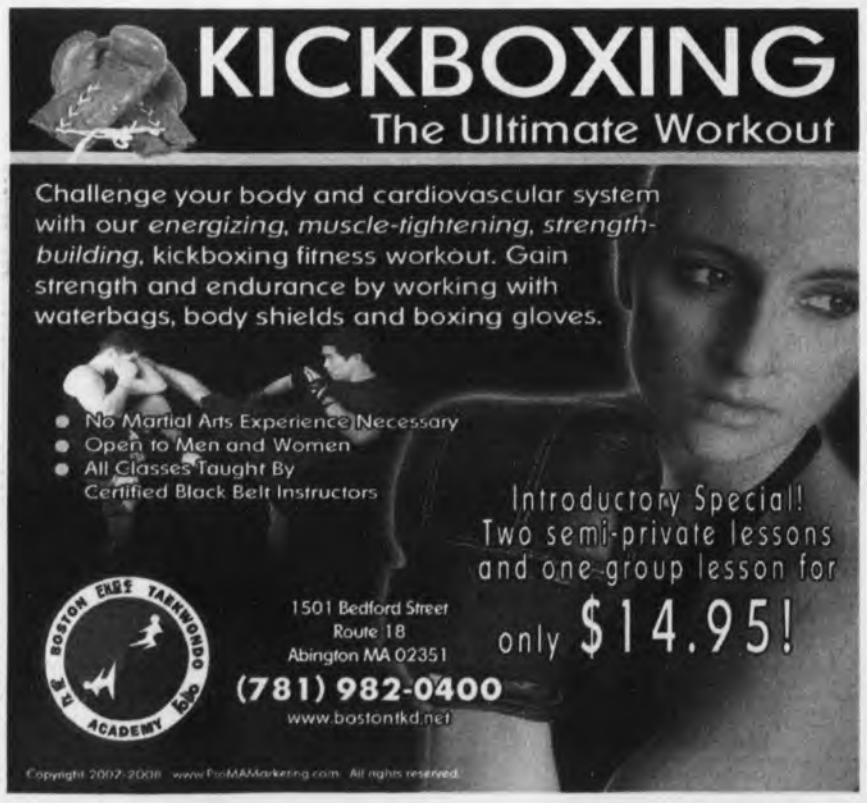
Caregivers should create a respite zone where they can enjoy an activity that helps reduce the stress of taking care of a friend or relative. PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

How caregivers can create their own respite zone

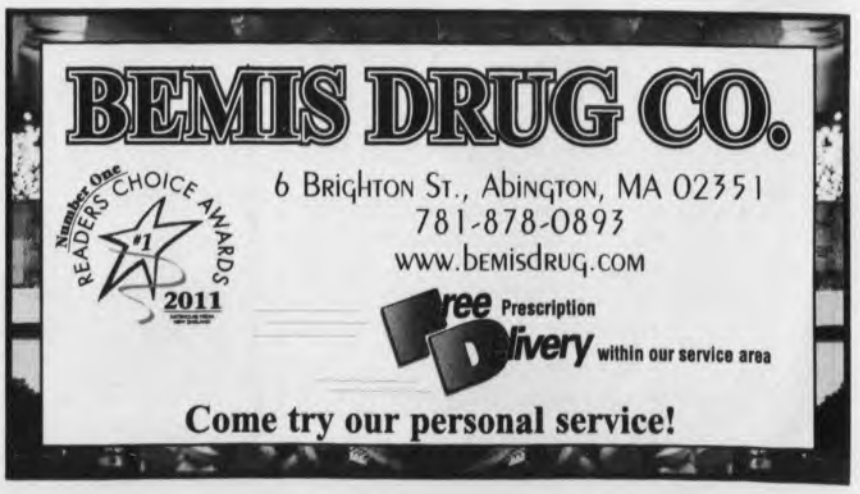
A respite zone is an area within your home set aside just for you, the caregiver. The idea is that this is your space. It can be your bedroom, the spare room, an office or even a bench outside in the garden or on a porch. This is a place for you to take a break while the person in your care rests or is taken care of by someone else.

When creating your respite zone, take the following into consideration:

• Keep in mind what you want to do there. Reading? Painting? Writing? Gardening? Bubble bath?
• Identify the time you can get respite and how you will use it. Is it during the care receiver's naptime, when someone spells you? If you can only get a break at night after the person you're caring for is in bed, gardening probably won't be your respite.
• Identify free space in your home. Porches are good candidates, a spare room is perfect, maybe a corner of your bedroom. A screen can give you privacy if you can't close the door.
• Modify the space according to your needs. Whether it be a reading chair with a lamp or a stereo headset, keep whatever is necessary for your respite activity.



The goal is to give you a place of your own where you can find enjoyment in your own home and life. If searching the Internet is fun for you, your zone will be different from someone who wants to take a bubble bath and listen to soft music. Creative projects such as painting, sewing, writing, baking, gardening and photography are excellent ways to absorb your attention and take your mind off your responsibilities.



Your respite zone should be just for you. You need to feel secure that your things are safe and will not be disturbed or discarded. It is important for your care receiver to understand that this space is yours.

Taking care of a debilitated family member or friend who may not recover completely can be an all-consuming job. However, if you allow it to consume all of you, what will happen to the person in your care when you collapse?

Respite care is not a luxury. It is necessary for the well-being of the person in your care and for you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

BUDGET

Schools make some adjustments

The School Committee discussed the latest budget figures during their Wednesday night meeting. A few things have changed since School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro presented the proposed operating budget for fiscal year 2013 two weeks ago.

While the initially proposed budget does not include any cost of living increases (the figures were left out due to pending union negotiations), the updated numbers dictate a level service budget versus a level funded one.

"I feel that it's only proper that the town, in its budget, reflects the priority of its community. Number one is education — it's our future."
Town Manager Mike Coughlin

The latest proposal "has increases where necessary," said DeGennaro. "It does include steps and column increases where appropriate."

The next fiscal year's proposed budget is a 3.13 percent increase over fiscal year 2012. However, the budget is still fluid and will continue to be updated, DeGennaro said.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin attended the meeting to tell the school board that he hopes the town and schools can work together to agree on a budget "that makes sense."

"I feel that it's only proper that the town, in its budget, reflects the priority of its community. Number one is education — it's our future," Coughlin said.

The town manager added that he believes the town needs to give the new Superintendent, Barbara Cataldo, "the tools she needs for her vision," in order to help the schools "maintain the excellence you've achieved."

"The new person coming in needs to have the ability to

Butting heads over budget

The citizens of Cohasset keep hearing that the town has turned a financial corner; but, apparently, that all depends on who you talk to.

Both the Budget Planning Group and four members of the finance department came before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night and presented their recommendations for the fiscal 2013 budget.

The Budget Planning Group consists of the Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore and Advisory member Nan Roth; chair and vice chair, respectively, of the Capital Budget Committee Steve Gaumer and Jack Keniley; School Committee members Paul Ognibene and Dr. Paul Schubert; along with selectmen Diane Kennedy and Leland Jenkins. Town Manager Mike Coughlin also regularly attends the group's meetings.

On Dec. 15, this group met without Coughlin, who wanted to reschedule because of a funeral he planned to attend in Worcester for a fallen firefighter. Members of the finance team couldn't attend the meeting either, since they were working around the clock to meet Department of Revenue submission deadlines (this was

$10,000 in jewelry missing

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 39-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station on Sunday after discovering that $10,000 in jewelry was missing from her Forest Avenue home.

She discovered the jewelry box containing her jewelry was missing from the top drawer in a dresser in her bedroom, police said.

Detectives are investigating. There was no evidence at the home of forced entry, police said. Also, the timeframe when the jewelry went missing is not clear, as the woman had not checked on her jewelry box recently.

MVAs

• A resident called police at 7:29 a.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 10) to report that a motor vehicle had hit a tree on upper King Street near Beechwood Street. When police arrived the car was gone. The DPW was called to sand that stretch of roadway, as the accident was weather-related.

• Police responded to a two-car crash at 7:40 a.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 11) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Tedeschi Plaza. A 2007 Pontiac Vibe, operated by a 29-year-old Scituate man, was headed north and attempted to pass a car that had slowed down to allow a motorist to exit the plaza. The Pontiac hit a 1999 Toyota Camry, operated by a 36-year-old Hull woman, who was attempting to pull out to make a left toward Scituate.

Neither car was towed and there were no reported injuries, police said. The Scituate man was cited for passing in a no-passing zone.

• 9-1-1callers reported a three-car crash at 8:40 a.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 11) on King Street (Route 3A) near Stop & Shop. Police said a 2010 Toyota Corolla, operated by a 75-year-old Hull man, was headed south and ran the red light striking at 1989 Chevrolet van, operated by a 55-year-old Cohasset man, that was pulling out of upper King Street on the green light. The Toyota careened off the van and went head-on into a third vehicle, a 2001 Volvo S60, operated by a 19-year-old Cohasset woman, that was sitting at the red light on the northbound side of Route 3A.

The 75-year-old man was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The Toyota and the Volvo were both towed. The Chevrolet was drivable, police said. The Hull man was issued a citation for running the red light and failure to stay in marked lanes. He told police he was taking some medication.

Police sent a report to the Registry of Motor Vehicles to have their medical affairs unit review the man's case and determine whether to give him medical clearance to drive again.

• At 9:54 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 13), a 55-year-old Scituate man in a 2006 Jeep Commander reported hitting a deer on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Schofield Road. Police responded and had to put the deer down. The Jeep had heavy front-end damage and had to be towed. The driver was not injured, police said.

No trespass

A woman, who owns a business in town, went to the police station last Tuesday (Jan. 10) for help with a no-trespass order. Police said a man, with whom she had been friendly in the past, kept coming into her store against her wishes.

Stalked

Last Tuesday (Jan. 10), a 21-year-old Cohasset woman spoke to police about being stalked by her former landlord, a 48-year-old New Bedford man. Police said it seemed as though he wanted a relationship and was making unwanted advances and she was not interested. Police contacted the man and told him to cease the behavior or he could be summoned to court for criminal harassment.

Lost jewelry

A 74-year-old Cohasset woman, who lives on N. Main Street, reported to police on Friday (Jan. 13), that she had had three items of jewelry appraised at a local jeweler's and now could not find the pouch that has the jewelry. She said she had the jewelry that was appraised at $750 when she left the store. She is not sure whether it was stolen or whether she had misplaced it.

Icy conditions

A livery vehicle called for assistance last Thursday (Jan. 10) at 6:43 a.m. because it was stuck on the hill on Black Rock Road due to icy road conditions. A DPW sander went to the area to help out, police said.

Winter parking ban is in effect

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations. Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

New officers appointed to CPD

Selectmen confirmed Town Manager Mike Coughlin's appointment of three new police officers Tuesday night's meeting: Michael Lopes, Chris Dias and Ian Hickey.

Lopes and Dias, who were serving as special police officers, were appointed, while Hickey was conditionally appointed pending a background check. Hickey's interview for the department was conducted while he was deployed in Afghanistan.

All three new officers said they were glad to serve Cohasset.

Lopes, who comes to the force from the MBTA Transit Police, called Cohasset a nice town and that he appreciated the opportunity to work here, having worked in town for six months as a special police officer.

Dias, who has been working part-time with the Suffolk County sheriff's office for two years, said that he loves being in Cohasset and is grateful for the opportunity to serve the community.

Hickey was born and raised in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High. He joined the Army National Guard in 2005 and has served in Iraq and Afghanistan. "I just got home," he told the board.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr congratulated the new officers on joining "the ranks of the wonderful people who serve our community."

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Cohasset offers self-defense R.A.D. class

By Officer Jay St. Ives
Special to the Mariner

Jay St. Ives has been a Cohasset police officer for three years. He became a R.A.D. (Rape Aggression Defense) instructor when he was a police officer with UMass Boston and has been an instructor for seven years. The Cohasset Police Department and Cohasset Recreation Department offered the R.A.D. class in cooperation with Deb Beal, coach and teacher at Cohasset Middle High School, and the Cohasset Social Service League.

What is the course?
The R.A.D. system teaches women about rape awareness, prevention, risk reduction, and avoidance while they build basic hands-on defense skills. The goal is to provide women with several options for self-defense so they can make an educated decision about resistance in case of attack.

R.A.D. course details
The first night of R.A.D. includes an overview and discussion of risk reduction and prevention. On the subsequent two nights students learn and practice physical defense moves. The final session is a simulation of an attack. (The students get to practice what they learned on instructors while they are dressed in self-defense suits) The course is a 12-hour commitment. Those that complete the course can return to any site free of charge where a class is held. Practice, practice, practice is encouraged.

CPD goals
The Cohasset Police Department adopted the R.A.D. training program as a proactive effort for the women in the area. We operate on the premise that a spontaneous violent attack will stimulate a natural desire to resist on the part of the victim. Our goal is to teach that physical defense is not only prudent, but also necessary if resistance is to be effective. The R.A.D. System empowers women to make their own decisions regarding self-defense options, and also provides an emotional support system to see them through the experience in the event of an attack.

Community involvement
I surrounded myself with the best instructors. All the police officers mentioned below are trained in sexual assault. Officer Kevin St. Ives (my brother) is a part-time Cohasset officer. He is also an EMT instructor.

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

Officer Din Jenkins is a full-time police officer with the BU Police Department. Din is also an EMT. Kevin has been a full-time police officer with BU for 10 years and Din has been an officer for seven. Also assisting was Sgt. Jeff Burke from BU. He has been teaching the course for over 15 years. He has been a police officer for more years than he'd like to admit. So it was my duty to offer this important class. And once it was approved I surrounded myself with the best.
Incorporating Deb Beal was an important part of the equation. She is well known in town and has a great reputation. Currently, we plan on offering the course again in May or June. The Cohasset Police Department would like to thank the Social Service League for their continued financial support in making this course happen. Stay tuned for a R.A.D. Kids class that will be coming soon. The current course we offer is designed for the ages of 16 to adult. But modifications to that requirement may be allowed.

around the time the tax rate was set), Coughlin said Tuesday.

While the town manager was away, the group recommended a level funded budget (with no money for fixed costs), which would not allow for any increases over fiscal 2012 in fiscal '13.

After receiving the group's recommendation, Coughlin went to each department head and asked them to prepare reports indicating how a level-funded budget would impact their budget. Department heads, from the police and fire chiefs to the directors of the Board of Health and Recreation Department, indicated that level funding would mean a major budget cut that the departments simply cannot afford.

"It's not necessary," Coughlin told the board of level funding. "We've had positive trends and will be conservative, and have been in our approach to turn things around."

Cohasset's brand new town finance director Mary Gallagher, for whom Tuesday was her first day on the job, explained how level funding does not work when there are increases beyond the town's control, including debt, pensions, health insurance and union contracts.

"There are costs that are going to go up no matter what," said Gallagher.

The rest of the finance team, consisting of consultant Eric Kinsherf (who has been acting as interim finance director since John Stanbrook left in October), interim treasurer/collector Dan Sullivan, and Deputy Assessor Mary Quill, also weighed in on the matter Tuesday night.

Kinsherf said that level funding for one department might mean different things to another department —"It isn't fair. Some things can't level fund."

Board members had questions for the "team" right off the bat. Selectman Kennedy wondered why this was dialogue was happening at a selectmen's meeting when, in her opinion, the Budget Planning Group and finance team should be sitting around a table comparing numbers. She said the meeting had turned into a "point/counterpoint" session between the two groups.

"It's not necessary. We've had positive trends and will be conservative, and have been in our approach to turn things around."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin on level funding

Coughlin countered that he wanted to do this at the Dec. 15 meeting but couldn't be there. He said he didn't want to split hairs over the fact that they met without him; he understood it was nearing the end of the year and they had to meet.

Following the budget planning group's presentation — with the entire committee present — during which they offered the basis for their recommending a level-funded budget, the finance team offered their rebuttal, explaining why level funding was not favorable.

Pescatore said the group is recommending level funding because the town "is not in a very strong financial condition."

If the trend of increased spending continues, Pescatore explained, the town will not stay within the 2012 budget, since over half of the budget has been spent at only the half-year mark.

"Only 43 percent of the budget is left to do 50 percent of the year," said Pescatore.

And while the finance department pointed to the good news of new growth and revenue from the Avalon Bay apartment complex and other new construction in town, the planning group was quick to point out that they were talking about expenditures.

One thing both groups agreed upon: the need to build up the town's stabilization fund. Gallagher pointed out that this year's mild winter may mean more money will remain in the emergency account.

Pescatore was concerned that there simply is not enough money in that reserve account, that in fact the account is lower than it has been in years. He feels the account should have at least $1 million in it, he told the board.

Coughlin pointed out that the reserve funds exist for a rainy day, and while he's all for adding to that account when the town can, over the last few years it's been necessary to draw from that account: "It has rained."

While the Budget Planning Group presented two fact sheets of numbers to the board, it turned out that not all of the numbers were accurate. They were still accounting for a $600,000 sewer deficit that had meanwhile been reconciled by the finance team. During the Dec. 15 meeting, the group was looking at the latest figures available at the time, up through Oct. 27; since then, an audit was performed on the sewer enterprise fund. The missing money from the fund has yet to be reimbursed by the state, but that will happen soon, according to Gallagher. The group seemed to sheepishly accept this new information. Keniley requested that they receive a new set of numbers at least a few days before their next meeting so the committee has a chance to go over it.

Because of the discrepancies between the Budget Planning Group and actual finance team, the numbers the budget committee presented to the selectmen were quite confusing. Coughlin even called them "cocktail party statistics," earning a rebuke from both Pescatore and Selectman Paul Carlson. Coughlin later apologized for the remark.

The town manager, however, was not afraid to put everything on the line to prove his point, going so far as to tell the selectmen that they hired him to right the ship in Cohasset; if he failed to do and he and the finance team do not succeed, then it will be up to the board to make a change.

"I know it's a difficult time and I've pushed people," said Coughlin. "We have turned a corner, but it will all be for naught if we don't permanently turn the corner. If the team doesn't win, the coach gets fired."

Coughlin added that he looks forward to sitting down with the Budget Planning Group to "lay these numbers on the table and have a dialogue on what the budget should be for the town."

Level funded vs. level services budget

Level funded budget: A budget based on the exact same amount of money spent in the current year.

Level services: A budget based on the exact same level of services delivered in the current year.

What this means for Cohasset: Level funding the budget would not allow for any cost of living increases for employees, despite the fact that costs are going up. While it seems to mean that the budget would remain the same, it would actually require departments to slash costs, sometimes dramatically. A level services budget would include these increases and allow departments to offer the same level of services without having to further cut costs and negatively impact their operations.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE BRIEFS

Dressage club is approved

The School Committee voted in favor Wednesday night of a new dressage club for Cohasset High students. Staff member Sally Davenport volunteered to oversee the club.

Acknowledging that Cohasset has had a long history of equestrian and dressage activities, the club was approved pending further review of insurance and liability concerns.

Although it is considered a sport, Athletic Director Ron Ford said that this club would not fall under the athletic department. Davenport added that students will attend training and competitions on their own.

School floor settlement news

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro updated the School Committee on the status of a settlement the schools received following litigation over the high school's tile floors.

The schools were given the settlement following damages that occurred during repairs last year.

DeGennaro said that the settlement funds have to be re-appropriated at the Spring Town Meeting. In the meantime, the school department will have to use their own funds to repair the floors and will be reimbursed by the settlement money.

DeGennaro plans to prepare a warrant article for the annual Town Meeting, which he will bring before the School Committee at the next meeting.

Roof survey report shared

The School Committee shared a Dec. 2011 report detailing the inspection of the Middle-High School roof by Tremco Roofing of Kingston, Mass. The assessment was conducted to find out whether the roof can handle solar panels.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said that while the report is helpful to assess the roof's condition, a structural engineer is still needed to evaluate the roof for a solar installation. DeGennaro has been working closely with the Alternative Energy Committee, who plans to interview solar power developers and find out if one of them would pay for an engineer.

While roof repairs and maintenance costs are expensive – over $1 million – the town will save on energy if these repairs are made, said School Committee chair Dr. Helene Lieb.

DeGennaro said that the solar project still has a long way to go. The matter will be back on the School Committee's agenda in the next few weeks.

CHS wins sports award

Cohasset Middle-High School was recently given the Boston Globe South Section Sports Award.

Athletic Director Ron Ford reported to the School Committee that Cohasset has won this award for three of the past seven years.

"Last year we won 66 percent of our games," said Ford. "It's a great accomplishment. Although it's not all about winning, sometimes these things come together."

The award was belated, Ford explained, due to a miscalculation indicating that Norwell had beaten Cohasset. The win-loss percentage was close, with Norwell at 65.80, just behind Cohasset's 66.13.

Ford said that it was great to see two local schools in the same league. The trophy will be on display in the trophy case.

"This is something the entire community can be proud of," said Ford.

Excuses Belong In 2011

By Elizabeth Johnson

2011 is officially over. And so is whatever baggage was holding you down and preventing you from reaching your goals. There is no need to haul any of that negativity into the New Year.

Consider for a moment the thoughts that run through your head on a daily basis: "There just isn't enough time"... "My family needs me to be here"... "I can't leave to go to the gym"... "I'm so tired by the end of the day as it is...never mind going to work out." And yet, the logical side of you knows that both making time for your health and being active allow you to give back more to your family in the long term.

Therefore, a reasonable conclusion is that all of these thoughts are just excuses. Excuses are merely roadblocks to reaching your goal. Start to notice when those thoughts pass through your head, and, for one day, write all of them down. Make a list of each one and how many times it comes across your consciousness.

Once you start to realize what your excuses are, you can see how they are preventing you from reaching your goals. You can start to debate with yourself, negate the excuses and take concrete actions toward the health and fitness results you've always wanted. Move in the right direction today and visit a Get In Shape For Women studio in your town. The manager there will help you think through your excuses, how they're holding you back, and work with you to create a framework for health and fitness success.

"Get In Shape For Women is a transformation studio for women where we offer small group personal training," explains President and CEO Brian Cook. "We don't accept excuses because we know that each and every client is a "10" in terms of commitment...and we do our part to get you the results you want."

Get In Shape For Women offers the positive energy and accountability that help you fight the excuses that pass through your head. The certified staff schedules appointments, motivates you through your workouts, and supports you with nutrition guidelines and one-on-one discussions. "As a stay at home mom with two young children, I felt I didn't have the time or energy to exercise and eat better. However, once I joined Get In Shape For Women, all my excuses disappeared. Set appointment times kept me committed to exercising regularly - each workout was always different from the last and I looked forward to new challenges. Following the diet and keeping track of what I ate helped me make better meal and snack choices. Having my weight loss recorded with each weigh-in kept me on track and motivated me to stick to the program. Every aspect of the program has helped me get in better shape faster than I thought possible - I've lost 20 pounds in less than two months. I feel great!"

AROUND TOWN

Thanks, Mr. Marks for 35 great years

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

No complaining!

Hello Cohasset. A week filled with a variety of weather from cold to mild, rain, sleet and yes, a bit of snow to boot. New England weather, that is for sure. I hope that everyone remembers that complaining is NOT allowed when you awake to something that you don't like outside, we live in an area where we have 4 seasons and guess what, Winter is just one of those four. We are almost to the end of January so getting closer to Spring, pretty cool! I have a number of events to let you all know about this week so on with the news. Enjoy your upcoming week Cohasset and send in your news whether personal, events, celebrations, photos or any other items that you would like to share with the community!

CHS Cabaret!

Next Wednesday, the Cohasset High School Cabaret 2012 is being held and many high school students are set to perform again in this annual Cohasset event. This wonderful evening, Wednesday, January 25 at 7 p.m is at Atlantica , $10 adults/$5 students and you will be entertained by students who will be performing music and song in a variety of groups, solos and duets.

This year's showcase will also recognize Mr. Bryan Marks for his 35 years of service and teaching in Cohasset schools. From personal experience, Mr. Marks is one of the teachers in my own experiences from Cohasset Middle and High School where I truly felt like I had a person who was teaching his passion in life and also, cared for us all in his class like we really mattered. We were not just a group of kids, we were not just another class who came in, sat down, screeched out some songs and walked out, we actually had a name to him, had a life outside of school and yes, we really were people, not just pain in the neck teens! (Well, I am sure we still were that at some times and trust me, we spent many times crying, hiding and ummmm...working on our "pitch and harmony" during other class time in the music room with Mr. Marks. He has attended many of our weddings, we attended his, he visited our children when they were born and we went and saw his when they were born.

I know that I speak for so many when I say that Mr. Bryan Marks will leave more than just a music room when he says good-bye this year, he will leave some very large shoes to fill. Many will recognize the young teacher, circa 1978, as he joined Cohasset students in making music.

Post-prom

Calling all interested Class of 2012 parents! An organizational meeting of all parents interested in helping plan this year's pre and post prom activities will be held next Thursday, Jan. 26th, 7 p.m. in the high school library. The first Post Prom party was held 14 years ago and has become a Cohasset High tradition for graduating seniors. Each event has been unique, memorable and magical thanks to the support of the Cohasset business community and the creativity and efforts of senior parents. More importantly, these parties have kept our seniors safe on prom night. Please join in!

Children Without Borders benefit is February 3

The Hingham Children Without Borders Party Planning Committee is hosting its Third Annual Winter Soiree. The event, hosted by friends and supporters of the charity, will be held at Black Rock Country Club in Hingham, on Feb. 3. All proceeds will support the organization's mission of helping one child at a time.

Children Without Borders (CWB) is an organization with local roots, which relies on local support. Its co-founder, Dr. George Whitelaw, summers in Duxbury. And just this past summer, 10 Hingham High School students traveled to Costa Rica to volunteer for a week in one of CWB's Costa Rican clinics. These clinics offer preventative health care, health education, psychological services, and dental care in areas where many of the homes are less than 500 square feet, have no windows or floors, and have as many as eight to 12 people living in them.

This year's event is critical to the fundraising efforts of Children Without Borders because in 2012 the plan is to expand the organization's model into another poverty stricken country. Eventually the goal is for CWB to be a global mission caring for as many sick children as possible

"I really feel like our organization is making a difference, and that difference should be sustainable over the years with the model that we have," said Whitelaw, founder and president of Children Without Borders. "I think right now in Costa Rica, sick children are being taken care of who wouldn't have been without the help of our local fundraising. I'm looking forward to seeing old friends in Hingham and meeting new supporters."

The holidays may be over, but need knows no season. All are invited to join the fun at the Winter Soiree to help those less fortunate.

The event kickoff will be at 7:30 p.m. and features an open bar and appetizers. The night will include many raffle items, silent and live auctions as well as a live band for entertainment.

Tickets to the event cost $75, but are available for $60 if purchased prior to Jan. 15, 2012. There is a maximum capacity, so act fast. Tickets are available for purchase at www.cwbfoundation.org.

Cohasset chips in to CWB

The Hingham Children Without Borders Party Planning Committee has one Cohasset member: Anne Gallagher.

Gallagher joined her friend Connacht Peterson's group after volunteering at the Our World Children's Discovery Museum in Cohasset. This is the committee's third year throwing the Winter Soiree to raise money for Children Without Borders and Gallagher's first year on the committee.

Peterson said that she is grateful for Gallagher's contributions so far.

"She's been such a great help — she's amazing," said Peterson.

Gallagher has reached out to local Cohasset businesses for donations to auction off at the event. Gym Dandy at the South Shore Community Center has donated a birthday party, with Wicked Good Cupcakes providing the desserts.

Gallagher is also encouraging other Cohasset residents to get involved and has invited several folks to attend the fundraising party.

"Children Without Borders was founded locally and grown locally, and we want to build on that momentum by raising awareness in other towns, not just Hingham and Duxbury," Gallagher said. "I think there's going to be a good Cohasset crowd supporting us at the fundraiser."

Both Gallagher and Peterson said that one reason they became involved in Children Without Borders is because, as mothers, they are grateful for the resources they are able to provide for their families by living in an affluent area.

"I feel very lucky to raise my children here, and it's important to give back," said Gallagher. "Being a mom, I feel connected to children and want to give back to children less fortunate."

Peterson feels the same way.

"We're very lucky to have our children grow up here in a nice community," said Peterson. "People forget sometimes that we're privileged to be here, so to give back is important."

About Children Without Borders

Founded in 2007, Children Without Borders has helped thousands of children and families receive medical care and health education. The charity provides care to approximately 100 children each week and regular health education seminars for families. It works with local and international partners to ensure the sustainability of its clinics and train future doctors who are encouraged to pursue medical volunteerism. For more information on Children Without Borders, you can reference the website at www.cwbfoundation.org or contact Connacht Peterson at connachtpeterson@gmail.com.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

We want to hear from you

The Cohasset Mariner is planning a new weekly feature: a section that covers environmental news, tips and initiatives happening around town.

Whether you're a business owner, town official, board member or avid recycler, we want to hear from you: what you're doing to go green, or greener; what you think Cohasset could be doing; things you've noticed that the town is doing right.

It is important to note that Cohasset is not an official, state-designated "Green Community," but it could be! With the possible installation of solar panels on our capped landfill and Middle-High School roof, the town is going greener than ever before.

But for all of the positive steps we've taken, there is always more we can do. Send your thoughts, observations and tips to: Erin Dale, Reporter, edale@wickedlocal.com or call 781-741-2935.

Old-fashioned Community Supper at St. Stephen's

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Things like this used to be part of small-town American life; that's what makes it old-fashioned."
The Reverend Margot Critchfield, St. Stephen's

In the name of bringing Cohasset together, St. Stephen's is hosting their first of what will possibly become regular "old-fashioned" community suppers.

On Friday, Jan. 27, the church is hosting a free dinner starting at 6 and continuing until 8 p.m., open to anyone in the community. The menu includes shepherd's pie, salad and various desserts.

The Reverend Margot Critchfield said that the event is an effort to help people from various church congregations and other groups in town connect with one another.

"Hopefully folks from all different walks of life and faith communities will come together for this," said Critchfield. "Things like this used to be part of small-town American life; that's what makes it old-fashioned."

The dinner itself is a team effort between Cohasset's churches, with folks from St. Stephen's cooking the shepherd's pie, Second Congregational providing the bread, First Parish supplying the salad and St. Anthony's divvying up dessert.

"It's nice that the churches have all come together to break down the walls, really mix it up in Cohasset and come together as a community," said Critchfield.

The churches will also take turns hosting this event in the future.

There will also be a "children's corner" featuring books, toys and music. Transportation is available through Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Any and all are welcome to attend and break bread, with the reverend encouraging folks to come as they are. Critchfield hopes to see a "cross-section of Cohasset," calling this a "great night for food and fun for friends, family, the elderly, anyone and everyone who wants to join us!"

If you go:

- What: Old-fashioned Community Supper
- Where: St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, 781-383-1083
- When: Friday, Jan. 27 from 6 to 8 p.m.
- Cost: Free (donations are accepted)

Feel-good fitness

Cohasset health club gives back to community

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Warm colors equal warm energy and a positive vibe."
Jill Murmes, South Shore Athletic Club

If you're a member of the South Shore Athletic Club (SSAC), sticking to your new year's resolution to get in shape might be a little easier.

The fitness center, aptly located on Route 3A right next to the Local Vines and Gourmet wine shop and a few steps from Wicked Good Cupcakes in Old Colony Square, boasts sunshine-colored walls that were painted the bright color in order to keep members motivated.

"You can come here in a snowstorm and it's bright and cheery inside," says owner Jill Murmes. "Warm colors equal warm energy and a positive vibe."

The vibe is certainly warm and inviting on a rainy Tuesday. The lunchtime crowd is trickling in and out; Murmes explains that the place is hopping early mornings before folks get on the commuter rail and likewise in the evenings.

People are running on treadmills with earphones on, either watching the televisions above or listening to their music. As Murmes gives a walking tour of the facility, she points out all the SSAC has to offer and explains how the club strives to give back to both Cohasset and the greater South Shore community.

Open for two years this April, the SSAC still looks like new. Murmes attributes this to both the fresh-looking paint and the use of a daily cleaning service.

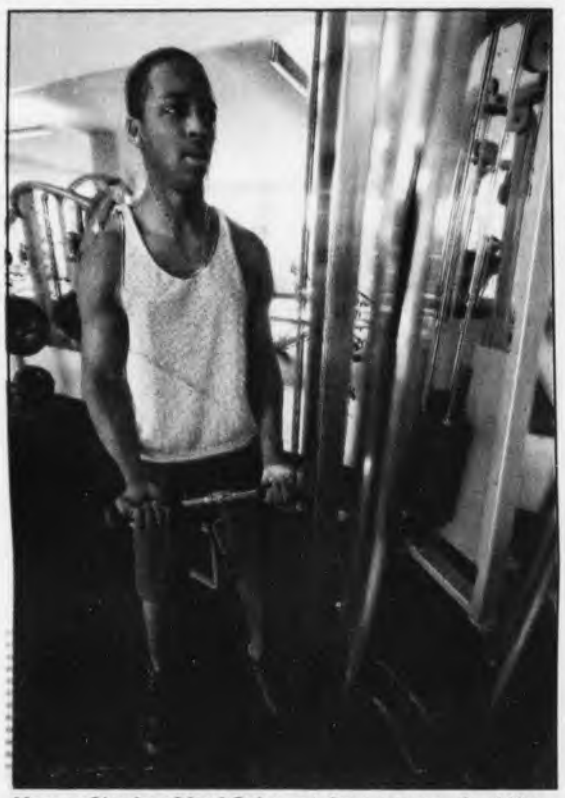
Keeping the place "impeccable" is a "big concern for health clubs," she says.

The "locker room," with its wooden cupboards, showers with complimentary toiletries and fresh, clean towels, looks like more of a spa; there's full-day child care available for parents; and the special classrooms for cycling and barre, yoga, pilates and dance classes have an elite feel all their own.

The club even utilizes fitness instructors from popular gyms like Equinox in Boston.

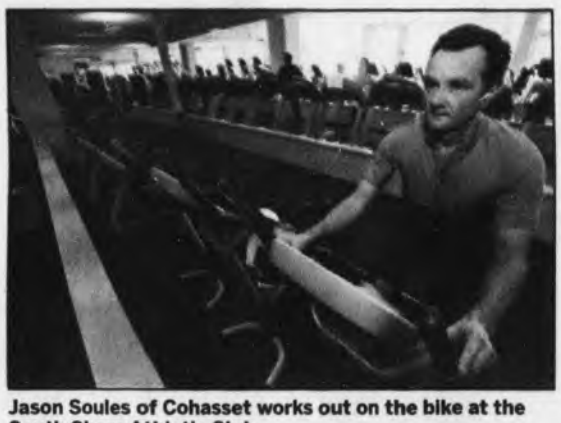
"All of our teachers are phenomenal," says Murmes. "I wouldn't take anyone off the schedule."

Having a variety of instructors on the schedule is key to helping members target different muscle groups every time they work out, which not only helps them get into shape but eliminates boredom, Murmes explains. The owner calls this "muscle confusion." Mixing things up this way, Murmes says, "is better for the student; that way, they don't get sick of it."



SSAC came about when Murmes and her husband, Matt, who lived in Wellesley, decided to relocate to Scituate after spending their summers in Hull for 15 years. The idea for the club began when the couple couldn't find a local health club that met their expectations (Murmes has 28 years of experience working in the fitness business as club director, aerobics instructor, and owner of her own personal training business called One on One Fitness).

"My husband said, 'We'll have to start one,'" says Murmes. "I said, 'You're crazy.'"



Less than two years later, the club boasts 1300 members from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and beyond. Murmes said that on any given day, the gym's parking lot is almost always full.

From left, assistant manager Jerod Edmondson and owner Jill Murmes stand with Paula and Al Meallo of Cohasset. The South Shore Athletic Club pitched in over the holidays to help the Meallos' son, Mike's family, after a recent stem-cell transplant prevented Mike from going back to work. STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN Marcus Charles, 20, of Cohasset does some curls at the South Shore Athletic Club on Saturday.

Jason Soules of Cohasset works out on the bike at the South Shore Athletic Club.

What the SSAC has to offer is competitive in this area: use of all of the fancy equipment, showers, lockers, and taking as many classes as one wants, all for a relatively low monthly rate ($59.99) with no yearly contract. The drop-in rate for classes is only $10.

"The pricing is very low for what we offer," Murmes says, adding that the quality of service "is what sets you apart from the rest."

Her goal as an owner, Murmes continues, was to make things easier for folks who want to get into shape within an atmosphere that is warm, welcoming, non-intimidating and affordable.

"People tell me they've never been to a gym where we can feel this comfortable," Murmes said. "Anyone can be fit, go to a gym, run and look good." But Murmes strives to help the "people who need to be here. It's a passion for me. My husband and I are here every day, 14 hours a day — it's a service."

While members range from commuters to seniors and students, the club is also available to school sports teams or groups who want to rent out a classroom for training or private instruction. Murmes speaks of a group of local nurses who like to rent out a studio on their lunch break.

Giving back

In addition to supporting several athletic teams in area schools, the SSAC also regularly donates membership packages as raffle items for charity fundraisers. One such package will be up for bidding at next week's Black Rock fundraiser for Children Without Borders (see story on page 7). The SSAC also supports the Cohasset Elder Affairs, South Shore Art Center, Wellspring service center in Hull, the American Cancer Society and the Brigham & Women's Hospital.

While many businesses in the area conduct similar practices, SSAC has taken things one-step further. This year, Murmes wanted to start sponsoring a local family in need, choosing one to be the club's "Christmas family."

"We wanted to adopt a family for Christmas and do something for their children," the owner explains. She hopes to make this into a yearly tradition, choosing a different family each year.

This past December, the club brought Christmas to the Meallo family. Paula Meallo and her husband are club members, and their son, Mike, found out he needed a stem cell transplant in August. This prevented him from going back to work, and Mike is father to two teenaged children.

The SSAC rallied to support the Meallo family, setting up a donations jar in the club. Members graciously donated money for presents along with gift cards. Mike's children also created wish lists for what they hoped to get for Christmas, and the community at SSAC happily complied.

Paula said that she was touched by the gesture.

"It was very generous of Jill and Matt to do that," said Paula in a phone interview. "They didn't even know this family," adding that this was "very heartwarming" for her family at Christmas. "It's the type of thing this gym does. They're very generous community; every time I turn around, they're donating to something. It's like a big family."

After speaking fondly to the generosity of the owners and fellow members of the SSAC, Paula went on to rave over the club itself.

"I absolutely love it, and I've been to so many gyms," Paula said, adding that she's impressed by the cleanliness of the locker rooms and showers with "fresh towels right there." She said that the amenities make it easier to get ready and go to work following her workout: "You see women come in wearing their gym clothes and leave made up and with their hair dried."

"My husband and I go every morning at 6 o'clock and do our exercises," Paula continued. "It's a nice place to wake up and go to in the morning. When I leave there, I feel good; it's a great way to start the day."

The prices, Paula added, are competitive considering "everything that's offered."

"At the end of the day, it's a great place to be," she said by way of summary, adding once more that the owners are "wonderful people."

advance the organization how they see fit," Coughlin continued. "The superintendent needs flexibility."

The finance department, said Coughlin, presented a "ray of hope" to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night when it came to Cohasset's fiscal 2013 budget. (See related story page one). The town manager hopes this will extend to the schools, and that they can decide on a budget with "a united approach."

Also attending Wednesday's meeting were the administrators from each school. John Osgood School principal Sharon Bellao, Deer Hill School principal Jennifer DiChiara, and Middle-High School interim principal Dr. Mike Gill all discussed working with their staff during the budget process.

Bellao said that she enjoyed the process "as much as you can," adding that the staff at John Osgood is "a wonderful team."

The teachers, said Bellao, were "so conscientious and careful with everything; I was really impressed with how carefully [the budget] was planned."

DeChiara said that her staff built their budget "from the ground up, starting from zero and adding up exactly what we need in order to have a high-quality program."

Dr. Gill explained that while normally the department heads are the ones leading the budget process, this year "the teachers rose to the occasion and did it on their own; I applaud them for it."

The proposed operating budget detail in its entirety will be available on the school website: www.cohassetk12.org.

OUR VIEW

Beware of identity theft

Anyone of any age or income can be the target of identity thieves.

A senior citizen on Social Security and a bank vice president are both just as attractive to hungry hi-tech con artists.

Today's scammers are shrewd, using stolen credit card information, the Internet, and computer technology to cheat their victims.

Identity theft is filching someone's personal information, such as a Social Security number or credit card number, to steal the person's money.

As detailed nearly weekly in the Police Beat on page 3 in your Mariner, many Cohasset residents have joined millions of other Americans, who have had their identities stolen.

According to the Federal Trade Commission, skilled identity thieves may use a variety of methods to get hold of your information, including:

Dumpster diving. They rummage through trash, looking for bills or other paper with your personal information on it.

Skimming. They steal credit/debit card numbers by using a special storage device when processing your card.

Phishing. They pretend to be financial institutions or companies and send spam or pop-up messages to get you to reveal your personal information.

Changing your address. They divert your billing statements to another location by completing a change of address form.

Old-fashioned stealing. They steal wallets and purses; mail, including bank and credit card statements; pre-approved credit offers; and new checks or tax information. They steal personnel records, or bribe employees who have access.

Pretexting. They use false pretenses to obtain your personal information from financial institutions, telephone companies, and other sources.

For more about identity theft and what you can do about it visit www.ftc.gov and type identity theft in the search bar.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Another opinion on Mitt Romney

In last week's Mariner, John Nestel wrote that in a recent debate Mitt Romney not only wanted to take away a woman's right to choose but to eliminate birth control. I remember the debate well as Romney had to ask Stephanopolis to repeat the question concerning a mandate against birth control as if he could not believe he was hearing it. He clearly stated that he would not support it. Romney does not propose to take a woman's right to choose by contraception. He does not favor rampant abortion, which is an entirely different matter. His position changed on abortion when he was Governor of Massachusetts and he was asked to sign a petition to use aborted fetuses for research. That's when he took the pro-life position.

The Massachusetts Health Care Bill seems to be working quite well and there is no demand for its recall. Romney felt that it was an example for other states to follow if they chose to and they could configure it to their own needs. But Obamacare is impractical and hugely expensive and should not be equated to the Massachusetts Bill.

Romney admits that Bain Capital was not always successful in reconstructing failing companies but they did have many successes, creating 120,000 jobs. Bain's profits resulted not in destructive raiding but from constructive rebuilding. That's what we call "free enterprise." The land of freedom and opportunity could once again be ours with less government control and regulations forced upon us under Obama's regime.

Clarity and more transparency are needed

How convenient and political to look into the Town Manager Act while our Town Manager is on vacation. Also I'm not surprised it was written 14 years ago and hasn't been reviewed since, that seems to be how our town government works.

The Selectmen (by the town's vote) are confused and aren't clear how things work anymore, so while our Selectmen are trying to figure issues out, what are they doing about an important situation pertaining to the officer who was placed on leave in October and according to the Patriot Ledger the Cohasset Police Department has wrapped up the internal investigation.

I'd like to see a copy o f the internal affairs report. My problem with this whole affair with the Town Manager has me wondering what is going on. It seems very shady to me and the people of Cohasset aren't getting the true story. Quote from Diane Kennedy, we should be able to explain why certain decisions are being made and we're supposed to be representing people in the community. My only hope is that Diane Kennedy gets the collaborative program in motion.

Ted Carr thinks it's a joke about the issues that are plaguing Cohasset. I think it's an atrocity what's happening to one of our town's finest sergeants. Ted, I wonder if you would still be laughing if it was your job on the line. This is definitely one case of cutting one person's legs off to save the head.

Disrespecting disabled veterans

Most of Cohasset's veterans have been able to return to civilian life with little apparent physical or emotional damage, and often with greater strengths because of the experience of military service. What is not so visible are those whose physical and/or emotional damage is so persistent as to hamper their enjoyment of a normal family life, of gainful employment or of normal participation in society.

A decent society would support comprehensive assistance to those with such long-term losses, in recognition of their contribution to the preservation of that society.

How disgusting then, is the egotistical and unrealistic stance of our Town Manager, that he can do the job of the Veterans' Service Officer (VSO) in his spare time, or that the responsibility can be sloughed off to be shared with the VSO of some other town, or to someone else temporarily available.

For the last few years Joe McElroy, a retired long-service US Army officer, has been a dedicated VSO for Cohasset, obtaining badly needed support services for our many not-so-visibly damaged veterans to a degree not experienced with several of his predecessors. It is not a job for the faint-hearted, half hearted, or unqualified, and requires much dedication, empathy, time, energy and encyclopedic knowledge of the regulations. Although not a full time job, to devote the time and knowledge required is much more than an easy part-time job.

McElroy's resignation, for whatever reason, is a severe blow to the many veterans in need of an active and competent VSO.

The Covenant recently signed by town officials proposes a veterans' support policy for the community. But that is of little value unless the position of VSO is adequately addressed, and adequately supported by the relevant town officials.

If one can conceive of a town having a soul, what is happening to it?

R. Murray Campbell,

BRIEFLY

Interim VSO is appointed

Following last week's discussion on a new veterans' service officer in Cohasset, selectmen voted Tuesday to appoint Sergeant Garrett Hunt as interim VSO until June 2012.

Hunt is on light duty at the police department due to an injury. Retired VSO Joe McElroy has been helping Hunt get up to speed on procedures, but Hunt may attend formal training next month.

In the meantime, the selectmen must decide whether to appoint a full-time VSO come June or look into regionalized services with a neighboring town.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin told selectmen that this will be their appointment, so it will be up to them whether or not Cohasset continues to have its own VSO.

The selectmen voted to keep Hunt onboard until June 30, giving them ample time to make a decision.

VFW to issue newsletter

The VFW Post voted recently to begin to develop a monthly newsletter, to be sent out to members of all services and their dependents who currently reside in Cohasset.

The purpose of our newsletter is to inform and find a way to reach out to families and to invite them to communicate to any member of the Post, who they are, a local mailing address, members of their families who are enrolled in our various local schools.

However, the main goal is to establish a lifeline of mutual respect, and to thank them for their service to our country, which we do not do often enough. Secondly, to make them aware that the VFW is a service organization who truly wants each service member – active and reserves – and their spouses and children to know who we are, where we are located and to inform them of our monthly meeting schedule, and to again invite them to come and let us get to know one another.

Becoming a member is not a priority, because we simply want to support our veterans through conversation, and listening and camaraderie.

To reach the VFW call: Commander Ralph Perroncello at 781-383-0879; Vice Commander Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079; or Adjunct Ed Graham at 781-383-9324; or email esgraham34@aol.com.

HEALTH NOTES

Keys to a healthy workplace

STEVE BOBO

In addition to simply keeping employees healthy, the top reasons employers give for instituting health promotion programs are to improve employee morale, retain good workers, attract good employees and improve performance.

Plans for a Healthy Work Environment — Several recent developments, both nationally and statewide show promise of reducing medical costs at the workplace. Bowing to Federal and local requirements, many employers are now offering comprehensive employee health promotion programs. A National objective is to have most employees (75 percent) participating in employer-sponsored, health-promotion activities. The National Worksite Health Promotion Survey has revealed that employee health promotion programs are becoming more prevalent and more comprehensive and many employers finding it rewarding to take part in community-based health promotion coalitions that address priority health concerns. Most employers regardless of size also offer a comprehensive employee health promotion program and health promotion activities in addition to their standard medical plans.

A recent Worksite Health Promotion Survey has revealed that employee health promotion programs are becoming more comprehensive in addition to being more prevalent. Many employers are also finding it rewarding to take part in larger community-based health promotion coalitions that address priority health employees more likely to be on the job and performing well when they are in optimal physical and psychological health. Health promotion activities are likely to yield greater returns from increased employee productivity than from many other causes. Not surprisingly, individuals with multiple health risks (e.g., obesity, cigarette smoking, and high blood pressure) tend to be less productive than their peers with better health profiles.

Productivity related benefits are also more likely to be closely aligned with an organization's short and long-term priorities. In addition to simply keeping employees healthy, the top reasons employers give for instituting health promotion programs are to improve employee morale, retain good workers, attract good employees and improve performance. In fact, the explicit connection between health and productivity has spawned several relatively new health promotion concepts of particular relevance to business managers. Health and productivity management for example, rests on the belief that an "at risk" workforce is a business liability with both direct and hidden costs that affect productivity. A growing body of scientific research makes the case that managing employee health is an essential, but often overlooked, component of productivity management.

Medical Care Cost Reduction — Considerable savings can have the effect of better care in several areas:

The accurate evaluation of medical treatments by: reduction of sampling errors, faulty testing and accurate, appropriate analyses as well as avoidance of procedures and treatments shown to be unnecessary or harmful. Other cost reduction may come through streamlined health insurance practices; improved billing procedures, etc.

Workplace Changes — As large factories close, their employees are forced to use their skills in smaller companies, some of whose management is only beginning to become familiar with health, education and other modern job enticements. As new entrepreneurs enter the business climate, and as the ideas for new products and services grow, at some point companies will need to provide broader inducements to new employees, to "hold" their better employees. The new employees may have been familiar with many employment incentives used in larger organizations and may, alternatively, come to suggest such inducements in the smaller companies.

Federal and State regulations — Upon superficial review of, and guidance relating to larger companies, many appear to be sufficiently beneficial to small employers, as well. While program outcomes are dependent on the nature of health promotion activities and the employee population, health promotion programs have achieved a number of productivity goals in a variety of settings. The two outcomes that have been most extensively documented are the reduction of employee health risks and reduced absenteeism. This situation appears to be valid in industrial as well as administrative settings and apply to the preponderance of health maintenance situations.

Some of the developments described above can be expected to be observed in the present business climate in the face of loss of larger manufacturing jobs and the need to seek employment in smaller organizations.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Why eat organic food?

JON BELBER

Organic produce is often more expensive than conventionally grown food. Labeling products with organic ingredients is meant to appeal to shoppers as they stroll down the aisle of a supermarket, but may be more of a marketing scheme than a factual practice.

Why do many grocery stores feel it necessary to carry these products and charge so much money for them? As an organic farmer and teacher of organically grown products, there is too often a lengthy explanation to these questions and thoughts. One possible answer to all these inquiries is to pay a bit more now for healthy food and a little less later to the doctor after a lifetime of consuming unhealthy, potentially harmful foods that contain additives and unpronounceable ingredients. Another strategy is to interest people in learning from where their food comes, how it was grown or raised and where did it originate?

When children and families come to Holly Hill to learn about organic farming, there is much to teach and show on the farm about the labor, the natural compost, how organic seeds get their start and the sustainable practices used to grow the vegetables, herbs, flowers and fruit.

The farmers work very hard to follow guidelines set forth by the state to make sure we are purchasing organic seed, using certified organic compost to feed the soil, which in turn feeds the roots and plants, and to only use approved, all natural fertilizers against pests and diseases. There are many other techniques used, such as crop rotation, companion planting and cover crop, to ensure better success of crops and produce.

(See this space for future articles on these topics and please come attend a future workshop on applying these techniques to your own endeavors and to gain insight to the secrets of this work).

An organic farmer has obstacles as well, including the lack of government subsidies awarded to large- scale farms that grow one crop or work on thousands of acres. But I am not here to complain about the plight of organic farming, rather to celebrate the efforts, triumphs and areas of opportunity for those trying to grow in a responsible manner and be a conscientious steward of the environment.

To that end, I am encouraging others – in this specific case, children and youths – to consider the importance and possibilities of growing organically.

As a tribute to the founder of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the late Frank White and the scholarship that bears his name, we are offering our Second Annual Consider This! essay and art contest for students kindergarten through high school seniors.

The Friends will again offer monetary awards for the winning entries. Last year we had over 70 children enter their thoughts on the importance of why local farms matter. This year's deadline for entries is March 1, so that we can award the participants and winners at our annual meeting on March 24 in Cohasset at the Lightkeepers' cottage. The topics are as follows, with more details available on our website (hollyhillfarm.org) or by contacting me at the farm.

Grades K – 5: If you had an organic garden, what would you grow and why?

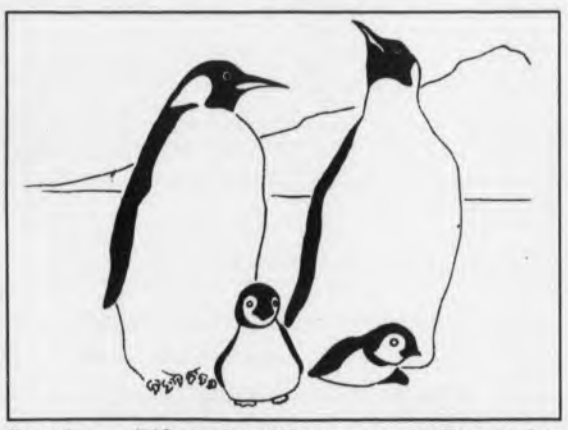
Grades 6 – 8: Top 10 reasons for farming organically.

Grades 9 – 12: GMO's (Genetically Modified Organisms) are considered a "scientific" advancement. What is the rationale for using an organic approach rather than GMOs?

Here are the guidelines for the contest. Students can express consideration of the topic through a piece of writing (essay, poem, or article) or art work (photograph, drawing, or painting). Written entries should be approximately 250 words or less. The winning entry will demonstrate thoughtful consideration of the topic and be inspiring to others. Submissions will be reviewed by the Frank H. White Scholarship Committee. There is an application page on the Holly Hill website as well.

I am certainly committed to the ideas and benefits of organic farming and sustainable agricultural practices, but I am also intrigued to hear some of the next generation's ideas. Eating is a personal choice and we all take part in the act. Many kids are given little choice about what to eat and, in many cases, there are not enough available options for kids and families, schools and communities.

Here is a chance to offer some solutions. As Holly Hill Farm is only one organic farm offering options for most of the year, it will be great to know how children can weigh in with opinions, thoughts and some practical ideas and actions that can help their efforts to comprehend organic farming and gardening. They can help provide answers to the questions I posed at the outset. They can consider for themselves why an organic focus might resonate. It will help to hear ideas and motivation from kids on the benefits of organic farming as they are consumers, too.



Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

Penguins A-Plenty

MARY KENNEDY

Penguins — all 18 species of them — are a lot like people: sociable, attractive (always dressed in "tuxedo best") and active. COURTESY ILLUSTRATION

Why are penguins so popular? Check online and you'll find a plethora of penguin stories for children of all ages: A Pop-up Penguin Book; If You Were A Penguin; Busy Penguins; and for adult children: A Penguin in New York. Movies starring penguins even win Oscars: March of the Penguins (2006) and Happy Feet (2007). Why is it so easy to warm up to these flightless birds of the frozen south, that waddle when they walk, wave their flippers about and squawk; live in large groups, squabbling and playing; parents sharing parenting? OK, maybe that's why.

Penguins – all 18 species of them – are a lot like people: sociable, attractive (always dressed in "tuxedo best") and active. A rookery is a lively place – noisy too, with groans, squawks, shrieks, and peeps. Members argue, wander about, ignore each other, sometimes furtively steal pebbles from neighbors. Smelly too. Think fecal matter, regurgitated chick feed, and everywhere the pungent aroma of ammonia.

The first European seafarers, including Magellan in 1520, wondered whether penguins were beast, bird or fish. Sailors called them black geese. Scientists finally settled on "feathered fish." But they were wrong. Penguins are birds – even though they cannot fly – because they have feathers.

They may waddle when they walk, but underwater just see how they fly! Sleek dense feathers streamline them for a maximum speed of up to 12 miles an hour. With hydrodynamic efficiency they can gauge the distance and elevation of the shoreline. At land's edge, they suddenly bounce straight up out of the water, landing on top of sheer outcroppings of ice. They even know whether to land on their feet on the rock or on their bellies to slide on the ice.

Adelies, the most common of penguins, mate for life. Males at the rookery put on a grand display of flipper-waving and squawking as the females arrive. They may "flirt" outrageously, but only until the "wife" arrives and serious "settling down" begins.

Emperor penguins (the tallest of all) are different. "They do everything backwards," says one scientist. "They breed in winter, the females compete for the males, and they're notoriously unfaithful." Emperors don't bother with nests. They stand together on the ice while the female lays a one-pound white egg, which she passes onto the male's feet. For the eight-week incubation period thousands of Dads huddle close to keep both themselves and the eggs from freezing. They lose up to half of their weight while the Moms are off at sea, feeding their faces. When they return, both parents share the raising of "junior." About five weeks later, Mom and Dad go fishing and the chicks go to "daycare" where they are protected by a ring of "babysitters."

And finally, do you know why no dead penguins are ever found on the surface of Antarctic ice? As soon as one dies, others peck a hole in the ice and gently push the body underwater. Then they huddle in a circle, softly squealing "Freeze a jolly good fellow."

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

FOR THE RECORD

Steering clear of distracted drivers

GREGORY MATHIS

Many have become so attached to their devices that it's impossible to ignore the ping of a Facebook update or the vibration of an incoming text no matter where they are.

Let's face it — driving is dangerous.

You literally take your life into your own hands every time you get behind the wheel of a car, SUV, four-wheel-drive pickup truck, motor home, motorcycle... whatever your means of transportation.

Distracted driving is nothing new, although "mobile" technology has taken the potential dangerousness to a whole new level.

Smartphones have had a dummying effect on drivers, both young and old. Texting or responding to email isn't just happening while you're stopped at a traffic light or sitting idly in a parking lot waiting for the car to warm up.

Many have become so attached to their devices that it's impossible to ignore the ping of a Facebook update or the vibration of an incoming text no matter where they are. And if they're behind the wheel of an automobile... watch out.

Some technological advances, such as OnStar and Bluetooth, have made it a little safer to communicate with the outside world while driving. But the technology has yet to catch up with current trends, which not only include texting, but the constant updating of social media sources such as Facebook and Twitter. Unless keyboards are going to replace steering wheels, the technology may never catch up.

But drivers were distracted long before mobile devices put the world in the palm of our hands.

A friend of mine admitted many years ago that he read the daily newspaper during his commute from the South Shore to Boston... while driving. Fortunately, he takes the commuter train now.

Who hasn't seen someone applying makeup or combing their hair while driving? Who hasn't taken their eyes off the road to change the radio station or adjust the heat? Who hasn't been distracted by kids causing mayhem in the backseat? You take your eyes off the road for a split second to try to restore order and bam, you slam into the car in front of you.

Hopefully everyone is wearing a seatbelt when the crash occurs, which brings up another topic that puts motorists at risk. It's well known that wearing a seatbelt can save your life, yet it's amazing the number of people who don't. Let the stories we've reported over the last month involving four separate incidents serve as a reminder.

The approach Massachusetts has taken through legislation of cell phone and seatbelt use by drivers has been lackluster at best. A virtually useless ban on texting while on the road was instituted in 2010, and lawmakers have made seatbelt use mandatory, but police can only enforce the rule if a motorist is pulled over for some other violation.

Unfortunately, legislation and law enforcement can only do so much to curb the rampant abuse on the roads, and the laws are only effective if they can be enforced. Most police departments don't have the staffing levels to adequately deal with serious crimes, let alone policing cell phone and seatbelt use.

So we'll continue to report on crashes caused by people using their cell phones, and those ejected from their car and killed because they weren't wearing their seatbelts.

Unless, of course, drivers take matters into their own hands and smarten up.

Post-holiday help at the Cohasset Food Pantry

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The holidays may be over, but as the saying goes, need knows no season. This is especially true for food pantries around the state.

Hundreds of food pantries that provide meals and supplies to residents in need are faced with increased demands in light of the dire economic situation. In fact, the state's four main nonprofit food banks have asked the Patrick administration to increase funding to $15 million in the next fiscal year, a $3.5 million step up from fiscal 2012.

In light of all the difficulties, how is Cohasset's own food pantry faring?

The Cohasset food pantry was established 20 years ago and was then located in the basement of the 2nd Congregational Church. Since elderly folks had an especially tough time getting their groceries up and out of the basement, the pantry relocated to St. Anthony's Rectory in 2001.

Just a few years ago, the pantry volunteers had a hard time keeping the shelves stocked; while the pantry is enjoying fuller shelves these days, the need is still great.

Director Jane Corry invited the Mariner for a tour, giving an update on the supplies the pantry needs now and how residents can help.

Cohasset Mariner (CM): Post-holidays, what is the greatest need in the food pantry?

Jane Corry (JC): We're pretty well-stocked now, but there are things we always have a need for, like detergent: dish detergent, laundry detergent, sponges, cleaning supplies. Also, pet food and supplies go out almost as fast as they come in. And toiletries — soap, deodorant, toothbrushes, shampoo — hygiene things are expensive, and are still things that you need. The other two items we constantly need are fruit juice and school-sized juice containers.

CM: How has the clientele changed over the years?

JC: The numbers have increased dramatically over the last three years; new people come every week. The economy has hit everybody, some much harder than others. We're seeing more young people — single or families with young children. Luckily even though we're as small as we are, we can still accommodate everyone.

CM: Some people don't necessarily realize how much need there is in a place like Cohasset.

JC: People ask me all the time: where do these people come from? They come from Cohasset. That's the bottom line; we only serve people in Cohasset. It's amazing this day and age that hunger is a huge, huge crisis in our country. No place is immune from this, no matter how wealthy a town appears to be; everyone is struggling.

CM: What do folks need to know about coming to the pantry?

JC: We're kind of like a big family here; we embrace everybody who comes down here. And we're very concerned about confidentiality. Here, behind the building, is very private. It's difficult the first time people come, but it gets easier after that. Most people call me first individually to arrange a meeting. They have to fill out a form and provide proof of identity, that they live in Cohasset and there is a need. People can come here every other week; at most food pantries, it's once a month.

CM: How can interested folks get involved and help out at the pantry?

JC: There's the "plant a row for the pantry" program. We ask people in town to plant a row in their garden for the food pantry. Last year we had fresh vegetables all summer long; I was overwhelmed. One family who wishes to remain anonymous can't plant a garden, so they buy fresh veggies for the pantry. We're wondering if people [who want to donate] can pick up one fresh fruit or vegetable for the pantry while grocery shopping; that way we can still offer fresh food throughout the winter months.

CM: What about frozen?

JC: Not so much frozen... we do have one freezer for frozen food. We offer a package of chicken, hamburger and hotdogs when we can get them, along with margarine, every other week. We have a wonderful relationship with Stop and Shop; the manager donated his old refrigerator. We also give a voucher for Tedeschi's; clients can go there and get a gallon of milk and a dozen eggs. The pantry has to pay for these vouchers, however. But Shaw's is starting to donate. Stores are really stepping up to help us, which is great.

CM: What happens to the overflow or expired food?

JC: We only take food that isn't expired, but there are other pantries that will take it. The overflow also goes there; nothing goes to waste. Everything will be used somewhere.

CM: How much does it cost to do the grocery shopping and keep this place up and running?

JC: The price of grocery shopping has definitely gone up. Some months it is slightly less and many months it is more. There is no exact figure.

CM: How many volunteers do you have?

JC: We have 10 full-time volunteers; they come every Tuesday. And we are always open to having groups and organizations come down here — Brownies, Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, families — to help us sort food and stock shelves. It's a great way to get kids involved and broaden their horizons. If everybody just does a little bit, then the burden doesn't fall on just a few people. As tough as things are, I have met the most wonderful people who want to give back and help. There's a lot of good out there.

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on two roll calls from the week of January 9-13. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

END ABUSES AT STATE EDUCATION COLLABORATIVES (S 2101)

Senate 37-0, approved and sent to the House a bill making major changes in the regulation and operation of the state's education collaboratives that help teach children with special needs. The bill is in response to last year's discovery by the state auditor and inspector general of misuse of funds at the Merrimack Special Education Collaborative by former director John Barranco, who is accused of diverting $11.5 million in public funds to the center to raise his pay and that of some top executives. He is also accused of illegally using the collaborative's credit card to charge some $50,000 in personal expenses.

Provisions include requiring each collaborative to maintain a public website; requiring collaboratives to file annual reports; authorizing the State Education Department, auditor and Department of Revenue to periodically audit and review the records of each collaborative and address the conflicts of interest surrounding collaboratives and their related nonprofit organizations, through which many of the abuses took place.

Supporters said last year's abuse was outrageous and argued the bill would create accountability and transparency to begin to prevent deliberate abuse of funds from ever happening again. They noted the measure would help thousands of families of special needs children across the state who depend on these important services.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

LEAVE OF ABSENCE FOR VICTIMS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE (S 918)

Senate 34-0, approved and sent to the House legislation that would require employers with more than 50 employees to allow workers who are victims of domestic violence or who have a family member who is the victim of stalking or sexual assault to take up to an annual 15-day leave of absence to address issues arising from the incident. Employees can use the leave to obtain medical attention, counseling, housing, protection orders and other necessary legal assistance.

Employers would decide whether to pay the employee for the days of absence while employees would be required to provide documentation that he, she or a family member has been a victim of abusive behavior.

Supporters said this long-overdue measure would allow survivors to take a leave of absence and get help without fear of being fired. They noted these victims should not be further victimized by being forced to choose between their jobs and their safety.

While no one voted against the bill, Sen. Robert Hedlund (D-Weymouth) voted "present" and explained the other side of the issue. He said this was a mandate businesses cannot afford during this difficult economic time. He expressed concern that the new requirement could be a hindrance for companies interested in relocating to Massachusetts.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

BAN HANDHELD CELL PHONE USE - The Transportation Committee's hearing on several proposals to ban the use of handheld cell phones by drivers (H 1817, H 3069, S 1732 and S 1764) attracted only one person to testify. The measure, which would allow use of cell phones with a hands-free headset, was pushed by the lone testifier, Jerry Cibley whose son died on Mother's Day 2007 when using his cell phone while driving. Cibley said his son dropped his cell phone, took off his seat belt to retrieve it and then hit a tree. Lawmakers themselves filled the remainder of the hearing and several legislators gave their opinions on the proposals. Current law prohibits text messaging while driving and bans drivers under 18 from using any type of cell phone or mobile electronic device.

MISUSE OF WELFARE FUNDS - Four bills dealing with welfare reform were scheduled to be heard by the Committee on Children, Families and Persons with Disabilities. Two of the bills (S 68 and S 1838) filed in January 2011, would prohibit welfare recipients from using their electronic benefit transfer (EBT) cards to purchase products not allowed under the law, including firearms, tobacco, lottery tickets and alcohol. The bills were not necessary because the Legislature in July approved and Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law similar legislation. When no one showed up to testify on those two proposals and the two others, committee Co-Chair Sen. Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport) adjourned the hearing.

LIMIT SEIZURE OF PROPERTY BY EMINENT DOMAIN (S 856) - The Judiciary Committee held a hearing on legislation prohibiting state and local governments from taking private property by eminent domain unless it is necessary for the possession, occupation and enjoyment of land by the public, the functioning of public utilities or where the use of eminent domain removes a public nuisance or a structure that is beyond repair or unfit for human habitation or use. The legislation has been pushed unsuccessfully for several years in response to a 2005 U.S. Supreme Court ruling that allows communities to seize private homes and businesses solely for commercial purposes. The ruling also allows states to establish laws prohibiting the practice.

FORECLOSURES - A large crowd packed a Judiciary Committee hearing on several pieces of legislation dealing with foreclosures, including a bill that would allow homeowners to remain in their homes after a foreclosure, until the bank sells the property to a new owner (H 493). Another measure would require banks to hold in-person mediation sessions with homeowners, in order to try to restructure the mortgage, before finalizing a foreclosure (S 865). It also allows those homeowners to seek judicial review in a court if an agreement between the bank and the property owner is not reached.

Supporters of mandatory mediation and court review said Massachusetts is the only New England state without a foreclosure mediation law. They argued the bill would ensure that homeowners have opportunities to plead their case and take some power away from the banks. Opponents said the court system could not handle the tens of thousands of cases.

BAN STYROFOAM PACKAGING (S 1034) - The Municipalities and Regional Government Committee will hold a hearing at 11 a.m. on January 24 on a bill allowing cities and towns to ban the commercial sale and use of any Styrofoam and other polystyrene containers. Styrofoam is the Dow Chemical Company's brand name of polystyrene. These containers are the familiar white plastic foam ones that supermarkets, fast food and other restaurants use to package and serve food and drinks. The proposal allows communities to ban the use of the containers unless the retailer recycles them. Supporters say this material is not biodegradable and is bad for the environment. They also note that polystyrene production uses chemicals that harm air quality.

CONSTITUENTS WITHOUT A STATE REP - Some 80,000 residents in two representative districts might be without a state representative for the next year until a new one is elected in November and sworn into office in January 2013. Rep. William Brownsberger (D-Belmont) will be vacating the 24th Middlesex seat that is comprised of Belmont and parts of Cambridge and Arlington. Brownsberger was recently elected to fill the seat left vacant by former Sen. Steven Tolman, who resigned to become president of the Massachusetts AFL-CIO. Also, Rep. Vincent Pedone (D-Worcester), who represents Worcester's 15th District is resigning to become the executive vice director of the Council of Presidents of the Massachusetts State University System.

There is controversy over whether to hold special elections to fill the seats. Supporters say these 80,000 residents should not be without representation for a year. Opponents say a special election is too costly and note it would be based on districts that would be defunct because the Legislature has carved out new districts that will be effective for the November 2012 election.

Commuter boat service must be saved

GARRETT BRADLEY

This transit-oriented development was designed and marketed with the commuter boats as its hub, providing the necessary transportation for employees of the Shipyard businesses, and area commuters.

On January 4, 2012 the MBTA released a proposal which calls for deep service cuts and significant fare hikes for all modes of public transportation. Secretary of Transportation Richard Davey presented two possible scenarios to address a $161 million budget gap for fiscal year 2013. Both scenarios call for the total elimination of the $3.5 million commuter boat subsidy.

I strongly oppose the proposed elimination of commuter boat service to Hingham and Hull. This is a critically important mode of transportation for my district and for the South Shore, a service that commuters have relied upon for over 25 years. Recent ridership figures point to 3,500 riders using the ferries to commute between Boston and Hingham, Hull or Quincy each day. Elimination of commuter boat service would deal a devastating blow to the entire region.

As I did in 2009, when the MBTA previously proposed cuts to commuter boat service, I am working closely with Senator Bob Hedlund, state, and Hingham and Hull officials, to find a reasonable solution that will provide for the continued operation of ferry service. As well, I will work with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, which is a strong voice promoting regional economic growth and vigorously opposes the elimination or cut to the subsidy for ferry service.

On the heels of a letter I sent to Secretary Davey and MBTA officials in opposition to the proposed cuts, I recently invited state transportation officials to visit the Hingham and Hull commuter boat facilities. On Friday, February 3rd, MBTA Acting General Manager Jonathan Davis will arrive by commuter boat at the Hingham boat terminal. MBTA officials, Sen. Hedlund and I will greet passengers boarding the 7:45 a.m. ferry to Boston.

Following the tour of the commuter boat facility, we will be joined by Hingham officials who will lead a tour of the new Shipyard development. We will discuss the negative impact that loss of the commuter boats will cause this project. This mixed-use development featuring residences, office, retail, entertainment, and recreational spaces, is a great example of "Smart Growth," a concept long championed by state government.

This transit-oriented development was designed and marketed with the commuter boats as its hub, providing the necessary transportation for employees of the Shipyard businesses, and area commuters. Significant public investments of federal and state grants of $7.4 and $2 million each, along with private investments, have made this development possible providing local jobs and a bright future as our economy begins to rebound. The future home of the $4.5 million Hingham Intermodal Center, the MBTA's new modern transportation facility will allow commuter bus riders direct access to the commuter boats and will house the commuter boat ticket offices. The DCR, MA Environmental Police, and the Hingham Harbormaster's Office will all relocate to this new Intermodal Center.

Departing the Shipyard, we will drive to the Hull/Pemberton Pier boat dock to view the existing dockside facility. We will meet with Hull town officials to learn more about the recent $550,000 federal funding award and the proposed improvement plans for the Pemberton Pier commuter boat terminal. We'll impress upon MBTA officials that loss of Hull commuter boat service, along with elimination of their bus service to Hingham, will leave Hull residents with no public transportation options to Boston. We'll remind officials that the commuter boat is the fastest and most efficient way for Hull residents to reach Boston.

In 2009, when commuter boat service cuts were threatened, commuters and local officials in both Hingham and Hull, demonstrated a fierce determination to defend and advocate for commuter boat transportation. They are clearly gearing up to exceed their previous successful lobbying efforts. I recently participated in a "brainstorming" meeting of Hingham and Hull officials and concerned citizens to organize an all-out effort to save commuter boat service. Additionally, Hull officials hosted an organizational meeting last week that was attended by over 250 commuter boat advocates. I look forward to lending my support and assistance to all efforts to ensure the continued availability of commuter boat services for the citizens of my district and for boat riders from all South Shore towns.

The MBTA has scheduled a series of public hearings on the fare hike and service cut proposals at locations throughout the greater Boston area, including Hingham. The Hingham hearing information is listed below. Please go to www.mbta.gov to view information on other hearings. I encourage all interested people to attend and voice your concerns to state officials so that they fully understand the severe negative consequences the elimination of ferry services will have on riders, and on local businesses.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Press to play

Skippers press fuels victory

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The press is nothing new to Cohasset boys basketball coach Bo Ruggiero, his players or opponents.

He's been teaching it and coaching it his entire career.

Teaching and coaching is the easy part.

The hard part is for players to grasp the style and put it to work.

Tuesday night at home, the style worked as well as it has all year in a 57-26 win over East Bridgewater.

Shane Haggerty led the Skippers with 15 points, Kyrel Jaundoo added 13 points and 9 rebounds and Robbie Mahoney scored 11 points to go with 10 rebounds.

"We came out early with the fast break off the press," Ruggiero said about a blazing start that ended with a 19-9 lead after one quarter.

The quick start was especially nice because the team hadn't played in a week after Friday

Poised for playoff run

Skippers tearing up the ice

GateHouse News Service

Averaging nearly six goals per game, this year's Cohasset Skippers hockey team is poised for a run to the playoffs.

After a big win on Saturday night against league rival East Bridgewater, the Skippers are the second highest goal scoring team in the state of Massachusetts; for Division 3 men's hockey, with 59 goals for and 36 goals against in 10 games.

That number changed a little Monday when Cohasset beat South Shore Vocational Technical School 7-1.

The Skippers started off slowly Saturday night, with East Bridgewater's Dylan Voss scoring just 34 seconds into the match. It took a while for Cohasset's senior captain, Alex Evans to get the team in gear with his first goal of the night at 8:61 of the first period assisted by senior Vinny Calorio and senior John Collins.

"We had a slow start tonight", remarked head coach, Bob Walsh. "We're averaging almost six goals

Personal achievements

Girls setting season-highs

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

The Norwell/Cohasset gymnastics team has certainly had more ups than downs this season, competing against what some could argue as one of the toughest schedules around. The team has had to deal with both public and private schools this season, and has done quite well in each and every meet.

In a 123.1-105.7 non-league win Saturday over Thayer Academy, senior captain Amber Silvia finished third in the all-around with a 32.3. She received her highest score this season (and a third-place finish) on the floor (8.4). Silvia also tied for second on the beam (7.7) and second on the bars (7.9). An 8.3 on the vault placed Silvia in a three-way tie for first place.

Freshman Eliza Motlin earned her best score of the season on the vault, scoring an 8.1. Junior Melinda Dignam tied for first on the vault (8.3). Junior Kelsey McCunney earned a season-high 8.3 on the floor, and sophomore Christina Tedeschi received an 8.0 on the floor, a season high.

Rough afternoon

Cohasset's Anna Seraikas tries to get through Hanover's defense on Saturday afternoon in Cohasset. Cohasset lost the game 47-38 despite a strong effort in a physical battle. Saraikas and teammate Isabel Robinson each scored 14 points for Cohasset. The game was tied 32-32 heading into the fourth quarter, but Hanover went on an 8-1 run in the final four minutes to capture the win. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG night's game was postponed to Jan. 29.

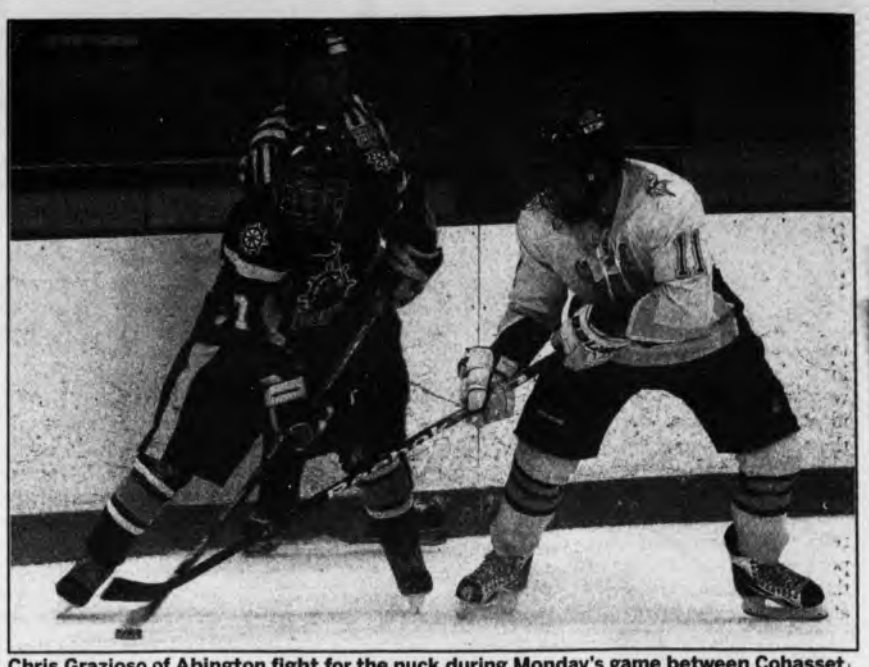
Cohasset outscored East Bridgewater 11-5 in the second quarter to take a 30-14 lead at the half.

Cohasset continued to play tenacious defense while getting the bench into the action.



East Bridgewater was held to single digit scoring in the third and fourth quarters.

The bench did their job.

"We had 10 guys in the scoring column," Ruggiero said. "It was a nice game. We played very well. We shared the ball well. The guards are getting experience and learning the rotation.

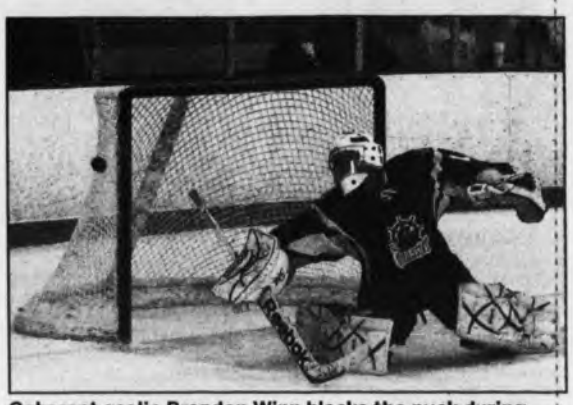
per game but more importantly than scoring goals, the team improved greatly as a defensive unit; something we've been working on heavily for the last few days in preparation for the balance of the season. A few times this season, we'd left Winnie, (sophomore goal tender Brandon Winn), hanging out to dry and despite scoring so many goals, we lost games to Norwell 7-6, to Rockland 6-5 and to Mashpee 7-5. In those three games we gave up 20 of the 36 goals against this season. That's just unacceptable."



The Skippers took over in the second period dominating both offensively and defensively. First, defensively by limiting the East Bridgewater attack to only five shots on goal.

"Carpie, (junior defenseman Chris Carpenter), played his best game of the season so far, with both body contact as well as moving the puck", commented the coach. "But we also saw improvements in sophomores Chris Lund and Mickey Barry as well as senior Sean McKenna."

Late in the period, with the teams playing 4-on-4 because of penalties, junior assistant captain, Connor Goetz scored assisted by Chris Carpenter. Then with just about one minute left in the period, sophomore Terence Doonan scored assisted by junior assistant captain, Ryan McGovern.

Going into the locker room at the end of two periods, the Skippers were up 3-1.

"This has been a problem for us this season," commented Walsh. "We get these leads and have a tendency to let teams back into the game. So pretty much all we talked about was maintaining our focus and finishing in the third period."

Cohasset goalie Brandon Winn blocks the puck during Monday's game between Cohasset and South Shore Regional held at the Rockland Ice Rink.

It seamed to work when at 3:01 of the third, Alex Evans struck with his second of the night and the eventual game winner, assisted once again by Calorio and Collins.

"This was a big boost for the team," remarked Walsh. Keeping the pressure on, EB's Dylan Voss finally scored his second of the night, at 5:53 of the third. "It was a big boost for East Bridgewater when they started throwing just about everything at Winnie. At one point, Brandon made so many consecutive saves, I actually lost count of how many shots EB actually took."

But Cohasset wasn't going to be denied this night and at 10:12 of the third sophomore Chris Cohen put Cohasset back up by 3 goals assisted by sophomore Tommy O'Brien and senior captain Jamie Faber. Cohasset's combination of good back checking and defensive zone play limited EB's opportunities once again. EB scored with 1:43 left in the game but it was too little; too late and as the clock ticked down, the Skippers were back in the win column with a 5-3 victory.

"The boys really showed how good they are tonight with goals coming from every line and defensive plays being made by everyone on the ice. This was a real team effort. One of the things that I'm most proud of is the fact that, although we have 59 goals, we have 80 assists on the team and every single guy on this 22 man team, (goalies excluded), has at least 1 point with either a goal or an assist and that makes us a very dangerous team."

Cohasset 7, South Shore Voke 1

On Monday, Evans, John Collins and Calorio put on a clinic today with Evans scoring four goals each assisted by Collins and two2 by Calorio.

In the first period, Evans scored just 10 seconds into the match beating Al Burbank on the short side. Then just nine minutes later with Cohasset keeping all the pressure on the Vikings Evans scored once again, this time, assisted by sophomore defenseman Mickey Barry and senior line mate John Collins.

30 seconds later, Vikings senior captain James Crockett scored his team's only talley of the day; finishing the period at 2-1.

During second period action, Evans started the Skippers off again at 11:51 of the period, this time assisted by senior defenseman Sean McKenna and John Collins.

At 7:39 of the period, senior defenseman Brendan Kearney scored unassisted with a well placed shot from the blue line.

The Skippers scored their third goal of the period with 21 seconds left when senior defenseman Sean McKenna hit sophomore Tommy O'Brien, on the move, with a great pass. O'Brien, (one of the fastest skaters for Cohasset), broke in and scored a beautiful breakaway goal to put Cohasset up 5-1 after two periods.

Third period action was more dominance by the Skippers killing off three penalties and scoring two more goals.

The first was at 6:20 of the period when Evans scored his fourth of the day assisted by Collins and Calorio. Cohasset's seventh goal came at 12:35 of the period with a beautiful pass from senior Jamie Faber to sophomore defenseman Chris Lund who blasted a slapshot by Burbank.

Sophomore goaltender Brandon Winn, turned away 14 shots and junior goltender Alex Kent turned away another 6 for the Skippers while Vikings goaltender Al Burbank was pelted with 28 shots giving up 7 goals.

Cohasset's record is now 8-3-1 with a league record of 6-3.

Cohasset has 12 days of rest when they come back to play on January 28 for a home game at the Weymouth Connell rink versus league rival Hull at 8 p.m.

In a recent tri-meet against Notre Dame Academy and Bridgewater Raynham, arguably two of the top teams in the region, Norwell/Cohasset lost to both. Notre Dame Academy won with a score of 136.7, Bridgewater-Raynham followed with a 122.8, and Norwell/Cohasset scored a 121.15.

On the vault, freshman Emma Basso performed her best score of the season, scoring an 8.3. Freshman Eliza Motlin scored a 7.9 on the vault. Silvia scored a season-high 8.1 on the vault, followed by an 8.3 on both the beam and floor, and an 8.1 on the bars. The impressive routine gave Silvia a 32.8 in the all-around, which placed her third against Notre Dame and second against Bridgewater-Raynham.

On Monday, Jan. 30, from 6:30-8 p.m., the team will host a clinic for girls ages 7-14. The cost is $15 per gymnast and all proceeds go to the varsity team's banquet. Contact Ruthann Ardizzoni at 781-383-0088 at the center for more information.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Cohasset girls travel hoop continues to impress

Teams in all grades picking up victories

The Cohasset girls travel teams in the Old Colony League in grades 5 through 8 continued with their fine play after the holiday break, winning nine of their 12 games against opponents from Duxbury, Norwell, and Hanover.

The Blue & White 6th graders remained undefeated with a perfect 7-0 mark, racking up three easy victories, and sit alone atop the sixth grade standings. The Super Sixers have been working on their fundamentals and have improved their free throw shooting dramatically in recent weeks. Their passing also has been strong, with the Hanover coach noting (after his team lost by a 36-7 margin to the Blue & White) that Cohasset's passing was "the best he's seen all season."

However, the Super Sixers, who already have knocked off the defending 6th grade champion Kingston team, will face three difficult challenges in the coming two weeks against teams from Marshfield, Braintree, and Whitman, all of whom defeated Cohasset last year, and are just behind them in the standings. The Blue & White Sixths will have to be at the top of their game if they are to remain unscathed after this weekend and next.

The Fledgling Fifth grade squad also has been performing superbly, running their winning streak to six straight contests after a season-opening loss to Kingston. The Blue & White Fives piled up more than 40 points in one game during their skein, the highest point total recorded this season by any Cohasset team.

The eighth grade squad also continued to play well, winning two of their three games the past two weekends, their lone setback coming via a tough 19-17 loss at Norwell on Saturday. The Exceptional Eights now stand at 5-2 on the season.

The seventh grade girls Old Colony League basketball team resumed their season after the holiday break stumbling with two hard fought defensive losses to Duxbury, 11 to 9 and Norwell 17 to 15, before rebounding to a 14 to 10 win over Hanover. Their record stands at 4 wins and 3 losses..

The team started off the second half of the season with a tough loss to Duxbury. The team was led by the scoring of Abby Osmanski, Nikki Federle, Audrey Hart and Nicky Tolosko. The team took a 9 to 4 lead with seven minutes to go, and then hit some bad luck as their shots would not fall. Duxbury went on to score the last 7 points of the game for the win. The team was led by a strong defensive effort from Margot Robbins and Erin McElhinney.

The hard luck continued, losing to Norwell 17 to 15, despite a buzzer beating 3-point field goal by Abby Osmanski, who led the scoring with 5 points. Charlotte Morrison and Megan McElgunn both had 4 points in the loss. Marcella Flibotte and Nicky Tolosko rounded out the scoring. The team demonstrated a lot of determination as they only had 7 players against a full Norwell squad.

However, the short-handed Sensational Sevens rebounded with a solid 14 -10 win over Hanover Sunday morning. The scoring was led by Nikki Federle with 6 points.

Charlotte Morrison, Abby Osmanski, Nicky Tolosko, Caroline Adams and Marcella Flibotte completed the scoring for the Cohasset team.

The team showed a lot of poise as it handled a swarming 1-3-1 zone press to seal the victory.

South Shore Basketball Notebook

It is all about playing present

In this day and age with so much information being shared, there is a ton of great basketball resources out in cyberspace. As a high school coach I am always searching for new concepts to share with my players. One of my all-time favorite messages to kids is the concept of playing present.. A theory made popular by Alan Stein of Nike Basketball and DeMatha High School of Maryland. As a player there are two things that you have absolute control over, your effort and your attitude. It is a given that during the course of a game certain things will not go your way...a missed shot, dropped pass, or an earful from your coach. Playing present is all about how you respond, its about making the next play, rather than dwell on what has already happened. Good luck to everyone this week and remember to play present.

Outstanding performances:

Megan Otto of Scituate had 20 points in a win over Middleboro Michaela North led Duxbury over North Quincy with 22 points and 10 rebounds Ricky Witt (Rockland) had 23 points in a win over East Bridgewater Eddie Bowler of Hingham led the Harbormen over Hanover with 21 points and 11 rebounds Alijah Robinson scored 22 points to lead Holbrook over West Bridgewater

South Shore Coaches Poll

Boys: Braintree 6-2, Marshfield 7-1, Norwell 8-0, Rockland 9-1, Weymouth 7-1
Girls: Abington 8-2, Braintree 8-0, Marshfield 9-1, Norwell 8-2, Scituate 7-0
(Due to difference in divisions teams are listed in no particular order.)

Games To Watch:

Boys: Thursday 1/19 Weymouth (7-1) at Braintree (6-2). This will be a rematch of the Adams Classic final in which the Wildcats won 60-49.

South Shore Scoring Leaders

Boys - Nick Volpe - Norwell 26.8ppg; Damian Lugay - Weymouth 19.5ppg; Pat Delano - Braintree 18.8ppg.
Girls: Megan Otto, Scituate, 16.3ppg; Michaela North, Duxbury 16.1ppg.

Where Are They Now

One reason Middlebury improved is off to a 14-0 start and ranked No. 1 among Div. 3 schools is the play of preseason All-American Ryan Sharry of Braintree, who is coming back from an injury that forced him to miss the first five games. Sharry is averaging high double figures for Middlebury and is gunning for a national championship.

Jim Dolan is currently in his ninth season as the Weymouth Boys Varsity Coach.

James McNeill scored to break a 2-2 with 1:58 left in the game and give the Saints a 4-2 win over the Sharks in a Legends Div. contest.

Charles Ryan, after setting up the first two goals in the first period scored an empty net goal, Mike Ryan and Paul Murphy both had a goal each for the Saints.

Tim Cruz of Marshfield and Art Riccio both scored a goal in the second period for the Sharks.

Lead paint poisoning affects over one million children today.

Learning disabilities, hearing loss, speech delays, violent behavior and, in rare cases, seizures and even death: these are just some of the effects lead paint poisoning has on young children. If your home was built before 1978, lead paint on your walls, doors, windows and sills may be dangerous. And it's not just large paint chips that can cause damage. In fact, three granules of lead dust are enough to poison your child. Let's make all kids lead-free kids. To learn more about the simple steps you can take to safeguard your family, log on to LEADFREEKIDS.org or call 800-424-LEAD.

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

...although the actual show is two months away, it's time to start thinking about Mr. Skipper! This year, there will be surprising new announcers.

This week went by extremely fast, but I think that has something to do with the fact that it was only a three-day week...I hope everybody had a great long weekend! Not much happened at CHS other than sports, and cramming for next weeks' midyears and finals.

After a water main broke on Friday, all after-school activities were cancelled and games postponed. The boys' basketball game against Mashpee will be rescheduled. The girls' basketball team lost by about 10 to Hanover on Saturday, and also suffered a loss in East Bridgewater on Tuesday. With three key players injured, the girls are having a tough time against some top teams, but are still doing well regardless. The wrestling and ski team both had competitions on Wednesday. On Thursday, the gymnastics team competed at Marshfield and the ski team had another race. Today, stop by either the swim meet in Quincy, the girls' basketball game at Abington, or the boys' basketball game at home!

Students: although the actual show is two months away, it's time to start thinking about Mr. Skipper! This year, there will be surprising new announcers. See Mrs. Moriarty for information on becoming a contestant, escort, or to help plan the event. Boys, it's your time to show the school your outstanding talent, incredible intellect, and stunning personalities. Mr. Skipper is a fundraiser for the Senior Class, so everybody should be sure to watch come March.

Junior-Senior Semi is next Friday. If you want to help plan the dance, see Mrs. Moriarty! Buy tickets soon for this fun, social event (once again, to raise money for the Senior Class...and we really need it!).

Student council is looking for suggestions of things to focus on for the rest of the school year. If you have any ideas regarding events or improvements, talk to your class officers soon. Any and all suggestions are welcome!

Once again, the deadline for parent ads for the yearbook is January 31st and the deadline for submission of any extra pictures is February 1st. Make sure you submit them ASAP, you don't want to miss this opportunity!

The 5th annual CEF Spelling Bee is on February 12th. Spellers in grades 2-5 will compete in groups of 3 to win various prizes. Register online at cohasseteducation.org today. The event is a fundraiser for our school system.

That's it for this super short week, CHS! See you on Monday.

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High School; her column runs weekly during the school year.

K, PreSch registrations

Kindergarten registration for the 2012-2013 school year will begin Monday, Jan. 23. Registration will take place at Osgood School, daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents registering children for kindergarten will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration, but they do not have to commit at this time. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required.

Preschool registration for the 2012-2013 year began on Wednesday, Jan. 18. Children who turn 3 or 4 by Sept. 1, are eligible to register for the Osgood Preschool Program, which takes place four days per week, Monday through Thursday, for 2-1/2 hours. Children are assigned to a morning or afternoon class according to peer group or space available. Entrance to the preschool program is based on a lottery system. Registration applications should be returned to the Osgood School no later than Friday, Feb. 3. The lottery will take place Wednesday, Feb. 8, and parents will be notified by the end of the following school day. A deposit of $200 will be required to hold a space for those selected. A birth certificate and proof of residency must accompany applications.

A Preschool Open House for Parents will take place at Osgood School from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m., on Friday, Jan. 27. Parents will have an opportunity to meet preschool teachers and support staff and view the classrooms and facilities. For more information, call 781-383-6117.

Civics class tours water plant, Town Hall

Recently, Water Department Superintendent Norman Lavigne and his staff graciously hosted Cohasset High School students enrolled in the social studies elective, Civics and Community Service. Prior to visiting the Water Treatment Plant, students were enthusiastically welcomed by Mr. Mark Cataldo of United Water for a tour of the Water Treatment Plant. The purposes of the trips to the plants were part of the students' civic education — to see and hear how the Town of Cohasset provides essential services to the residents of the community.

Although the students first visited the "out" before the "in," the students heard a dominant theme at both ends of the municipal treatment process: protecting water resources is the highest priority of town's plant. Mr. Lavigne stressed that providing clean drinking and bathing water to the residents of any community begins with protecting the water resource, while Mr. Cataldo emphasized United Water's commitment to discharging only water that meets stringent state and federal standards in compliance with the Clean Water Act.

"I didn't even know there were plants like this," and "I didn't understand how expensive water has become," were typical comments from students who departed the plants a bit enlightened. "It was surprisingly fun — and it made me think about possible job options when I'm older," commented senior Kayla Orner.

Fittingly, students followed up their trips to Cohasset's infrastructure with a trip to Town Hall to meet the new Town Manager, Mr. Michael Coughlin. Mr. Coughlin provided the students with yet another lens through which to see their town — the lens of municipal management and town governance. As Mr. Coughlin addressed student questions about the demands of his job, the budget process, and government bureaucracies, discussion became animated when Mr. Coughlin invited the students to share their opinions about where the town should be directing finite resources.

"Athletics," replied senior Chris Brash, whom Mr. Coughlin immediately recognized and thanked for playing a critical role in delivering a win on the Turkey Day pigskin wager with Hull's town manager. "And an indoor pool," others chimed.

Time did not permit a full discussion of either town management, or allocation of resources. Students left Town Hall, therefore, with a homework assignment and an invitation to return with their assignment. "Solicit opinions of your classmates, and let's continue this conversation," said Town Manager Coughlin. What a great lesson in civics.

This was provided by the Cohasset Middle High School Civics and Community Service class.

NUTRITION

Soup – the perfect food

By Agustinus "Iwan" Setiawan

As the cold weather starts to fall upon New England, many of us are looking for a way to warm up. While you could crank up the dial on the heat, or start wearing mittens around the house, there is a simple, nutritious, affordable and fun way to solve the problem – soup! Every chef has a warm place in his or her heart for soup. It is one of the first things we are taught to make and something we struggle to master our whole career.

Soup is a blank slate. A simple chicken vegetable soup can be affordable and loaded with nutrients, whereas a creamy lobster bisque could lead you to loosen your belt and put a dent in your wallet. It is in this dilemma where chefs and homemakers alike find the challenge and reward in the creation of a good soup. In the interest of healthy living let's consider the foundations of a nutritious and delicious meal the whole family can enjoy.

While there are many bases for soup – cream egg, rice, bean – the most common is broth. Broth or stock, as it is sometimes referred to, is created by the act of fortifying water with your favorite vegetable and meat flavors. This can be achieved by saving your meat and/or vegetable scraps and simmering them until you produce a rich flavor. If you find your homemade stock lacking, you may reinforce its flavor with a low-sodium base or bouillon.

There are also many wonderful stocks available for purchase. Broth is the backbone of your creation and it is a great idea to buy unsalted versions and reduce them down for extra flavor. Some of the most popular broth-based soups are French onion, chicken noodle and minestrone. Try your own take on one of these popular classics or clean out the fridge and make something unique.

Once you have a flavorful, nutritious and savory broth the rest is up to your imagination. When the winter chill finally makes its way to your home, consider soup as a healthy way to warm up the family without breaking the bank during this snowy season. Soup is a great option for all dieters as it can help to decrease your overall intake of calories, is convenient to heat and serve, and can be made from ingredients such as low-sodium and low-fat broths, brown rice, barley and, of course, healthy vegetables.

Agustinus "Iwan" Setiawan is the head chef at Bare Cove Cafe & Catering, located at 69 Water St. in Hingham. From fall through spring, Chef Setiawan offers a daily variety of soups, bisques and chowders, all made in-house. From chicken noodle to lobster bisque, they are prepared from scratch, using only natural and healthy ingredients. Bare Cove's lobster chowder was the 2011 winner of the "Taste of Hingham" best chowder competition, and the apple-squash bisque has been this winter's most popular soup item. Other Bare Cove soups include chicken vegetable, Hungarian mushroom, beef stew, roasted tomato bisque, split pea and ham, French onion and chicken tortilla.

Sick as a dog

5 ways pets can make you sick

By Avery Mann
American Profile

There are several diseases cats, dogs and other animals can transmit to humans, but how likely are humans to get sick? Here is a look at five diseases that you can get from pets.

Giardiasis
A common gastrointestinal infection occurring in dogs and cats. When humans are infected, it usually is from contact with a dog. Pets can pick up the infection by ingesting giardia in its cyst form, generally in food or water. Humans may become infected by ingesting cysts that may be in the dog's fur. Keeping hands away from your face when petting or playing with pets can help reduce the risk of giardiasis. Washing hands after handling your pet can reduce the risk of infection as well. You and your pet, when infected, may suffer diarrhea and stomach upset. Treatment for both human and pets is medication. Bathing the animal may help prevent re-infection.

Hookworms
Pet owners are more likely to become infected with hookworms when there is a puppy or kitten in the home. Humans can contact hookworms through the skin, especially when walking barefoot in a dirt area where an infected animal has been. Hookworms are the second-most common internal parasite for animals, according to the American Veterinary Medical Association. When hookworm larvae infect a human, a skin disease called larva migrans, or creeping eruption, can occur as the larvae travel throughout the body.

Cat scratch fever
Cat scratch fever is more than a Ted Nugent song. It is a bacterial disease transmitted from cats to humans through bites and scratches. Each year in the U.S., according to KidsHealth.org, about 22,000 cases of cat scratch fever are diagnosed, usually in children. Kids are more likely to become infected because they play more with kittens and cats, receiving scratches and nips. About two weeks after a bite, lymph nodes may become swollen. Other symptoms include fever, loss of appetite and tiredness. Many cases of cat scratch fever will not need treatment. Some may require antibiotics.

Roundworms
Roundworms, also known as nematodes, are the most common internal parasite that infects dogs and cats. A pet with roundworms may suffer infections in the lungs and intestines. If the pet's infection is left untreated, roundworms can lead to pneumonia and even death. Humans can get roundworms from their pets when the eggs or larvae are unintentionally ingested. Because there is more than one type of roundworm, medications to treat the infection vary. Pet owners can reduce the risk of roundworms by practicing good hygiene, washing hands after playing with or handling any animal or after contact with animal waste.

Tularemia
Tularemia is a bacterial disease. Humans can contract it from deer fly and tick bites, as well as through skin contact with infected cats. Handwashing after handling an infected cat can help reduce the risk of tularemia in humans. Its symptoms include headache, muscle pain and chills. It can be treated with antibiotics.

Budgeting 101

By Paula Harris

The word budget often makes people cringe but another way think about it is just being money mindful. If you get too granular about budgeting, it will often cause the process to get onerous, and often you just give up.

After you've determined your monthly income (net taxes and other deductions), we recommend the 50/30/20 approach to budgeting. Pay yourself first by setting aside 20 percent of what you earn to your savings – have it automatically transferred from your paycheck or bank account to a savings or brokerage account. This money would be saved for retirement, your rainy-day fund, big projects, a new car, college savings, etc. If 20 percent feels like too much, start by making sure you participate in your 401(k) plan so that you receive the full match of your employer's retirement program.

The next is 50 percent of your budget should be spent on the "must haves." These are the necessities of day-to-day life such as shelter, food, clothing, transportation, utilities and insurance policies.

Finally, the 30 percent can be spent on the "nice to haves": going out to eat or take-out food, designer clothing, vacations and entertainment, like movies, concerts, theater and sporting events.

Here are some ideas to increase your cash flow:
- Eat leftovers.
- Bring your lunch to work.
- Make your coffee at home.
- If you must drink soda, avoid purchasing individual portions.
- Buy what's on sale and use coupons.
- Drink filtered water rather than bottled water.
- Use generic or store-brand products.
- Have a home energy audit done (usually free from one of the utility companies).
- Get a library card to borrow books, movies and museum passes.
- Take advantage of discounted entertainment and restaurant deals.

For some of your bigger purchases, think about the following:
- Buy a used car vs. a new car since a new car depreciates 15-20 percent in its first year and each following year.
- Avoid taking vacations during peak travel time and save lots of money.
- Consider doing a home swap or renting a house vs. staying in a hotel – you can better control your food costs.

Follow the 50/30/20 approach to budgeting, recommends Paula Harris, co-founder and principal of WH Cornerstone Investments in Duxbury. Of your monthly income, direct 20 percent to savings, 50 percent to "must-haves" and 30 percent to "nice-to-haves." PHOTO COURTESY OF METRO

- Consolidate your insurance coverage with one carrier and save up to 20 percent.
- Have a gift closet for birthday parties and hostess gifts so you are not running out at the last minute and overspending.
- If you are really daring, cut back to basic cable and save 50-100 percent over premium service.
- Have only a cell phone or a home phone – not both.
- Enact the 24-hour rule before making a purchase you might later regret.

The bottom line in budgeting is making mindful money deci sions. A bit of forward planning can save you lots of money. But remember this last tip – spend less than you make. It's really that simple.

EXERCISE

Make winter workouts fun

Indoor facilities offer more than just weight machines

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

It's almost mid-January. Have you stuck to your New Year's resolutions? If they involved fitness and exercise, like most popular resolutions, this time of year can be difficult to stick with a plan that works and is fun. Enter indoor sports and fitness facilities.

Find a facility with indoor tennis courts, like these at the South Shore YMCA in Hanover, so you can hone your game now in preparation for spring. PHOTO COURTESY OF SOUTH SHORE YMCA

"We have got everything that a full-service gym does, like treadmills and elliptical machines, but we also offer fun sports like water aerobics and water Zumba," Amy Webb, owner of Webb's ProFitness in Norwell, said. "We have people who have been runners and had an injury. They love to stay fit using the pool. It's especially fun this time of year getting into a pool that is 82 or 83 degrees with the sun shining through the windows. We also have the stereo system piped into the pool and people just love that."

Finding a fitness program that is right for you can be half the battle.

"There are lots of classes for strength training, yoga, Pilates and spinning so we tend to be a class gym, but we also have personal trainers, as well," Webb said. "In the wintertime, exercise is so good, not only physically but mentally as well for us. This time of year a lot of people experience seasonal affective disorder so it really helps if you have something fun to do to get you out and about."

South Shore Country Club in Hingham introduced the golf simulator concept to the facility about a year ago with two machines.

"After just one year it was so successful they decided to add a third simulator, which was installed in January," said Julie Rosso of Gray Matter Agency, who works with South Shore Country Club. "They realized there was clearly an audience looking to golf in the winter. The simulators are from a company called About Golf and they offer a live look that simulates a round of golf from Pebble Beach to St. Andrew's."

The club has also just renovated the bowling alley that has candlepin bowling.

"The Tour and The Alley are both great for people of all ages because now they can come here, bring their own clubs and have a golf pro work with them on their swing in the winter months so they will be great on the course in the spring," Rosso said.

Village Racquet in Plymouth and Scituate Tennis offer a range of tennis lessons for people from 4 to 90 years of age so there is a program for everyone.

"There is a 75-foot pool at the Plymouth facility so we have the ability accommodate a swim team as well as an individual looking to focus on agility," owner Chris Horne said. "We also have a pool under construction in Scituate, as well. Tennis in New England is very popular but when it comes to September through May, it becomes an indoor sport because of the weather in New England."

Both of the clubs also offer fitness programs so you can play a round of tennis and cool off with some swimming.

"There is a range of all people from all ages, who come here and obviously there are different levels of fitness," Horne said. "All indoor multipurpose facilities offer a place to go for one-stop shopping. I think it's also becoming great for parents looking to keep their kids healthy. Childhood obesity has become an important topic and it's a great way to curb it. In the summertime, kids go outside and play at the beach but what are they to do in the winter? There is a big push now to offer kids fitness programs in New England for the other eight months of the year. It's all about longevity for life."

Facilities like the YMCA offer everything from indoor tennis courts and gaming rooms, with ping pong tables and arcades, to gymnastics and a pool, both for people looking to swim laps as well as for children who enjoy the slides.

"From Zumba to martial arts, indoor tennis, basketball and swimming, we have a lot to offer at our Mill Pond and Quincy Y branches to help keep our members motivated and fit during the winter months," Jim Bunell, executive director of the South Shore YMCA, said. "Our specialized fitness classes are always well received and our instructors help their clients reach their goals and see results. Our programs take place in a safe and structured environment and were designed for clients of all ages. Our goal is to make healthy living accessible to all, including those with limited mobility or special needs."

This just might be the answer you have been looking for to keep you in shape all year long.

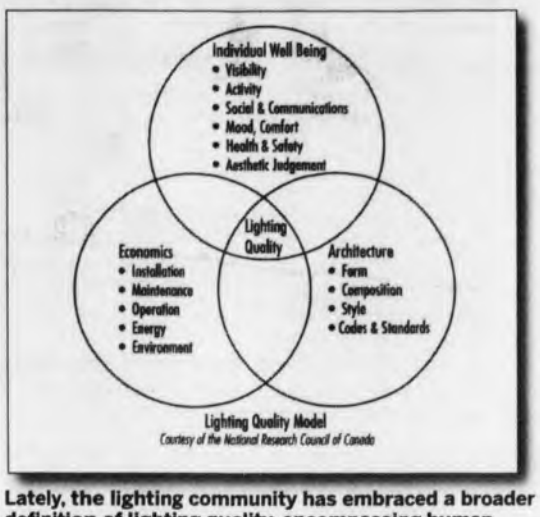
Healthy lighting

Beat the winter blues with the right kind of light

By Joy Smith

Until the late 1990s, lighting recommendations were based primarily on lighting for visibility. Lately, the lighting community has embraced a broader definition of lighting quality, encompassing human needs, architectural integration and economic constraints (including energy). These human needs incorporate vision but also demand attention to lighting for the maintenance of good health, task performance, interpersonal communication and aesthetic appreciation. And with the advent of the new laws governing our light bulbs starting sometime this year, the concept of healthy lighting must factor in limitations of old lighting sources and embrace new technologies such as full spectrum light bulbs and light therapy.

Healthy lighting provides relief from the winter blues



Many of us suffer from the winter blues or the more serious condition, seasonal affective disorder, without realizing it. With the onset of fall and winter, the gloomy weather can trigger sadness, sleep difficulties, increased appetite, craving of carbohydrates, weight gain, lack of energy, irritability, anxiety and concentration problems. If you experience any of these symptoms, light therapy and new light bulbs might be the way to bring needed sunshine into your life. Researchers have recently discovered that full spectrum lighting, along with enhanced blue spectrum, has a greater impact on resetting our circadian rhythms (sleep pattern) and melatonin production, and can increase our energy levels. Light therapy is a non-invasive, healthy way to help our bodies deal with the lack of sunlight we all experience. If you feel gloomy during the winter months or suffer from depression, spending approximately 30 minutes every morning using a light therapy product is one way you could improve your mood and sleep cycles.

The finding that the body's biological clock is most sensitive to the blue portion of the light spectrum promises not only to dramatically improve treatment for those who suffer from seasonal affective disorder but also to revolutionize indoor lighting for everyone. Our workplaces, schoolrooms and living environments can be improved by replacing traditional cool white bulbs with full spectrum bulbs. Headaches, eyestrain and foggy thinking – symptoms most commonly attributed to stress or fatigue – may well be the result of the antiquated fluorescent lighting still being used in 99 percent of schools and offices today. Many consumers are under the impression a traditional light box must be used to achieve light therapy, which previously may have been true.

Now multifunctional desk lamps and floor lamps are available for both light therapy and task lighting.

So another simple, healthy way to light your home is to replace your bulbs with full-spectrum bulbs, readily available at lighting shops and hardware stores. These pass the new regulations coming into effect because they are available in both halogen and compact fluorescent lamp types. The halogen bulbs look just like a regular light bulb and can replace any in your home. They also come in parabolic aluminized reflector and other forms to replace recessed ceiling lights. By changing your light sources, you'll experience improved energy, concentration and mood naturally without the use of drugs or artificial stimulants.

Need help with your goals?

Take a look at hypnosis therapy

By Jeffrey Scott Rosen

The myths and misconceptions of hypnotherapy are endless. Will hypnosis make you cluck like a chicken when you hear someone's fingers snap? No. But hypnosis can help you easily, quickly and naturally achieve your most wanted personal goals – be it to lose weight, quit smoking or conquer a phobia.

All therapy work is subjective and who you work with matters – a lot. Be sure to find a certified practitioner; one who is certified by the National Guild of Hypnotists. One can look online, contact local advertisers or consult the Yellow Pages, but, of course, word of mouth is the best kind of testimonial. It is best to work one on one with your practitioner rather than as part of a group so your sessions can be tailored specifically to you. Hypnosis is a wonderful tool to break the chains of old habits that might not be in your best interest anymore. Most people use hypnotherapy to take back control of that which is most important to them. The mere and honest desire to make a positive change is all that is usually required for your success.

Under any stage of hypnosis, you never lose control. Hypnotherapy is simply utilizing the powers of suggestion while the client is at a very relaxed stage of consciousness. After thorough conscious client profiling, the next step is to have the client sit in a comfortable recliner. Relaxation is the key so if the client wants to take off his or her shoes, it is always suggested. The next part of the process is what we call utilizing a progressive relaxation approach, to induce a hypnotic level.

There are two ways a person can relax: physically and mentally. A progressive relaxation approach is completely safe and allows the client to relax and let go. Similar to when a person goes to bed at night, you go through stages of increased relaxation. These stages are as follows: beta – full state of consciousness; alpha – relaxation; theta – deeper relaxation; delta – the beginnings of sleep. Any stage of alpha through delta opens the subconscious part of one's mind for positive suggestion.

Our minds are divided up into three major groups: conscious, subconscious and unconscious. The conscious is the last step before any action or lack of action is taken. The subconscious is where all of our feelings and emotions are stored, which generally rules our actions. It is most beneficial to work with clients at all levels. Through simple relaxation and conscious suggestion, one can easily break the habitual nature of past negative habits such as smoking, trouble with weight loss, unwanted stress, drug and alcohol abuse, and fears and phobias.

Different practitioners use different methods and it's important to find a practitioner with whose methods you're comfortable. For example, I usually see clients for two sessions, one week apart; 90 minutes for the first session and 60 minutes for the second session; both include hypnosis. My program weaves in five tools for balance, perspective, enlightenment and personal empowerment utilizing conscious suggestion, subconscious suggestion, subliminal messaging, post-hypnotic suggestion and also a presleep self hypnotic technique, making it easy and natural for quick and positive change that can last a lifetime. Some of the most common subjects we work with are to help clients stop smoking; lose weight; reduce stress; conquer anxiety, fears and phobias; increase self-esteem and motivation; and help with goal setting, etc.

Hypnotherapy can also help clients who express feelings of unhappiness, experience depression, have emotional imbalances, or require relationship therapy to move beyond past negative experiences. Just about everyone is hypnotizable. However, it is not recommended for children under the age of 7 and adults who are developmentally delayed.

Working one on one with a qualified practitioner should give you the results you are looking for. It's important to do your homework while searching for the right hypnotherapist for you. Such homework steps include verifying a practitioner's specific credentials, asking about his or her history of success, obtaining valid testimonials and qualifying the hypnotherapist personally through a free consultation to find the right fit for you, regarding your specific needs.

Profound change can be easy, quick and natural utilizing hypnosis therapy.

Jeffrey Scott Rosen is an Advanced Certified Clinical Hypnotherapist, whose practice, Hypnosis Center of Weymouth, specializes in helping clients stop smoking, lose weight and reduce stress. For additional information, visit hypnosiscenterofweymouth.com or call Rosen at 781-331-8118.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JAN. 30, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The changes you've waited to see in your work situation might not be happening quite as quickly as you'd hoped. Although the pace is slow, it's ongoing. Expect to hear news soon.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You should be feeling very proud of the fine effort you've made to get that important project done. Now take some time out to celebrate with family and friends. You've earned it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You're close to reaching your objectives. That's the good news. But be careful: Your aspects show lots of potential distractions looming. Stay focused and keep your eyes fixed on your goals.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to let that suspicious Cancerian mind create a problem where none exists. What you might believe is an act of betrayal could be nothing more than a misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Lion's heart overflows with self-confidence. All you need to do is tap into it, and you'll be able to handle any change that must be made regarding that recent surprise development.

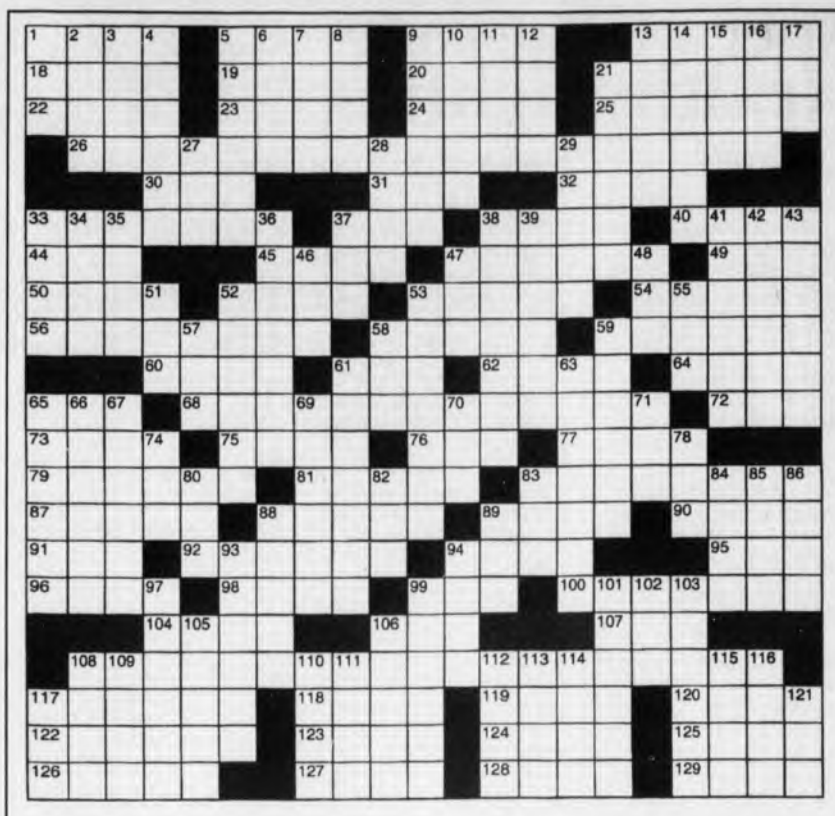
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The need to watch what you say becomes increasingly crucial this week. Be as temperate as you can with your comments and avoid arguments for the sake of controversy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A longtime family problem presents new demands. But this time, you won't have to go it alone: Someone else is asking to help share your responsibilities. Let it happen.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A period of feeling vulnerable is about to give way to a stronger, more self-confident aspect. Use this new strength to reaffirm promises you've made to others and yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A creative dilemma stalls your progress. Instead of letting it raise your ire, use the time to re-examine your aims and, perhaps, come up with a new target.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your nimble will finds a way for you to work out those newly emerged problems plaguing your new project. Stay with it. The results will be well worth your efforts.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might feel overwhelmed at having to decide which new opportunity you should follow. Best advice: Check them all out and see which offers what you really want.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Continue to tread water before you even consider plunging into something that never seemed quite right. Some facts will soon emerge that can help you make a decision.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

GIMME SHELTER

Ben needs a special someone

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Ben, a medium hair, white-and-black adult male. He is a gentle cat who is content to curl up in a sunny spot or in your lap. He gets along with other non-aggressive cats, but would be fine on his own. Ben does have a heart problem. The vet said, his heart skips a beat, every 4-5 beats and he has to be checked from time to time.

The shelter is hoping that someone, who lives in a relatively quiet household, can find room in their heart and in their home for Ben. The shelter would be willing to pick up any vet bills that accrue, due to Ben's pre-existing condition. You can meet Ben when you visit the Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. This is also a good time to purchase the 2012 Kittendales Calendar, which is also available online.

If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

Acclaimed soprano in concert Jan. 28

Currently, Clara Rottsolk is based in Philadelphia and teaches voice at Swarthmore College and the Lawrenceville School. COURTESY PHOTO

Rottsolk has given recitals of 18th and 19th century song in venues including the Goethe-Institut Boston, St. Mark's Church Philadelphia and Swarthmore College.

Clara Rottsolk and Silvia Berry will be performing a program called "Haydn in London." Berry will play a recently restored grand piano that was built in 1806, giving listeners the chance to hear an instrument much like the ones Haydn would have played.

The concert will be at First Parish Cohasset on Saturday, Jan. 28 at 8 p.m. First Parish is located on the green at North Main Street. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

This program of vocal music by Haydn features canzonettas written during his second London sojourn. Included will be such songs as "The Mermaid's Song," "The Wanderer," "Piercing Eyes," "She Never Told Her Love," and "Sailor's Song." Most of these songs are setting the poetry of Anne Hunter, a Scottish woman that Haydn became close friends with during his time in London. These songs will cover the range of human emotions, varying from the sublime to the hilarious!

Clara Rottsolk has performed at the Carmel Bach Festival, Whidbey Island Music Festival, Boston Early Music Festival, Indianapolis Early Music Festival, and the Festival de Música Barroca de Barichara (Colombia). In collaboration with fortepianist Sylvia Berry and guitarist-lutenist Daniel Swenberg, Rottsolk has given recitals of 18th and 19th century song in venues including the Goethe-Institut Boston, St. Mark's Church Philadelphia and Swarthmore College. Among her stage roles are Micaëla (Carmen), Dido (Dido and Aeneas), Arminda (La finta giardiniera) and Laetitia (The Old Maid and the Thief).

A native of Seattle, Rottsolk earned her music degrees at Rice University and Westminster Choir College, and was awarded for musical excellence by the Metropolitan Opera National Council Northwest Region. Currently, she is based in Philadelphia and teaches voice at Swarthmore College and the Lawrenceville School. www.clararottsolk.com Historical keyboard specialist and First Parish organist Sylvia Berry will play a grand piano built in 1806 by the prestigious London firm John Broadwood and Son that was recently restored by her husband, accomplished instrument restorer and builder, Dale Munschy. This piano is a sterling example of the kind of pianos Haydn would have encountered during his two London sojourns. English pianos were very different from those in his home of Vienna and it is clear that he tailored these compositions to fit their distinct characteristics. Haydn had a studio in the Broadwood workshop, so he knew these instruments well.

Berry, a native of Philadelphia, has performed as a soloist and chamber musician in the US, Canada, The Netherlands, and Italy. A specialist in late 18th- and early 19th-century Viennese music, she has quickly become a favorite in Boston and beyond not only for her exciting performances, but for her engaging commentary about the music and the instruments she plays.

For more about the concert, contact Allegra Martin at 617-872-0461.

Film Series at Glastonbury Continues

Glastonbury Abbey Center will hold a showing of the movie 'Arranged' on Tuesday, Jan. 24 at 7 p.m. at the Abbey Center, 16 Hull St. (2007, 90 minutes.)

This is the story of two young women from very conservative religious traditions, Rochel, an Orthodox Jew, and Nashira, a Syrian-born Muslim meet as new teachers at a school in Brooklyn. Both outsiders to mainstream culture, they become friends and share their frustrations with the arranged marriages they are expected to make. Both women struggle to follow a tradition that defines their identity, and to make their own authentic choices. Based in part on a true story, this film portrays issues of religious identity, tradition, and interfaith understanding.

Come for a casual evening of movie watching and discussion. This series includes six films that address themes of faith, morality, and spiritual meaning. There is no charge, but donations are gratefully accepted for the support of the Abbey Center.

Paying tribute to Mr. Marks

CHS music teacher honored for 35 years

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Music teacher Bryan Marks was taken by surprise.

Marks was directing his Cohasset High School students in a performance of their Cabaret show at the Atlantica Wednesday night when he quickly learned that the event was not just another routine performance.Marks's students and colleagues dedicated the evening to the music teacher, who will retire this spring after 35 years of teaching in Cohasset.

Following an a cappella performance by the chorus, band director Jennifer Moriarty told the crowd packing the reception room that what Marks thought was the Cabaret was actually a night of tribute.

"Many of us have been fortunate to have had Bryan as a teacher," Moriarty said.

What followed was a slideshow set to music, featuring photos of Marks throughout the years with his family and students. The music teacher was visibly emotional throughout

Which way should Cohasset water flow?

Commission, town manager debate future contract

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's water contract expires this June, and while it may seem far away, the Water Commission has spent months going over the options.

The commission met with a few volunteers from various boards (including two selectmen and members of the former Water Planning Group) Monday night to discuss their Request for Proposals (RFP) for a new water contract. The department plans to go out for bid soon and attract a new operator for the town water plant. The plan is to ink a 20-year concession contract, which would turn over operating risk to the plant's owner while allowing the water commission to continue to set the wa-

Budget creates problem

Certification in jeopardy

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When Cohasset's self-styled Budget Planning Group announced their recommendation for a level-funded town budget for fiscal year 2013 following their Dec. 15 meeting, it sent shockwaves through many town departments.

One department that would be severely affected by this type of budget is the library, officials say.

Like all public libraries, Cohasset's Paul Pratt Memorial Library is a haven for students and learners of all ages. More than a place to borrow books, it's become a multimedia center all its own, a place to go to in the current economic climate, when folks are looking for free entertainment and Blockbusters are no longer in business.

Libraries, it seems, are falling victim to the recession, facing an unfortunate Catch-22: when the economy is bad, library usage goes up. And when usage increases, so does the demand on services, staff, resources and equipment.

"Over the last two years as the library budget has been cut, our usage has increased," said Cohasset's Library Director Jackie Rafferty. "We work hard to meet the rising demand for library services.

When libraries are level-funded, they fail to meet state budget requirements and loss state certification. When that happens, libraries are forced to apply for waivers in order to meet the minimum standards. And

UPDATE

Marijuana law is three years old

What
The State Law went into effect January 2009 after being passed by the voters in November 2008. Possession of one or less ounce of marijuana is illegal. Any amount of marijuana is contraband and will be seized, police said. However, the smaller amount (less than one ounce) is now only punishable by a civil penalty (a fine only).

Cohasset numbers
In 2009, Cohasset police issued 12 civil citations (for possession of one ounce or less of marijuana).
In 2010, Cohasset police issued one civil citation (for possession of one ounce or less of marijuana).
In 2011, Cohasset police issued four civil citations (for possession of one ounce or less of marijuana).

More
- Any person issued the citation can appeal the civil infraction in court within 21 days or pay a $100 fine set in the law. Those under 18 would have to pay the fine and attend a drug abuse-counseling course, or have the fine increased to $1,000.
- Those who fail to pay the $100 fine can be taken to small claims court by the Police Department and will have an additional court-filing fee. Failure to pay may affect their credit rating

Drug
Police said THC (tetrahydrocannabinol, the active ingredient in marijuana), which affects its potency, is not the same as the marijuana of 25 years ago. It is now as much as tripled, according to the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Quote
"The current marijuana laws, as written, provide for patchwork enforcement at best — there are just too many loopholes for effective law enforcement. I hope that the Legislature revisits this issue and puts some teeth in the law,' said Deputy Chief of Police William Quigley.

Hingham police recently seized more than two pounds of marijuana, some of which is pictured here, following a traffic stop on Whiting Street (Route 53). COURTESY PHOTO

MV crashes are piling up

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• At 1:06 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 20), two women went to the police station to report they had been in involved in an accident in front of Tedeschi's in the village.

The 41-year-old Rockland woman in a 2012 Chevrolet pickup truck was backing out of a space when she backed into a 2012 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by the 54-year-old Cohasset woman, who was traveling on S. Main Street.

Neither car was towed. The Rockland woman was cited for failure to use caution, police said.

• At 1:55 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 20), police responded to an accident at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street. Police said at 1996 Cadillac DeVille, operated by a 41-year-old Scituate man, was stopped at the light, when the Cadillac was "rear-ended" by a 2011 Lexus SUV, operated by a 54-year-old Scituate woman. Both cars were headed north and both cars had to be towed. The operator of the Cadillac was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said. The operator of the Lexus was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

• At 2:06 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 20), police responded to an accident at Route 3A (King Street). Police said a 52-year-old man from Westport, Mass., operating a 1996 Peterbuilt Tractor Trailer unit that was carrying a large excavator on the trailer was attempting to turn right into Avalon when it struck a 1998 Mitsubishi Montero, operated by a 78-year-old Hull woman. Police said the truck had its right directional on but had to pull out to the left to make the right-turn into the Avalon complex. The Hull woman, who was also headed south, attempted to pass the tractor-trailer on the right. Her car clipped the front end of the truck, sending the car careening across the highway and onto the lawn of Good Sport. The car also took down a Mass-DOT traffic sign, police said. There were no reported injuries. The Mitsubishi had to be towed and the Hull woman was cited for passing on the right, police said. Police said the woman thought the truck was pulling into Dunkin' Donuts when she attempted to pass on the right.

• At 8:37 a.m. on Saturday (Jan. 21), police responded to a single-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near the MBTA parking lot. Police said a 2002 Nissan Xtera, operated by a 52-year-old Cohasset man, was headed north approaching the train station lot when the car slid on some ice and went into a Mass-DOT traffic sign. There were no injuries and the accident was weather-related, police said.

• At 2:49 p.m. on Saturday (Jan. 21), police said a 1986 Ford dump truck, owned by the Town of Cohasset, and operated by a 52-year-old DPW employee, had stopped at the stop sign at the top of Beechwood Street at S. Main Street. Police said a 2004 Lexus, operated by an 81-year-old Cohasset man, that was behind the dump truck, slid into the back of the truck. The Lexus was towed. There were no injuries and no citations. The accident was weather-related, police said.

Neighbors

A resident, who lives in the upstairs apartment, went to the police station last week (Monday, Jan. 16) to complain about the downstairs neighbor. The upstairs tenant, a 38-year-old woman, had her nieces and nephew over. The downstairs tenant did not like the noise and started hitting the ceiling below the floor of her apartment with a broom handle. Police said the woman just wanted the incident logged.

Unlicensed

A 37-year-old Rockland woman is being summonsed to court to face the charges of operating without a license and speeding. Police pulled over the 2005 Toyota 4Runner that she was driving on Forest Avenue at around 6:42 p.m. on Monday (Jan. 16) because she was traveling 45 in a posted, 30 mph zone. Once pulled over, the woman presented police with a Brazilian passport and did not have a license. Her car was towed, police said.

Slid off road

Police responded to a call last Monday (Jan. 16) at 11:46 p.m. from a resident who was reporting hearing loud noises in the vicinity of Stanton Road and S. Main Street and seeing some people pushing a car. When police arrived the car was gone but there was evidence that a vehicle has slid off the road into some bushes at #3 and #4 Stanton Road. Police said the roads were icy at the time and the incident was weather-related.

No parking

An employer called police last Friday (Jan. 20) about no parking notices placed on the windshields of her employees' cars to see if they were legitimate. Police did put the notices on cars to issue a warning that parking all day long along Ripley Road and Depot Court is not allowed.

No ID theft

A 48-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last Thursday (Jan. 19) that she had received an email confirming the purchase of $400 in tickets to a Broadway show using her Mastercard and thought she was a victim of identity theft.

The woman later recalled that she had in fact allowed a friend to make the purchase using her card as a surprise for the friend's husband.

Lost in woods

Police assisted a 61-year-old Cohasset man with a ride home on Saturday (Jan. 21) at about 8:30 a.m. after he was lost walking his dog in Wheelwright Park. The man found his way out onto Jerusalem Road by Holly Hill Farm after being lost for a couple of hours, police said. He explained that he had become disoriented due to the snow.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations will be in effect from Nov. 15 through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

Expiration dates

In a necessary effort to manage their cost, the Registry of Motor Vehicles may not notify drivers by mail of pending license or registration expiration. Police ask that you be diligent in regard to paying attention to expiration dates on your license and registration.

Should you discover either has expired simply go onto the Registry's website www.massdot.state.ma.us/rmv/ and you may renew either with a credit card. You will receive a confirmation number immediately while you await the mailing of your renewal.

GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

'Baker's Dozen' for Cohasset

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town Manager Mike Coughlin presented his latest list of initiatives to the Board of Selectmen during Tuesday night's meeting (many may recall the "11 for '11" goals and objectives that Coughlin presented during his first month on the job). These new goals are ones that Coughlin plans to oversee during calendar year 2012/fiscal 2013.

The number one aim, Coughlin wrote in a memo to the board, is "a continuation of our efforts to achieve financial stability and improve the credibility of our financial department."

The town manager hopes to soon overcome all of the issues in the finance department, especially since he appointed the new finance director/town accountant, Mary Gallagher, who began working full-time at Cohasset Town Hall on Dec. 17.

Coughlin grouped the remaining 12 goals into three categories: public safety, operations, and social services.

Public Safety: Police and Fire

- Control overtime
- Complete transition to the South Shore Regional Emergency Center (SSREC)
- Achieve certification of the Cohasset Police Department
- Look to decrease fire department response times and plan for a new public safety facility

Operations: Highway, Facilities, Water and Sewer

- Complete process to select and transition to a new plant operations model for the water department
- Complete sewer audit
- Secure Seaport Advisory Council funding for harbor improvements
- Complete repairs to police/fire station; secure funds for engineering projects

Social Services: Council on Aging, Library, Recreation and Veterans Services

- Select, budget and support a new permanent veterans' service officer
- Expand senior center programming and continue plans for a new senior center
- Increase the library budget from 1.5 percent to two percent and assist in planning for future library needs
- Expand recreational programs and enhance staffing

These goals, wrote Coughlin, "provide a game plan for the team and a roadmap of where we want to go in the year ahead."

For more on how the town manager's goals and objectives factored into the overall budget discussion during Tuesday's special selectmen meeting, see story on page _.

Beer for the water board

Beverage offered at commission meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

There's more than water on tap at the Water Commission meetings.

According to reports, during Monday night's meeting at the town water plant, which was posted as an official meeting both on the Town Hall board and online, the commission discussed their plans for a new water department contract. Chairman Peter DeCaprio told the Mariner that this was an "informal gathering" between the commission and volunteers from various town boards "who are informed about what we're up to and knowledgeable about contracts."

The Cohasset Mariner did not attend this meeting, but blogger Tanna Kasperowicz covered it for the Tinytown Gazette and described the beer drinking on her website. Kasperowicz said in a phone call that selectmen Paul Carlson and Leland Jenkins attended the meeting but did not partake of any alcohol, although they also did not tell DeCaprio that liquor was not allowed. She added that he had a tiny cooler; "it was not a beer-fest."

Still, Kasperowicz raised the question: should alcohol be consumed during a public meeting?

Since the meeting took place at the dinner hour, from 6 to 8 p.m., DeCaprio planned to serve pizza and beverages, including sparkling water, soda, water and beer. Said the chairman, it would have been rude not to do so.

The pizza order, however, was messed up, DeCaprio said, and so only beverages were served. The chairman insists that he did not break the law.

"I could have had the meeting at my house, but I didn't," DeCaprio said in a phone call, explaining that he held the meeting at the water plant simply because many people in town have never been inside the facility. "At the next meeting, we'll have wine and cheese."

And while DeCaprio insists that this meeting was not official but "informal," the town clerk's office told the Mariner, "If it's on the website, it's an official meeting. The water department faxed it over, and we posted it."

The question is whether or not alcohol should be allowed at public meetings; DeCaprio said that the commission did not break the law.

The water board chairman also said that the intention of this meeting was "to be as open as possible." DeCaprio added that the commission wants help with the RFP process because "the last contract was a disaster," and he wants townspeople to know that the new contract will be the result of "the most vetted, looked at process."

The commission plans to make several public presentations on the matter, DeCaprio said.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who was not at Monday night's meeting, expressed his disapproval of the gesture in an email to DeCaprio, which he also copied to the Police Chief.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca told the Mariner in a phone call that while he hadn't heard of folks drinking during a public meeting before, he could not comment on the legality of it.

Drinking alcohol at a public meeting may be less of a legal issue and more of a matter of ethics. The school committee serves coffee; the selectmen drink water and soda, then routinely head to Mr. Dooley's to unwind after their Tuesday night meetings.

Whether the water commission crossed a legal line is unclear; but even if they were within their legal right to imbibe, was the action ethical?

Coughlin had plenty to say on the matter during a phone call Wednesday.

This is my fourth town, and it's policy and practice that no alcoholic beverages be consumed at town-operated facilities without the approval of the Board of Selectmen or the licensing authority of the town, which is the Board of Selectmen. That rule applies whether it's an official public meeting or informal social meeting. In this case, it was an official, posted town meeting where town business was discussed; proper decorum and respect for the law should be demonstrated. We're going to be issuing a cautionary advisory to all boards and commissions in town that this should not happen nor be tolerated.

"It underscores the need to update some of our policies. I think in the future, there will be no fire-water served at the water department — only water."

Despite the pun, Coughlin added, "I don't take this situation lightly. I was also taken aback by the bylaws that the Town Manager is responsible for the joint management of the water department and wasn't invited to this meeting. Then I learned that it was quite the social function.

"We take this seriously — that's why we sent a cautionary note out. The chief of police was copied on that, as was the chairman of the board of selectmen.

"It sets up a bad perception where the most important contract in the near-term future of the town is being debated, and alcohol beverages are being consumed — it doesn't bode well. Let's abide to the standards of conduct here but not overreact."

WATER

The plan is to ink a 20-year concession contract, which would turn over operating risk to the plant's owner while allowing the water commission to continue to set the water rate.

ter rate. This keeps the control in the town's hands, according to water commission chair Peter DeCaprio, while transferring operating risk to another party.

"The contract structure is going to be such that the contractor is basically going to take control of our revenue stream," DeCaprio said in a phone call Tuesday. "We're tying to motivate our operator to be as efficient as possible and want them to share in the benefits [of revenue growth]. We as a town want to participate in our efficiency in whatever process improvement our next operator will be able to come up with...We don't want to make too many impositions on the contractor that harm his economics; at the same time, we want to make our money's worth and plan our own capital expenditures."

DeCaprio explained that a concession contract allows the operator to access a revenue stream over 20 years; the operator, in turn, gives the town "a big chunk of cash up front."

A concession contract is attractive for both the operator and the ratepayers, according to the water commission chair.

"If it's a good operator who can improve processes, they get an incremental profit. The benefit to the town and water customers, for the privilege of getting access to the cash flow, is that they will pay us an internal rate of return at a discount."

Again, DeCaprio said, a concession contract "allows us to transfer the operating risk of a bad revenue risk to the operator. We want to do it because it takes the water commission out of the dialogue loop at Town Hall."

Town Manager Mike Coughlin is troubled by this, especially if one of the potential bidders turns out to be Aquarion Water.

Aquarion currently services only North Cohasset, but could become the operator of Cohasset's water plant, if they bid and are chosen by the town (the matter will come before Town Meeting).

Meanwhile, towns like neighboring Hingham are stepping away from Aquarion, considering instead a town-run water department.

Hingham

Hingham's Board of Selectmen recently issued a statement that they are hoping the town will take control of the water company due to a "significant rate hike" from Aquarion.

From the Hingham selectmen's press release:

"In 2009, Aquarion was granted a significant increase in its water rates (which the town also opposed). Aquarion has informed the DPU [Department of Public Utilities] that as part of its business plan, it will be requesting a rate hike every three years. As a for-profit company, Aquarion's focus on profit for its shareholders will always be at the forefront of its decision-making process. The town, on the other hand, would prefer that its residents, who are paying the fifth-highest water rates in the state, be at the forefront of all water service decisions."

According to the Hingham Journal, Hingham Selectman Laura Burns noted at a recent meeting that Aquarion is owned by an Australian company.

"The Hingham Water Company has wandered far from its roots, and it's time to consider this possibility," said Burns.

The Worcester Telegram similarly reported that the town of Oxford is also moving away from Aquarion after the DPU granted the company a 33 percent rate increase for all of its Massachusetts communities in 2009. Last year, the company asked for a 16.5 percent hike for customers in Hingham, Hull and Cohasset, which will take place this April, if approved.

Cohasset's Town Manager sees this as a red flag, and hopes that citizens will take note.

Coughlin called the future of water in Cohasset "a paramount issue."

The crux of the issue, according to Coughlin, is not so much which company will bid to run Cohasset water; it's about the benefits of private versus public management.

In an email to the Mariner, Coughlin wrote, "In Cohasset we appear ready to make the argument that private is better, but our neighboring community, Hingham, appears to be saying the opposite."

"My concern for the town is that the debate will be framed between concession and public management — there isn't a third option," Coughlin said in a phone call. "What about a five-year management or smaller multiple year management, like what we presently have with American Water?" Cohasset's sewer department, for example, is in the second of a five-year operator contract.

But getting out from under the American Water contract is exactly what the water department is aiming to do.

In an article for the Tinytown Gazette, DeCaprio called the current water contract "onerous," and that once free of this contract, "the water company can generate significant free cash flow. We believe we can get an operator to pay us for that."

DeCaprio said during a presentation to the selectmen in December that a new contract would free the water commission to focus more on water quality and less on capital constraints.

The water chairman expressed then that he hopes to keep the water department out of Town Hall. He elaborated in a phone call that, as a taxpayer, he doesn't want to see the water plant employees become town of Cohasset employees, thus disagreeing with Coughlin's desire to have the water department run in-house.

No matter which direction Cohasset water heads in, the Town Manager hopes that the rest of the town will engage in a "rigorous debate" before anything is decided.

DeCaprio said that his commission plans to hold several public forums on the matter and be "as transparent as possible" during the process.

Coughlin did not attend Monday's water commission meeting but told the Mariner that he wasn't invited. Mark Brennan of the Operations Department, who acts as a special assistant to the Town Manager, was in attendance and filled Coughlin in on the discussion.

The Town Manager then aired his concerns over the contract to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night, telling them that he wants to find a "third option" for Cohasset water.

BUDGET

Tackling overtime

Town Manager, selectmen address overtime, other woes

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

On Tuesday night, what was supposed to be a special meeting of the Board of Selectmen turned into a drawn-out discussion on overtime problems, staff additions and budget increases in several town departments.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin has been vocal about his disapproval of the Budget Planning Group's recommendation that the town adopt a level-funded budget. This would mean making severe cuts for several departments where Coughlin is planning to add staff or has already done so.

The police department recently hired two full-time officers; they were planning to add a third, but the candidate, who recently returned from Afghanistan, has decided to go back into military service. They are down to 15 officers and one chief and would like to add four more positions, Chief Mark DeLuca told selectmen.

The Town Manager's office also added a part-time staff person to assist the assistant to the Town Manager. Mary Gallagher recently became the town's new finance director/town accountant, and there are talks of adding a full-time accountant to help that department with day-to-day accounting. Interim town accountant Eric Kinsherf, a consultant who acted as the town's finance director before Gallagher was hired, is staying on for the time being to assist Gallagher. The treasurer collector's office will also need to fill a position when interim Dan Sullivan, also a consultant, leaves Cohasset.

The Recreation Department also hopes to increase its staff in order to meet the demands of its successful summer program.

Department heads were invited to Tuesday's meeting to present their second quarter budget reports and mid-year expenditure reviews, as well as discuss their goals and objectives for fiscal 2013.

What the selectmen were hearing, across the board, were requests for more staff and bigger budgets.

"Every department needs more staff," Selectman Diane Kennedy observed. "At some point if there isn't enough money, we need to limit programs."

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore said that the "overspending" when it comes to personnel is his biggest concern.

Looking at the numbers from fiscal 2011, Pescatore noted, "We're running way past that. If the selectmen approve additional headcount, I expect to see overtime come way down.

The Town Manager said that increasing staff would solve the overtime problem and improve services.

"Take any individual department; their inability to perform can be linked to inadequate staff," said Coughlin. "The issue of overtime is directly linked to the size of the departments."

However, Coughlin noted, the improvements would not be "dramatic" to start: "We have a long way to go."

Many of the budgets are relatively small to start with; the library, for example, absorbs only 1.5 percent of the town's overall operating budget (see story on page one); when Coughlin told the selectmen the budget should be raised to 2 percent, he called the amount "a bargain."

Department heads expressed concern that, were their departments level-funded and budgets slashed, they would be unable to provide quality services.

Perhaps the largest concern was for public safety.

The Town Manager told the board that controlling overtime is the number one priority for both the police and fire departments in FY 2013.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia pointed out that his department does not have an overtime problem, but a staffing one. Because they've been unable to fill three positions in the fire department, they've been using overtime money in order to have enough staff, Silvia explained.

The fire department has expended 42 percent of its FY 2012 budget to date, said Silvia (see budget sidebar).

"Barring anything unforeseen, we should be able to come in on budget. Our objective is to get staff hired and fill out the department properly," Silvia said.

Selectmen were more worried about the overtime problem in the police department. Halfway through the current fiscal year, the department has expended $290,872 of $350,000 appropriated for overtime.

Police Mark DeLuca said that the overtime problem is "driven by a manpower shortage," explaining that the department has four vacancies and a few officers out with injuries.

"The only way to lower overtime is to get bodies onboard," DeLuca said.

Selectman Leland Jenkins asked DeLuca how many officers are on-duty during the day; DeLuca responded that there are three patrolling officers, two detectives, himself and Deputy Chief Bill Quigley.

Jenkins fumed, "I'm not going to stand up at town meeting and defend your overtime; you don't have a three-man crew, you have a five-man crew."

Coughlin interjected that each officer is necessary to tackle different functions of police work, from detective work to administrative duties and community outreach programs.

"Detectives are doing investigations; it's an important part of our job," DeLuca added.

"You have to make management decisions even if safety is infringed upon," said Jenkins.

Coughlin countered that he refused to make management decisions that would impair public safety.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr told DeLuca that the board is simply concerned about the overtime "burn rate" and that the problem must be addressed.

DeLuca told Carr that it depends on "how quickly we can get officers on the street." He asked the board to consider letting the department go back to having 19 officers; Carr told the chief to take it up with Advisory.

Kennedy said that the overtime issue might be something the town has to live with.

"Our backs are against the wall — we have 100 days till Town Meeting," said Kennedy. "What do we need to do to run the department? Maybe we understand we're going to have an overtime budget. What does it take to deliver the services we need?"

Toward the end of the meeting, Coughlin told the board that he would introduce a balanced, level services budget for fiscal year 2013, not a level-funded one.

"The selectmen will determine that," Jenkins said.

Coughlin told Jenkins that it was part of the Town Manager's job.

"You've heard from the department heads," Coughlin concluded. "How can we level fund the budget? We're going to have overtime issues; let's be realistic about it. There is no need for budgetary scare tactics."

The Town Manager told the selectmen that Gallagher would have the fiscal 2013 forecast ready to present in mid-February.

Member Linda Tobin says, "I had always been able to lose weight on my own when I was younger by modifying my diet, but at 49 I needed something more structured in order to lose the extra weight that I had gained.

Still, I found excuses not to check out GISFW until I ran into a girlfriend at a New Year's party. She had recently reached her weight loss goal, and would be turning 50 just days before me. I looked on the GISFW website and found her testimonial along with many others, and thought that most stories sounded very much like my own.

In my first month after joining GISFW I lost 11 pounds, and after three months I've lost a total of 17 pounds. The personal training, nutrition guidance, online meal plan tracking and accountability all work together to make Get In Shape For Women an ideal place for women of all ages and abilities to come together with the common goal of becoming more fit."

Locavore is good for you

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

What is a locavore?

It's someone who insists on eating locally grown, locally made, locally sourced cuisine, whether it's vegetables from the garden or farmer's market or milk from a nearby dairy farm. Locavores prefer to eat food that doesn't travel hundreds of thousands of miles before it's processed, packaged and finally lands on the grocery store shelves and freezers; it's all about fresh food that goes straight from farm to table.

Like the broader environmental movement, eating locally is having a moment — see films like Food Inc.

Why eat local fare? It's what's best for our bodies: fresh foods are the most nutrient-dense and keep us in fighting shape, helping us build up immunity to local allergens. Meanwhile, this healthy diet is also good for the planet by scaling back production and preserving natural resources that are becoming all too precious. Last but not least, it boosts the local economy.

Publications from national newspapers to small-scale foodie blogs offer tips and tricks for eating not only locally, but doing so in-season. Some resources:

• All the Best: Cohasset's natural foods store carries locally made healthy snacks ranging from Authentically You! Power Snacks to Mama Micki's vegan and gluten-free cookies; both of these goodies are crafted in nearby Scituate.

• Atlantica: At this Cohasset mainstay, head chef Garry Payne specializes in crafting comfort food using only the freshest local ingredients; he's also a big fan of cooking seasonally.

• EatLocal.net: A resource explaining the how, why, when and where of local eating.

• EatWellGuide.org: Plug in your information, including zip code, for a listing of local shops, cafes, restaurants, farmers, bakers, butchers, food trucks and more that serve up healthy, sustainable, organic and local fare.

• FieldtoPlate.com: Allows you to check which foods are in season in any state.

• Mass.gov, Department of Agricultural Resources: For a complete listing of farmer's markets all over the Commonwealth and a guide to shopping seasonally, check: www.mass.gov/agr/markets/farmersmarkets/get_fresh_seasons.htm

• NewEnglandGrown.com: A more general guide to what's in-season in New England, featuring links to local farms and products as well as a seasonal cooking blog.

• SustainableTable.org: Another comprehensive site that explains the importance of sustainable eating, offering tips and a dictionary of terms.

Your turn:

The Cohasset Mariner is introducing a new weekly feature: On the Green Beat, a section that covers environmental news, tips and initiatives happening around town each week.

Whether you're a business owner, town official, board member or avid recycler, we want to hear from you: what you're doing to go green, or greener; what you think Cohasset could be doing; things you've noticed that the town is doing right.

Send your thoughts, observations and tips to: Erin Dale, Reporter, edale@wickedlocal.com or call 781-741-2935.

Library receives $10,000 bequest

Paul Pratt Memorial Library recently received a $10,000 bequest from the estate of Louise H. Bowker who recently passed away at the age of 90 in Dover, N.H. This gift will be added to the library's endowment, which is managed by the Cohasset Library Trust Inc.

Mrs. Bowker lived in Cohasset for more than 20 years, starting in 1960, raising her children, Karen and Hans, who graduated from Cohasset High School in 1972 and 1970, respectively. During that time, her daughter said her mother "spent many enjoyable hours in the library as both a patron and a volunteer." Her bequest reflects her affection for the library.

Mrs. Bowker was born in The Netherlands and immigrated to the United States when she was 2 years old. She grew up on a dairy farm in Goshen, N.Y., and, after high school, attended the University of Michigan. In 1960, she and her children moved to Cohasset, where Mrs. Bowker was a leader in both Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts, as well as a library volunteer. Later, she had a successful career with Liberty Mutual where she became a Senior Underwriter. After retirement, she moved back to The Netherlands to care for aging relatives. While there she shared much of her time with a volunteer organization, "The Kook," which took in used clothing and household goods for resale. The proceeds provided a fund that was given to support projects worldwide. The last three years of her life were spent near her daughter in Dover. Her son lives in Erie, Colo.

Deborah Shadd, president of the Library Trust, said, "It is always heartwarming when the library receives gifts from former Cohasset residents who, even many years after leaving town, still treasure their memories of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library."

The sanctuary will come alive with more than 60 quilts draped over the pews. Each has a story to tell and maybe even a few secrets to share. Tickets include a luncheon, served by the all-male wait staff, which will feature a choice of entrees, and topped off by a variety of desserts.

Tickets are available for $15, by calling Second Congregational Church at 781-383-0345 or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with a check. Reservations for groups of four or more will be accepted for specific luncheon seatings by contacting the church. All proceeds will benefit The Spark Center in Mattapan, serving some of Boston's most high risk children: Those living with complicated medical conditions as well as those with family or social concerns. The entire event is handicap accessible.

The importance of being colorful

By Michael Dwyer

Eating with your eyes has never been so striking or so essential.

Imagine the moment when a beautifully prepared meal is set in front of you on the table. Your body reacts. Your senses are sharpened. Just the sight of this fabulous meal has changed you in a number of positive ways.

The finest chefs know that not only do the flavors of a perfect dish need to be remarkable, but the presentation is critical. Food, after all, is a multi-sensory experience. We immediately understand the one-two combination of taste and smell, the major senses that make food come alive. Less obvious perhaps, but equally as important, is the sense of sight. Search your mental catalog of memorable meals and you not only remember the tastes, but you recall the sights – a golden-roasted Thanksgiving turkey, a perfectly stacked tower of pancakes with fresh fruit and pure maple syrup, a vibrant and lively fresh salad.

Your eyes are not just an ancillary function to your food experiences. Biologically speaking, the sight of food fires neurons in the hypothalamus, the area of the brain that controls hunger. From the brain's perspective, the eyes must be convinced the food is acceptable before a food is even tried. Color also has an effect on the perceived flavors of food. These factors are important if you're dieting; the ability to stick to a diet is often related to the visual interest of the food you're eating. When food is visually appealing, you're more likely to enjoy it and, when dieting, visually stimulating meals will help you stick to your diet regimen.

When it comes to fresh produce, color is not just important to our eyes, but also to our overall well-being. Your fruit and vegetable choices should cover the color spectrum as categorized by the USDA, with selections made from the purple/blue, green, white, yellow-orange and red groups.

While nearly all fresh produce items are intrinsically healthy and widely believed to lower the risk of certain cancers, each color grouping also has its own unique set of benefits:

A good rule of thumb is that the more deeply colored vegetables and fruits contain the most vitamins, minerals, and antioxidants.

LIFESTYLE

Staying motivated for success

By Ellen Mitchell

It is the time of year when we all make New Year's resolutions. A lot of these resolutions include living a healthier lifestyle. Motivation is what gets you started. What motivates you? Is it the upcoming beach vacation, is it preparing for a road race you've wanted to run for years? Habit is what keeps you going. What habits have you created to keep yourself fit? Is it the yoga class you attend every Saturday, do you take the stairs instead of the elevator?

If so, you are already on your way to making those resolutions come true.

Here are a few simple tips on how to stay motivated and fit this year:

•Find a friend to join you on your walk or take an exercise/dance class together.

•Surround yourself with positive people.

•Get outside! We've been blessed with such great weather this winter. Go enjoy the outdoors.

•Drink plenty of water. When you are dehydrated it makes you feel sluggish.

•Change it up! Change up your exercise routine. By always doing the same class or the same workout your body adapts and you stop seeing results, which leads to loss of motivation.

•Keep moving! A body in motion stays in motion.

•Don't forget to stretch. Proper warm-up and cool-down will reduce muscle soreness and help to prevent injuries.

So figure out what it is that motivates you to work out, set realistic goals and keep it FUN! Remember to give your body proper rest and recovery and enjoy the results.

FAMILY

Shots for the whole family

By Spry Magazine

Vaccines aren't just for tots – and recommendations for who needs which shots, and when, change quickly. We asked the experts about the latest vaccine news.

For the grown-ups

•An annual flu shot, which now includes protection against H1N1, is recommended for everyone 6 months and older. Also, a high-dose version of the flu vaccine is available for people 65 and older. The reason: "The older you get, the less robust a response you have to the flu vaccine," Dr. William Schaffner, president of the National Foundation for Infectious Diseases, explains.

•A resurgence of whooping cough among children has sparked the need for adults who are going to be in close contact with an infant who hasn't completed at least three of her five Diphtheria-Tetanus-Pertussis (DTaP) vaccines to get a booster to protect against the disease, also known as pertussis.

•While it's recommended for adolescents, the human papilloma virus (HPV) vaccine is licensed for use in females and males ages 9 to 26. If you are older than that and not in a longterm monogamous relationship, ask your physician if you should get it "off label." "The older you get, the more likely it is that you have already been infected by the virus," says Schaffner, who is also a professor of medicine at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville. "And the chance that the vaccine will benefit you diminishes."

•Everyone 65 and older needs a dose of the pneumococcal vaccine (PPSV) to protect against bacterial infections such as pneumococcal pneumonia, meningitis, sinusitis and bacteremia, a blood infection. But if you got the shot more than five years before your 65th birthday, you'll need a second when you celebrate that milestone.

•This spring, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the shingles vaccine for people ages 50 to 59 – shaving 10 years off the previous age range for which it was approved.

For kids and teens

•It's now OK for a child age 7 to 10 who hasn't received all three of his primary DTaP doses to get a tetanus-diphtheria-pertussis (Tdap) booster to make sure he's fully protected against these three diseases. These kids can skip the typical booster at age 11 or 12 and simply get a tetanus-diptheria (Td) shot every 10 years, as recommended for the general population.

•Every young woman up to age 26 needs this three-shot vaccine if she didn't get it when she was an adolescent, say current recommendations. But a study published in the New England Journal of Medicine reported that one HPV vaccine on the market may protect against genital warts in young men ages 16 to 26.

•Experts are now recommending a meningitis booster for teens ages 16 and 18, even if they were immunized at age 11 or 12. If your child only gets one shot at age 11 or 12, she won't be protected when she heads off to college or enlists in the military.

FINANCIAL

Do you have one?

Tips on drawing up a will

It is difficult to think about death and dying and about wills and estate planning when you are young and starting a family or when you feel in perfectly good health. That might explain why nearly 60 percent of Americans do not have a will, according to a recent national survey conducted by FindLaw.com, the nation's leading online resource for legal information.

The process of drawing up a will and an estate plan is not as it is often portrayed in the movies or on TV. It can involve a number of complex decisions, ranging from how to distribute a lifetime of assets to giving specific directions to your legal guardians about end-of-life decisions, such as whether extraordinary medical care should be implemented to keep you alive, or whether you'd like to donate your organs for medical research.

Attorney and counselor at law Danielle G. Van Ess, of DGVE law LLC in Hingham, emphasizes that planning with "emotional clarity" helps safeguard your children, avoid costly and potentially public probate issues, and prevent conflict among family members.

"This is an emotional issue," Van Ess agrees. "Expressing our preferences and nominating the people who will make decisions takes the burden off the people we love."

Consider these tips from FindLaw.com on how to write a will and create an estate plan.

Get professional help. It is best to get the assistance of an attorney who specializes in wills and estate planning. Writing a relatively straightforward will, with the assistance of an attorney, will cost between $750 and $1,500. Obviously, the more assets you own, the more complex the process will be. After drawing up your will, you should update it every few years or whenever there is a significant change in your life.

Make decisions on legal guardians. Most people consider drawing up a will when they have children. One of the most profound decisions you will ever make is who will care for your children in the event of your sudden death, and this decision is expressed in a will. Along with this decision comes the decision of passing on assets to your legal guardians to provide financial support to care for your children.

"You can decide at what ages, stages, or under what circumstances you want your children to receive their inheritance and in what way," Van Ess says. "Exclude anyone you would not ever want to raise your children but who might petition the court and the court might otherwise permit to do so."

Over time, you may decide to choose different legal guardians to care for your children, based on any number of reasons – a change in financial circumstances or a change in your personal relationship with the designated legal guardians.

Drawing up a will requires a number of complex decisions but having one can help protect your children and the assets you've worked a lifetime to accumulate.

Determine whom to include in your will. In your will, you will name someone you trust – the executor – to carry out the directions in your will. It is imperative that you leave very clear and precise instructions for your executor to follow. You also will name the beneficiaries who will receive your specific bequests, which may include real estate, personal property and capital – stocks, bonds and money, and how the bequests will be distributed. People will often designate alternate beneficiaries in the event that their elected beneficiaries do not survive.

Determine what to include in your will. Some people give their personal assets directly to another person, while others will have their assets sold – with the value divided among the beneficiaries. A beneficiary also can include an organization, such as your church, a school or a nonprofit. Funeral arrangements are not included in a will.

Store Internet passwords and PIN numbers. To make it easier for the person you designate to fulfill your will, FindLaw.com recommends writing down and storing passwords and PINs, or personal identification numbers, of important accounts in a safe deposit box, or with the law firm with which you file your will. This is important because some online services will not grant anyone access to a deceased person's account, due to privacy laws.

Create health care directives. As you draw up a will, you should also write up an advanced health care directive, which protects your right to refuse any medical treatment that you do not want, or to request treatment that you do want, in the event that you lose the ability to make decisions for yourself.

"It's far more likely that you'll be temporarily incapacitated at some point in your lifetime than it is that you will die prematurely," Van Ess says.

Designate health care power of attorney. The person you designate to execute your will may be different from the person you designate to make health care decisions for you in the event that you cannot. If this is the case, make sure that you also draw up a health care power of attorney.

File beneficiary forms. File beneficiary forms with banks and brokerages to ensure that your assets are payable upon death.

Plan for transfer of ownership. If you own a business, it is important to create a plan for the transfer of ownership of the business in the event of your unexpected death. There are two key decisions to consider: Do you want your ownership position in the business to remain in your family or do you want the business sold to another party – those who may own a share of the business? Second, who do you want to operate the business if you are not there – a member of your family or a professional manager who is not related to your family?

Do not wait; discuss your estate plans with your heirs. It is an awkward conversation to have, but it is essential to making sure your heirs and beneficiaries understand your intentions for the dispersal of your estate upon your death. This is also a good time to talk about your wishes for your funeral, cremation or burial, as well as your feelings about organ donation.

Van Ess has produced an informative e-course, "15 Freedoms You Give Up Without Adequate Estate Planning," which stresses the importance of estate planning, in addition to drawing up a will. You can sign up to receive these tips at www.dgvelaw.com under the e-Courses tab.

"Focus away from the money," Van Ess advises. "Money is not the initial motivating factor in this kind of planning."

Rather, provide "practical instructions and useful information" for organizing your affairs. While this is an emotionally charged issue, Van Ess feels there is no need to dwell on it, once you have made the important decisions and recorded them with the appropriate people.

"Plan for it and put it away," she says.

Adventures in snowshoeing

Snowshoeing is a wintertime activity that can be enjoyable and healthy for all ages.

Enthusiasts say that snowshoeing is truly an activity that anyone can enjoy – from children to seniors. As long as a person is able to walk, he or she can also try snowshoeing.

According to research provided by Snowsports Industries America, 40.8 percent of snowshoers are women, 9.4 percent of snowshoers are children (ages 7 to 11), and 44.2 percent of snowshoers are between the ages of 25 to 44.There are a number of reasons to try snowshoeing:

- It is a relatively inexpensive sport to try because there is limited equipment and most of it can be rented.
- Snowshoeing provides a unique perspective on the outdoors.
- The activity is a great form of cardiovascular exercise, as the shoe and the snow provide an added measure of resistance while walking. The sport helps burn more than 600 calories per hour and can help you burn 45 percent more calories than walking or running at the same speed.
- Snowshoeing is easily a social group activity.
- It poses little risk for injury. One of the main advantages to snowshoeing is that oftentimes the first time you head out you've easily grasped the concept. Unlike other sports that take practice to master, snowshoeing only requires a few steps before it is mastered.

Snowshoeing has been around for thousands of years. Archaeologists have not been able to determine when the snowshoe was first used, but it is known that snowshoes were used more than 12,000 years ago. It is believed the first snowshoe was made from solid wood and animal skins. Natives of North America relied on a form of snowshoe to traverse the landscape during hunting and other chores.

Although the first snowshoe designs were made from what people could find and were primitive in nature, they set the course for more intricate designs and high-tech materials.

When selecting snowshoes, beginners can choose among recreational snowshoes. Usually, these snowshoes work best on simple terrain that doesn't require a lot of steep climbing or descents. For avid snowshoers or those who compete, aerobic snowshoes or ones designed for hiking are more durable and may be the smart buy.

Many experts advise against purchasing used snowshoes, because you won't be sure what you're getting. Snowshoes can be rented, but they are relatively inexpensive to buy new, ranging from $100 to $300. Snowshoes are sized according to your weight. The most common sizes are 25, 30 and 36 inches. Working with an educated retailer will ensure you get the right size shoe.

Snowshoeing can be done anywhere there is snow. It doesn't require marked trails. Just be sure to go with a partner the first time around to ensure safety should you get stuck out in the wilderness.

HOME

Tile, a healthier option

If you've ever had new carpeting installed in your house and found yourself suffering from a nagging cough for days afterward, you've experienced the effect some home improvement materials can have on your health.

Volatile organic compounds, or VOCs, can be a significant health concern, according to the Environmental Protection Agency. Concentrations of VOCs can be up to 10 times higher indoors than out, and building materials are among the sources of these noxious chemicals, according to the EPA.

While VOCs and other home toxins can cause respiratory irritation in healthy people, they can be particularly troublesome to anyone who suffers from asthma or allergies. Many homeowners, striving to minimize the impact of their home improvement or new building projects on the environment and their health, are opting to use less toxic building materials. One time-tested product at the heart of the healthy building trend is ceramic tile. In fact, the Healthy Building Network recommends ceramic tile as an alternative to widely used vinyl, which is one of the chief generators of VOCs in home environments.

"Healthy design finds a natural partner in ceramic tile," ceramic tile consultant Patti Fasan says. "It's a hygienic, multi-use product that is eco-friendly, fire-resistant, slip-resistant and one of the strongest finish materials available."

The experts point to the following healthful benefits of ceramic tile.

Large-format tile covers more surface area and requires less mortar or grout, meaning there are fewer places for dirt and microbes to hide. PHOTO COURTESY OF ARACONTENT

- Whether you use it on the bathroom floor or the wall of a master bedroom, ceramic tile is cleaner than other traditional surfaces. Because it is an inert material, ceramic tile will not harbor bacteria or other microorganisms like mold or mildew. You can clean it with hot water – no chemicals or detergents are needed.
- Ceramic tile does not release any VOCs, the most prevalent type of indoor irritant.
- Carpet can harbor dust, pet dander and other allergens. Ceramic tile does not, making it a more healthful alternative for people who suffer from allergies.
- New, larger-format tiles that are 33 inches by 97 inches cover more surface area and require less mortar or grout, meaning there are fewer places for dirt and microbes to hide. You can also find grout with antimicrobial properties, as well.
- Ceramic tile is an environmentally responsible building material. Clay, water and fire are the basic natural resources needed to create ceramic tile. In addition, tile's durability ensures a longer life cycle, meaning less construction debris in landfills.
- It is now possible to achieve virtually any look with ceramic tile – even the appearance of natural wood – in effects ranging from rustic chic to sleek contemporary. This versatility means you can use ceramic tile throughout the home, not just on the bathroom floor or kitchen backsplash.

With demand continuing to grow for healthier building material alternatives, homeowners are rediscovering ceramic tile and incorporating it into their home improvement and building projects in new ways.

Can you hear me now?

Hearing health no laughing matter

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

Can you hear me now? It's a line that has been heard in funny commercials and in conversations typically referring to bad cell phone connections but hearing health is no laughing matter. It's important to get your hearing tested regularly to ensure there is no loss.

"Any time anyone notices hearing difficulty, especially with background noise, that's a good time to get a baseline audiogram," Dr. Deborah Dempesy, of All Ears Hearing in Plymouth, said. "If you don't have any complaints, we typically recommend a hearing test at the age of 50. Many people are exposed to loud noises that could cause hearing loss and should use ear protection. All construction stores have to sell ear protection if they are selling power tools."

Ear protection is especially important amongst the younger generation because they are exposed to loud music.

"It's become a big health concern," Dempesy said. "People today are wearing ear buds when walking and exercising and they tend to crank the music too loud. We have a device that can maximize the output by plugging it into a device like an iPod. It only goes up to 85 or 90 decibels so it is safe for eight hours of listening maximum, which is the OSHA standard. We are seeing a lot of Baby Boomers coming in due to being exposed to a lot of concerts as well as electronic equipment."

When testing, you should also have your ears looked at first to ensure there is no blockage.

"There are two types of testing – a bone and an air conduction," Eugene Antonell, of Hear Better Now of Plymouth and North Dartmouth, said. "The bone tests the nerve endings while the air determines if there is a need for medical attention. The American Medical Association recommends getting a hearing test if you are 65 or older but hearing loss can occur very early on based on listening devices. I think it is important to get your hearing checked at age 50 because it is easier to correct hearing when it is mild loss instead of a significant loss. It is always important to be aware of the level of music being played. If you are dealing with someone who is hearing impaired, it important to speak slowly because they have to interpret then process so it takes longer for them to react."

The best thing to do for hearing health is to avoid noise exposure that is defined by decibels over a long period of time.

"We are noticing a trend of musicians protecting their hearing by using ear level monitors," Mike Schmit, of AccuQuest Hearing Center of Plymouth, Sandwich and Martha's Vineyard, said. "The military and manufacturing facilities also make sure their employees wear hearing protection. By law, you have to have a child tested within two days of birth because that's the most important time for development. If you can't hear you will also have speech issues. If you do not have a hearing issue, you should still be tested every five years but if there is a loss, you should be tested every year to see if the hearing has changed. Unfortunately, there is no cure for hearing loss. You can only do things to aid the hearing once it is lost."

OUR VIEW

Blogs vs. letters

To us in the newspaper business, the Internet is a bit like the Wild West – it is a lawless place that is changing and developing daily.

Newspapers, including ours, are still trying to find ways to differentiate content so the print version of the news is fresh, viable and presented differently from what goes on the Web. Frankly, the online versus print news delivery system is still a work in progress.

However, here at the Cohasset Mariner letters to the editor and commentaries that we print each Friday always include the author's name and the address. We have always required that and believe our opinion pages are among the best and most comprehensive anywhere. Simply put, by putting your name on something you have written requires some accountability and instills a level of responsibility and pride in the piece. We raise this issue because we still receive the occasional "anonymous" letter signed only by "concerned parent," or "upset reader," etc.

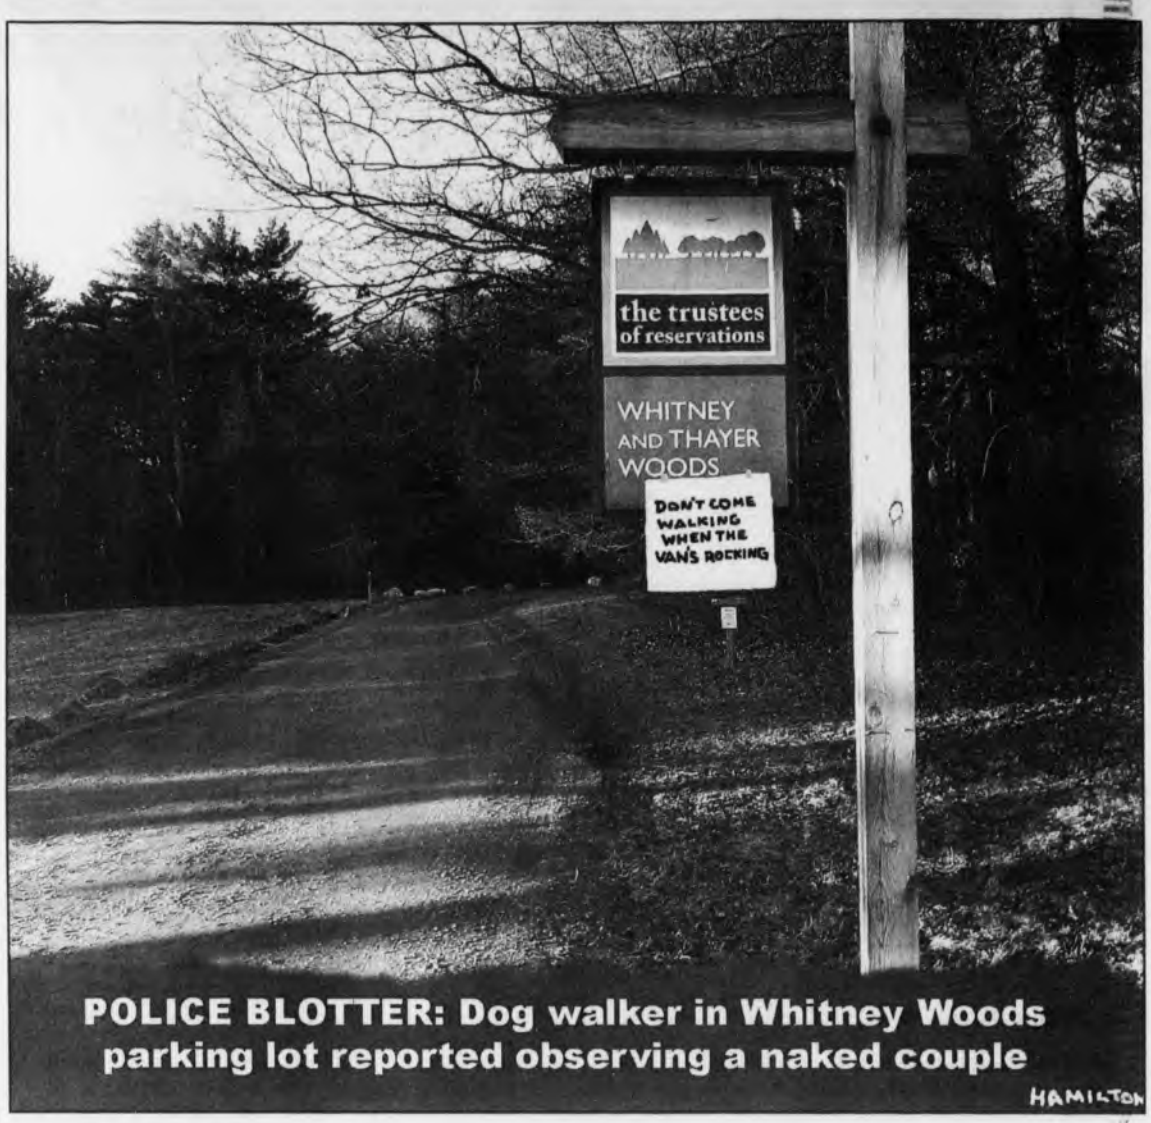
We cannot check all our commentaries and letters for accuracy but allow the rebuttal of opinions by others, who do not agree or who want to further explain or set the record straight.

Blogs on the Web are different. We require bloggers to register but most choose to use a "pen name" allowing them to comment anonymously. Blogs are more like a back 'n' forth conversation.

We have found that once we post a signed commentary or letter that appeared in the Mariner that week to our Web site, some readers join the blog to share their views on that opinion.

As journalists, we would prefer that all bloggers used their real names but the way most websites are set up, including ours, using your true identity is optional. Some feel that requiring one's true identity would discourage debate. However, Web visitors need to realize that blogs do not have the same accountability as letters to the editor do. They should be viewed in that light.

We have found our Mariner blogs online to be somewhat "self-policing." Bloggers who disagree with a comment from another blogger will let that be known as the debate unfolds. Blogging by its nature is interactive. The Mariner has the ability to take down inappropriate comments on blogs.



At the Mariner we encourage signed letters and commentaries for print and encourage bloggers to join the conversation online. From time to time, the editor of the Mariner has posted a comment online encouraging our Web visitors to joint the debate and share their views. However, we do not join the blog anonymously so you will be aware when we post a comment.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Residents praise police officers, K-9

Editor's note: A copy of the following letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

Dear Police Chief DeLuca,

My husband and I recently needed your department's assistance after a break-in at our home. It was very upsetting to us to enter our house and find the back door kicked in and my jewelry box gone.

The first police officer to arrive was Sergeant Treanor. He was so calm and competent which helped me calm down. Sergeant Tarantino and Officer Reardon with Erik soon arrived. Then Det. Lt. Lennon and Det. McLean arrived. These individuals were incredibly professional, kind and respectful.

In the past, we have had little interaction with our police department and I think have taken some services for granted; we will no longer do so. I actually thought why do we (Cohasset) need a police dog after first reading about Erik in the Mariner. Well, now we could be spokespeople for him!

Thank you and your department for all you do. You should be (and I am sure you are) very proud of these individuals (and dog).

Linda and Steve Ingram, Cohasset

A heartfelt thank you!

We would like to thank all the families from the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools and the Parishioners of St. Stephen's Church, who so generously contributed to our Cradles to Crayon's Drive this year. With your help we surpassed our expectations and exceeded last year's collection. C2C has already notified us that the goods collected and dropped off have already made their way to needy families throughout eastern Massachusetts. We would like to extend special thanks to Katie Norton for her extra support in helping transfer and load these essential donations.

There are a lot more people who are a little bit warmer this winter due to Cohasset's generosity.

Thank you!

Franchesca Arnold and the Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO)

COMMENTARY

Time for some to: Cool it!

KAREN QUIGLEY

Debate should always be respectful and constructive. What is taking place is neither: it is sophomoric, partisan and divisive.

The power struggle being waged at Town Hall has devolved into an unseemly street brawl. At basis is a fundamental disagreement about how town government should be run, what is the proper allocation of revenue, and who has the power.

Why the inability to arrive at agreement? It appears that egos, hubris, agendas, power bases and intolerance for differing opinions are the overriding factors driving these hostilities launched by town officials against the town manager.

Debate should always be respectful and constructive. What is taking place is neither: it is sophomoric, partisan and divisive.

As for process and procedure, if and until the town decides to change it, we have a strong Town Manager's Act. While other entities have a very important role and voice in the budget process, they are advisory: advisory to the town manager, the BoS and Town Meeting. A very loud voice.

Unquestioning trust of our hired professionals got us into this mess and so questions should be asked. In all honesty, I don't agree with everything the town manager has done but reasonable people disagree reasonably. There's nothing reasonable in shouting, bullying, making disparaging comments, and staging public "got cha" moments.

The town manager accepted the challenge of a town in crisis and inherited a support team deeply concerned and determined not to let history repeat itself. Equally determined that they are right and he is wrong.

The selectmen hired him. He deserves the opportunity to prove he can do the job. Except that the hostile relationship in which town officials with vested interests undermine the town manager's authority, seek to prove him incompetent and to have him removed, places him in a defensive and untenable position. Not an environment that nurtures success.

It's important to note that many of the actions so outraging his opponents are based on recommendations of the DOR, the forensic auditor and the town auditor — not some diabolical plan he's concocted.

The truth will out in the budget process. The town manager will have to prove he is right or be proven wrong. Fortunately, the proof is data not opinion. The numbers have to add up.

The good news: if the town manager fails we can fire him. The bad news: if our town officials fail, we have to wait for their terms to expire.

In the meantime, we can hope they will learn to play nice in the sandbox.

ALL ABOUT RETIREMENT

Talking about Social Security

KRISTEN ALBERINO

Number
Total	Retired workers	Disabled workers	Widow(er)s and parents	Spouses	Children
1260	910	75	135	95	45

Total monthly benefits (thousands of dollars)			Number of beneficiaries aged 65 or older
All beneficiaries	Retired workers	Widow(er)s and parents
1625	1241	180	1070

This chart shows the number of people in Cohasset who are getting Social Security benefits.

Social Security is as American as baseball and apple pie. Not everyone likes apples or baseball games, but almost every American who reaches retirement age will receive Social Security retirement benefits. In fact, 96 percent of Americans are covered by Social Security.

If you're ready to retire in the near future, this article is for you. We'd like to share with you a few important items about Social Security retirement benefits and how to apply for them.

When you work and pay Social Security taxes, you earn "credits" toward Social Security benefits. If you were born in 1929 or later, you need 40 credits (10 years of work) to qualify for retirement benefits.

To qualify for retirement benefits, 10 years is the minimum. However, the amount of your benefit is determined by how long you work and how much you earn. Higher lifetime earnings result in higher benefits. If there were some years when you did not work or had low earnings, your benefit amount may be lower than if you had worked steadily or earned more.

Also, your age when you retire makes a difference in your benefit amount.The full retirement age (the age at which full retirement benefits are payable) has been gradually rising from age 65 to age 67. You can retire as early as age 62, but if benefits start before you reach your full retirement age, your monthly payment is reduced. Find out what your full retirement age is by referring to the convenient chart in our publication, Retirement Benefits, at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10035.html. It's in the second section.

Just as you can choose an early retirement and get a reduced payment, you also can choose to keep working beyond your full retirement age to take advantage of a larger payment. Your benefit will increase automatically by a certain percentage from the time you reach your full retirement age until you start receiving your benefits or until you reach age 70.

The decision of when to retire is an individual one and depends on a number of personal factors. To help you weigh the factors, we suggest you read our online fact sheet, When To Start Receiving Retirement Benefits, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs/10147.html.

You may want to consider your options by using our Retirement Estimator to get instant, personalized estimates of future benefits. You can plug in different retirement ages and scenarios to help you make a more informed retirement decision. Try it out at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

When you decide to retire, the easiest and most convenient way to do it is right from the comfort of your home or office computer.

When you decide to retire, the easiest and most convenient way to do it is right from the comfort of your home or office computer. Go to www.socialsecurity.gov where you can apply for retirement benefits in as little as 15 minutes. In most cases, there are no forms to sign or documents to send; once you submit your electronic application, that's it!

In addition to using our award-winning website, you can call us toll-free at 1-800-772-1213 (TTY, 1-800-325-0778) or visit the Social Security office located at 1250 Hancock Street, Suite 210N in Quincy.

Either way you choose to apply, be sure to have your bank account information handy so we can set up your payments to be deposited directly into your account.

HEALTH NOTES

Fitting exercise into your life

STEVE BOBO

All adults should set a long-term goal to accumulate at least 30 minutes or more of moderate-intensity physical activity on most, and preferably all, days of the week

For one reason or another, we do routine things in life, many of which challenge our physical capabilities. It's difficult to define the types of exercise needed to maintain a healthy body in terms of keeping fit for the routine activities one undertakes in a day's time. Many of us tend to exercise in fits and starts. If one part of our routine is to get on the scale; then it should be done at a fixed time of the day and week; particularly if mealtime is the same every day. Those with more frenetic lives should be particularly careful to adopt a regular routine for assessing weight gain or loss.

The National Institute for Health has provided suggestions for a daily exercise regimen: Your exercise can be done all at one time, or intermittently throughout the day. Activities to get you started could include walking or swimming at a slow pace. You can start out by walking 30 minutes for three days a week and build to 45 minutes of more intense walking at least five days a week. With this plan, you can burn 100 to 200 calories more per day.

All adults should set a long-term goal to accumulate at least 30 minutes or more of moderate-intensity physical activity on most, and preferably all, days of the week. This regimen can be adapted to other forms of physical activity, but walking is particularly attractive because of its safety and accessibility. Also, try to increase "everyday" activity such as by taking the stairs instead of the elevator. Reducing sedentary time is a good strategy to increase activity by undertaking frequent, less strenuous activities. With time, you may be able to engage in more strenuous activities. Competitive sports, such as tennis and volleyball, can provide an enjoyable form of exercise for many, but care must be taken to avoid injury.

A number of activities may be included in your health regimen. By far the most useful for all ages is to walk. Athletes regularly engage in cardio-activities as described below.

Activities:

- Playing volleyball for 45-60 minutes.
- Playing touch football for 45 minutes.
- Walking 1.75 miles in 35 minutes (20 min/mile).
- Basketball (shooting baskets) for 30 minutes.
- Bicycling 5 miles in 30 minutes.
- Dancing fast (social) for 30 minutes.
- Water aerobics for 30 minutes.
- Swimming laps for 20 minutes.
- Basketball (playing game) for 15-20 minutes.
- Bicycling 4 miles in 15 minutes.
- Jumping rope for 15 minutes.

Other activities: Of course as our work and many other activities call on our time, assigning a regular exercise regimen becomes increasingly difficult. For the rest of us, it's well to select an activity that we believe will fit our working regimen and living lifestyle.

FOR THE RECORD

Share your Super Bowl stories

GREGORY MATHIS

With fans still giddy over the Bruins' Stanley Cup run, the Patriots are once again back in the mix.

Here we go again.

It seems like an eternity since the New England Patriots have been in the Super Bowl and even longer since they won one. In reality, it has only been four years since the New York Football Giants ended an otherwise perfect 2007 season, and you have to go all the way back to 2005 for the last Super Bowl victory.

Boston sports fans have had plenty to celebrate during the Patriots' "drought," including a couple of World Series titles, an NBA championship and a much-coveted Stanley Cup. Some would say Boston fans are spoiled. Actually, most people outside the Boston sports fan circle would say we're not only spoiled, but also arrogant. So be it. No other city or region has even come close to the string of success the Patriots, Red Sox, Celtics and Bruins have put together over the last 10 years.

The Patriots, of course, kicked off this historic run of sports championships back in February of 2002 with the first of three Super Bowls in four years.

With fans still giddy over the Bruins' Stanley Cup run, the Patriots are once again back in the mix.

There will be a lot of football talk leading up to the Feb. 5 rematch with the New York Giants in Indianapolis. And as much as this is a regional and national story, it's also a local story. It's local because fans like you will be preparing to make the trek to Lucas Oil Stadium, planning Super Bowl parties or heading out to local establishments to watch the game with fellow fans. Or buying Patriots gear to show your allegiance.

Now that we have some time between now and then, we'd like to know what your plans are for the Super Bowl. Are you a longtime season ticket holder who's planning to attend the game? Is this your first Super Bowl, or have you attended the four other recent Super Bowls? Even more impressively, have you attended the previous six?

We also have a reader callout on many of our websites asking for photographs that show your Patriots Pride. Many folks have already sent us photos of their kids sporting Patriots jerseys, as well as a cute little pug donning a Patriot pooch shirt. Go to your Wicked Local website to upload your photos and share your Patriots Pride.

The upcoming Super Bowl should also have a positive impact on the local economy. Eating and drinking establishments can certainly expect a boost in business on game day, and supermarkets will see a great deal of activity in the days leading up to the Super Bowl as people prepare to host parties at their home. There's a nice added economic benefit to having the local team in the big game for a lot of local businesses. Tell us how your business is benefiting.

In short, we know the Patriots being in the Super Bowl is a big deal for many. Share your Super Bowl story and we may share your story with our readers.

Go Pats!

Annual Real Estate Activity Report

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Cohasset for 2011.

Cohasset real estate activity showed some definite signs of improvement over the past year. Growth was seen with the average sale price of both commercial and residential property in Cohasset. Cohasset's average sale price in 2011 was $1 million. This 27 percent improvement from 2010's average price was most likely influenced by transfers of commercial rather than residential properties. Similarly, the total volume of commercial and residential sales this past year reached $119 million, an 8 percent climb from 2010. The number of actual land transfers, however, in Cohasset for both consideration and nominal consideration decreased by 7 percent from last year with 201 deeds recorded. Despite historically low interest rates in 2011 the amount of new mortgages recorded decreased by 16 percent. In addition to the actual number of mortgages recorded, Cohasset mortgage indebtedness dropped by 33 percent from 2010's figures. Cohasset residents took advantage of the March 2011 changes to the Massachusetts Homestead Law by recording 176 Declarations, an impressive 45 percent jump from the previous year.

Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. the presentation, smiling and waving at folks in the audience who appeared in the photos.

Afterward, Moriarty presented Marks with a bouquet of flowers, thanking him "on behalf of the arts."

Marks, dressed in a tuxedo with a red bowtie and cummerbund, went right back to directing his students in song.

The Cabaret performers were clad in various states of formal dress, with girls in sequined dresses and boys in dress shirts and ties. The musical ensembles performed against the backdrop of sparkling white lights decorating the windows that overlook the harbor.

Each musical number was met with vigorous applause from the audience, consisting of parents, Cohasset High School alumni and former students of Marks.

Marks said that he saw many familiar faces in the crowd.

"I'm moved," he told the Mariner in between performances. "It's very touching."

Despite the fact that this event was mentioned in the "Around Town" section of last week's Mariner, Marks also said that he was, in fact, "surprised."

"I wasn't expecting this," he said.

As students performed group, duet and solo numbers, many sang their music teacher's praises before and after their numbers.

Soloist Emily Baumgarten said, "Mr. Marks has been a huge part of our music lives. He's touched so many lives and is a teacher that we'll never forget. We appreciate everything he's done for Cohasset."

Marks told the audience that many folks have a hard time believing that he's been teaching for 35 years. When he told one guest at a former student's engagement party a few years ago how long he'd been teaching for at the time, the guest remarked, "You must be the Dick Clark of music teachers!"

The audience laughed at the anecdote and Marks joked, "I'm starting to feel old."

The music teacher concluded by thanking everyone for the tribute, and for the years he spent teaching in Cohasset (Marks resides in Scituate).

"I've been welcomed and embraced by this community for all these years," said Marks. "Thank you from the bottom of my heart for supporting the music program." He added that he is doing everything he can to help find a suitable replacement who will "fill this podium next year; it's important to me after 35 years of pouring my love into this school."

LIBRARY

A level-funded budget could translate into the Paul Pratt Memorial Library losing its certification, officials warn.

without state certification, libraries are unable to share or borrow materials from certified libraries.

According to state library commissioners, more libraries have sought waivers over the past two fiscal years than in the past two decades. In fiscal 2010, the number of libraries applying for waivers jumped from 29 to 103, state commissioners reported; last fiscal year, 127 libraries applied with all but four of them winning approval.

Cohasset's library was not one of those, but if the budget is level-funded in fiscal 2013, it will be.

This is an issue that Cohasset's Library Trustees do not take lightly.

"The waiver is intended as a safety net for a poor town" that can't afford to meet the minimum state standards, said trustee Agnes McCann. "It shouldn't be used as a way to shave money off of the town budget."

The trustees met Monday morning in the library's Historical Room to discuss what level-funding the budget would mean; they also prepared a budget presentation for the Board of Selectmen.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin attended to give his advice and a show of support for the library, of which he says he is a frequent user.

"The town in its budget has to reflect its priorities," Coughlin said during the meeting. "Education is the number one priority, and the library is important for education. Education is a lifelong experience, not only for students but for many members of the community who are educating themselves in this fine institution."

Cohasset's library provides services to over 5,000 cardholders, according the library's fiscal year 2011 annual report.

Rafferty explained that currently, the library absorbs only 1.5 percent of the town's total operating budget. Coughlin suggested that number be raised to 2 percent, a message he echoed to the selectmen Tuesday night.

Coughlin called this "a slight increase in the big picture of things," considering "the role the library plays in the town's overall priorities."

The town's current allocation of 1.5 percent is "too little," Coughlin said during the trustees meeting. "To go to 2 percent would be great, but even 2 percent is a bargain."

The town manager has been vocal about the fact that applying for a waiver for Cohasset's library is unnecessary and that the town should simply bump up the library's budget.

Asked Coughlin, "Why would you do this to the citizens when you don't have to?"

The library trustees feel that the Budget Planning Group misinterpreted the library's budget numbers because they did not have all of the information, they explained during Tuesday's meeting. One reason the BPG might have suggested level funding? To date, the library has spent over 94 percent of its total operating budget for fiscal 2012, halfway through the year.

This is because most of the library's expenses are paid upfront at the beginning of each fiscal year, Rafferty explained, including $48,000 for books and nearly $27,000 to renew its membership in the Old Colony Library Network (OCLN). Of the $88,163.00 budget, $83,190.40 has already been spent, leaving just under $5,000 for the rest of the fiscal year.

Plans to expand

Another way a bump in the budget will aid the library: the trustees are hoping to expand.

In order to meet the increased demand for services that have "morphed into something new" over the past few years, the library needs to grow, trustees explained Monday, adding that the library is 15 years into its 20-year plan.

An architect has been hired to explore expansion possibilities. The trustees say that there are safety concerns and challenges that must be revisited. In the current space, programs have to be limited because there isn't enough room to seat everyone who attends. The trustees are also hoping that expanding will help improve their archiving system.

Rafferty said that the library would like to expand into "the rear portion of the facility," meaning the Our World Children's Museum.

"The town and museum are working to identify a solution that serves the best interest of the community," Rafferty told the Mariner in an email.

Coughlin said he would talk to selectmen chair Ted Carr about placing the expansion issue on an upcoming selectmen meeting agenda.

Some information was used from the GateHouse News Service.

Level funded vs. level services budget

Level funded budget: A budget based on the exact same amount of money spent in the current year, regardless of any decrease in services.

Level services: A budget based on the exact same level of services delivered in the current year, regardless of any cost increases.

What this means for Cohasset: Level funding the budget would not allow for any cost of living increases for employees, despite the fact that costs are going up. While it seems to mean that the budget would remain the same, it would actually require departments to slash costs, sometimes dramatically. A level services budget would include these increases and allow departments to offer the same level of services without having to further cut costs and negatively impact their operations.

GIMME SHELTER

Robby has regal stature

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Robby, who is 1-1/2 years young. HSAR is listing him as a domestic, shorthaired tiger. He has an exotic look to him and a definite regal stature.

Robby was surrendered to the shelter due to unfortunate circumstances. Robby is such a good-natured chap that he'd get along in most any animal friendly home. He came to us with his littermate Daisy, so if you're looking for a pair that get along well together, they're waiting for you. They can be adopted separately, if you only have room for one.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. This is also a good time to purchase the 2012 Kittendales Calendar, which is also available online.

He is a gentle cat who is content to curl up in a sunny spot or in your lap. . COURTESY PHOTO

If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

Cohasset road race is around the corner

Calling all runners and non-runners!! Spend some time on April Fool's Day showing everyone just how smart you are by participating in the 36th annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea or Fran Coffey Memorial Walk. Both events are Sunday, April 1.

The Walk begins at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach and the 10K begins at 1 p.m. on the Town Common. These events are presented by the Rotary Club of Cohasset and 100 percent of net proceeds go to charity.

The race has a limited field size of 1770 — the year the town was incorporated — and expects to sell out this year as it has done in the past.

This event is truly a Cohasset "community" event and even after three decades the traditions continue of a scenic course, hot dogs for post race sustenance, and the much sought after, long-sleeved T-shirts which will include a commemorative 36th Annual "Fool's Day" design.

Don't miss out. If you've done this race before, the race is excited to welcome you back, and if you've never run a 10K, why not run your first in your own "backyard?"

Runners pass over the Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue during last year's Cohasset Road Race By the Sea.

GYMNASTICS

Uneven performances

Norwell/Cohasset trying to get back on feet

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

It wasn't an easy week for the gymnastics team as a whole, but a number of individual turned in some impressive efforts.

In a recent 120.6-119.5 loss to Hingham, senior captain Amber Silvia came in first in the all-around with a score of 31.4. Freshman Emma Basso tied for first in the vault with Meghan George from Hingham. They both scored an 8.3. Silvia took third in the vault with an 8.1. Junior Emily Kuhn also performed well on the vault, earning a score of a 7.8.

On the bars, Silvia took second with a 7.5, behind Kate Kelly and Casey Hynes who tied for first with a 7.9. Basso tied for second place with her score of 7.2. Silvia tied for second on the beam (7.4), and Basso finished third (7.3).

On the floor, Silvia came in first, scoring an 8.4. Christina Tedeschi finished second with a 7.9, while junior Kelsey McCunney scored a 7.8, which placed her third overall.

In a tough loss to Marshfield, one of the top teams in the region, Norwell/Cohasset scored 121.75 points to Marshfield's 123.9.

With the team battling injuries, Norwell/Cohasset still turned in some impressive performances. Silvia scored a 32.4 in the all-around, which placed her second overall, while Basso scored a 31.15 and a third-place finish. On the balance beam, Silvia finished in third place with an 8.1, and Basso came in fourth (7.7).

Silvia and Basso went 1-2, respectively (with scores of 8.3 and 8.2), on the vault. Freshman Eliza Motlin also performed well in the event, scoring a 7.9. Melinda Dignam shined as well, earning a 7.8.

On the bars, Silvia tied for first with a 7.5, while Basso tied for third (7.0). And on the floor, Silvia earned a season-high score of 8.5, which put her in a tie for second place in the event. Basso tied for third with an 8.25. Tedeschi scored a 7.8, and Motlin scored a season-high 7.6.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Small in numbers big in heart

Cohasset swimmers leave it all in the pool

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

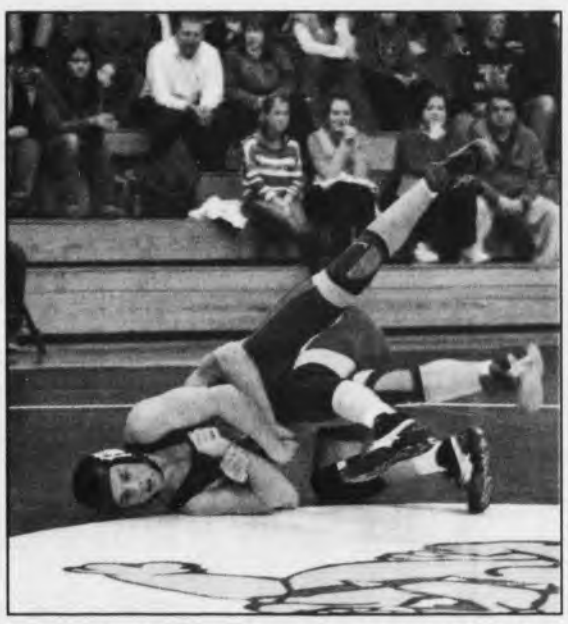
They may be small in numbers, but what the Cohasset swim team may lack for numbers, they make up with quality.

With just six boys and 10 girls on the team, the Skippers could easily be overlooked.

The talent on the team says otherwise.

"Our boys team is 2-5, which given our size I am impressed as we only have six boys," Cohasset coach Michelle Millerd said. "Two of our boys are up and coming eighth graders Luke Norton and Ben Moy who have been major contributors to our team."

Sophomore, Clarke Indek, is a standout for the Skippers. Indek has qualified for the State meet in four different events, the 200 IM, 100 free, 100 back, and 500 free.



He's had help from teammate Bobby Nahill.

"Junior captain, Bobby Nahill has been a willing utility swimmer for us this year filling in a lot of gaps in the line up and junior Ryan MacCarthy strongest in the 100 breast and sprint freestyle both score us points every meet," Millers said. "Sophomore, Brody Jackisch is key to our ability to score points

SPORTS ROUNDUP

All quiet for a moment

Teams gearing up for second half

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It has been a quiet time for Cohasset team over the past week or so.

While the wrestling swim teams have seen recent action, the boys basketball team and hockey team have been on a bit of a break.

The wrestlers, fresh off a split in a Saturday quad, beat Quincy in a barnburner on Wednesday night.

Freshman heavyweight Mike Yerardi won a 3-1 decision in the final match Wednesday, snapping a 28-all tie and lifting the Cohasset High wrestling team to a 31-28 win over visiting Boston Latin.

"He's pretty good," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said of Yerardi, now 15-5 on the season. "It was a really big spot for him."

Cohasset (13-7) also got decisions from seniors Gus Helbock (132 pounds) and Derek Froio (152), plus junior Mike Livingstone (195) and freshman Matt Froio (160).

Basketball, hockey players and coaches are ready to get back to work.

"We had a 12 day rest in preparation for the balance of the season," hockey coach Bob Walsh said. " We play Hull on Saturday night in Weymouth at 8 p.m.. "We need three points to make the post season. My guys are spending these 12 days getting healthy and practicing for the post season run."

Cohasset has played well, working to an 8-3-1 record.

The boys basketball team is also ready to go. The boys have an 8-3 record and are back to the court on Sunday (Jan. 29) at 6:15 p.m. in a makeup game from Jan. 13 against Mashpee.

These two teams have played some exciting and fun basketball games in recent memory.

Support theboys team as they make their run into qualifying for the State tournament as they renew their rivalry with Mashpee High School.

The girls basketball team has played this week, beating Carver 47-37 on Tuesday night.

Seniors Sage Stebbins and Isabel Robinson led the Skippers with 13 and 11 points, respectively. Senior captain Anna Seraikas chipped in with 10 points as Cohasset improved to 5-9.

U.S. Men's National Team Coach to Speak in Boston

U.S. Men's National Team head coach Jurgen Klinsmann will speak at the 2012 US Youth Soccer Workshop on Friday, Feb. 17 to kick off the annual convention in Boston. Klinsmann, who was named head coach for the United Statesin late July of 2011, will give his speech from 8-9 a.m. ET at the Hynes Convention Center.

"We are extremely excited to have Jurgen Klinsmann join us at the US Youth Soccer Workshop in Boston," President of US Youth Soccer John Sutter said. "US Youth Soccer reaches players in every corner of the country and shapes the future of elite American soccer through effective identification and development opportunities. Klinsmann's attendance at our Workshop highlights the tremendous relationship between US Youth Soccer and U.S. Soccer that began more than 30 years ago."

Klinsmann brings a unique perspective to evaluating the American soccer landscape. A native of Germany, the former World Cup champion has been involved in soccer almost his entire life as a player, coach, television analyst and consultant. He relocated to California with his American wife and two children after a successful professional career that spanned Germany, Italy, France and England. After 13 years in the United States, he has developed a deep understanding of the American mentality and approach to sports in this country. His education on the approach to identifying and developing talent in the U.S. was fostered by the fact that his own children have been involved in US Youth Soccer.

Klinsmann has a history of bringing innovative ideas to help reshape the organizations for which he coaches from the youth levels on up. Since becoming the U.S. Men's National Team coach, Klinsmann has emphasized the importance of creating a unique soccer style in American that infuses the country's blend of cultures, talent and perspective.

"I believe that the style of play should reflect the culture of the country, and that everyone from coaches, media and fans should have a voice in the process," said Klinsmann. "I especially look forward to discussions with all of the talented coaches around the country so we can work to improve the game at the grass roots level."

This style proved successful for Klinsmann when he took over as the manager of the German National Team in 2004. He guided Germany to a third place finish in the 2006 FIFA World Cup, earning him coach of the year honors in Germany.

The US Youth Soccer Workshop will be held in Boston Feb.16-18, 2012. The annual convention will be held at the Hynes Convention Center and is designed to further the education of coaches, administrators, referees and enthusiasts involved in the game. Online registration continues through February 9. In addition to full-registration, Day Passes are also available on-site for $25 per day that provides access to educational sessions and the vendor exhibits. For more information please visit USYouthSoccer.org/Workshop.

About the United States Youth Soccer Association (US Youth Soccer) – US Youth Soccer - "The Game for ALL Kids!®" is the largest youth sports organization in the country and largest member of the United States Soccer Federation, the governing body of soccer in the United States. US Youth Soccer registers more than 3 million players annually, ages 5 to 19, and over 900,000 administrators, coaches and volunteers in 55 member State Associations. US Youth Soccer programs provide a fun, safe and healthy environment for players at every level of the game. For more information, visit www.USYouthSoccer.org.

Steve Anzuoni scored two goals and assisted on another as the Bruins held on for a 5-4 win over the Red Wings in a Classics Div. matchup.

Both John Dougenik and Mike Martin of Pembroke had a goal and an assist and John Zimmer of Marshfield had a goal for the Bruins.

Marshfield's Ron DiCecca scored two goals, Pat Burke and Ted Duggan added a goal each for the Red Wings.

with our relays."

The girls team is 4-3, also a good showing for such a small team, with just 10 girls.

Those girls are pretty special and have experience at the next level.

"We have strong senior leaders with captain, Moira Donahue, who has been dropping seconds off her seasonal best times at our last two meets, and Aniko Haber who has also been picking up speed at just the right time," Millerd said. "Junior, Hope Kissick, the defending State Champion in the 100 Breast, has qualified for this year's State meet in the 100 Breast, and Sectionals in the 100 Fly."

In the relays, the group is solid.

"Moira, Aniko, Hope, and Sophomore Maggie Littlejohn make up our "A" relay for the 200 and 400 free relay, and are trying hard to make the Sectional cut in these two events in our last week of the regular season," Millerd said. "Christine Guinee has been a strong competitor in the 200 and 500 freestyle, as well as the relays. Freshmen Jacqueline Hart , Madison Sullivan, and Erin Driscoll have been great additions to the team and I am excited to see how much they have improved over the course of the season."

Sullivan also dives, along with Clara Baumgarten, also a freshman.

"Clara has improved her scores every meet," Millerd said. "And she helps us out in the relays swimming the butterfly leg in the 200 medley relay."

Another newcomer is looking good.

"New to the sport of swimming is freshman Mackenzie Voke, who swam her first meet ever last week," Millerd said. "I have been very impressed with her effort. Overall, I am very pleased with our team's efforts this season. We have three meets left to improve times and make cuts and I am confident they will finish strong.

Ryan McCarthy competes in the 100 yard breaststroke.

Aniko Haber competes in the 200 yard freestyle relay race.

Erin Driscoll competes in the 100 yard breaststroke.

Lunch bunch!

Police Association hosts event for seniors

Staff photos by Chris Bernstein

Serving up hot meals, Police Chief Mark DeLuca negotiates the tight quarters at the second annual senior luncheon.

Bob Ernst, 96, chats with Officer Sasha Geddes who is busy serving lemonade.

Officer Michael Lopes serves up a hot plate for a grateful Sandra Dalton. With the participation and support of the entire Cohasset Police Department, this truly was a fun day of camaraderie and good will.

Gregg Hartnett, former Cohasset police liaison with elder affairs and his father, Teddy, are credited for starting the annual senior's luncheon and continue their support in the kitchen!

Betty Maree is delighted with the food and company at the second annual senior luncheon sponsored by the Cohasset Police Association.

Hands full, Officer Greg Fall surveys the crowded hall for any empty placements.

Elder Affairs police liaison, Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor, chats with Eileen Suddath (L) and Carol Barrett (R).

You'll warm up to this lineup of upcoming events

Our coldest, bleakest month becomes history next week. We're gaining more than two minutes of daylight every day. Red Sox pitchers and catchers report to spring training in about three weeks.

Spring is on the horizon.

Another sure sign: The area's arts and cultural institutions have entered the second half of their seasons. Read on and you'll discover about 41 reasons why this time of year is a lot better than you think.

"Alex Katz Prints" at the MFA, April 28 to July 29

Coming Soon

Composers Beethoven, Schubert and Haydn provide the music for Jose Mateo's Ballet Theatre's exploration of the many faces of romance: from idyllic and pastoral to seductive and mysterious. The company performs "Classical Lovers," Feb. 10-26, at the Sanctuary Theatre in Cambridge.

Conductors Stephane Deneve and Marcelo Lehninger (Feb. 21) share a program with the Boston Symphony Orchestra that includes a piece by Ravel, a Stravinsky concerto and then Shostakovich's Symphony No. 5, which captures the maturing of the master. The program runs Feb. 16-21 at Symphony Hall.

Conductor Stephane Deneve and the BSO at Symphony Hall

Disney's newest show on ice, "Dare to Dream," presents some of Disney's most iconic characters in escapades that run from hilarious to hair-raising. Kids and their parents can catch the show, Feb. 17, at the TD Garden.

What threatens a relationship more – taking a shot at domesticity or a roadside bomb in Baghdad? That's what James and Sarah are about to find out. They're two journalists on assignment during a war, and a brush with death changes their relationship. "Time Stands Still" generated buzz on Broadway, and now the Lyric Stage Company of Boston presents it, Feb. 17 to March 17.

Rachel York seems to like the Reagle Players in Waltham; she's been there before and she's coming back. For one performance only, she'll share the stage with Brent Barrett as they sing some of the most beloved love songs of stage and screen in "Isn't It Romantic?" on Feb. 19.

Bulging eyes, night vision, sticky toe pads, squawking voices and disposable body parts – it's all the stuff that kids love, and geckos have it all. More than 60 exotic geckos just arrived at the Museum of Science in Boston for "Geckos: Tails to Toepads," an exhibit running through May 6.

In "Figuring Color: Kathy Butterly, Roy McMakin, Felix Gonzalez-Torres, Sue Williams," the artists use color and form to represent "a metaphorical body." Sound enigmatic? Of course it does: It's at the ICA/Boston, Feb. 17 to May 20.

You get to see a little Broadway star if you check out Wheelock Family Theatre's "Wizard of Oz," which runs through Feb. 26, at the theater on the Wheelock College campus. Katherine Doherty, who shared the stage with Catherine Zeta-Jones in Broadway's "A Little Night Music," plays the iconic role of Dorothy in the beloved musical.

Glen Campbell has kind of become cool in his old age, his weathered and weary sound somehow much more interesting than his "Rhinestone Cowboy" prime. You sense there could be something haunting and touching about his gig, Feb. 23, at the Wilbur Theatre in Boston, part of what he calls his "Goodbye Tour."

Remember when people were so excited by the CD "The Miseducation of Lauryn Hill" that their heads exploded? Well, here's a chance to hear her perform songs from that beloved album (and other songs), when Lauryn Hill plays Feb. 23 at the House of Blues in Boston.

March

The annual Flamenco Festival has become a big hit in Boston. This year's version, presented by World Music/CRASHarts, offers Compania Rafaela Carrasco (March 2 and 3) and the Boston debut of Compania Olga

ARTS PREVIEW | ALEXANDER STEVENS

I'll see you there

Stuff I've already marked on my calendar

Cortney Wolfson and Patrick D. Kennedy perform in "The Addams Family," which plays Feb. 7-19 at the Shubert Theatre, in Boston.

It's a remarkable gift, and we shouldn't take it for granted: The wealth of cultural institutions that quite literally make this one of the great places to live. And when you look at a roundup of upcoming events – in any season – it's always a feast of treats.

Here are some events I've already put on my calendar. And I promise you: There'll be more to follow.

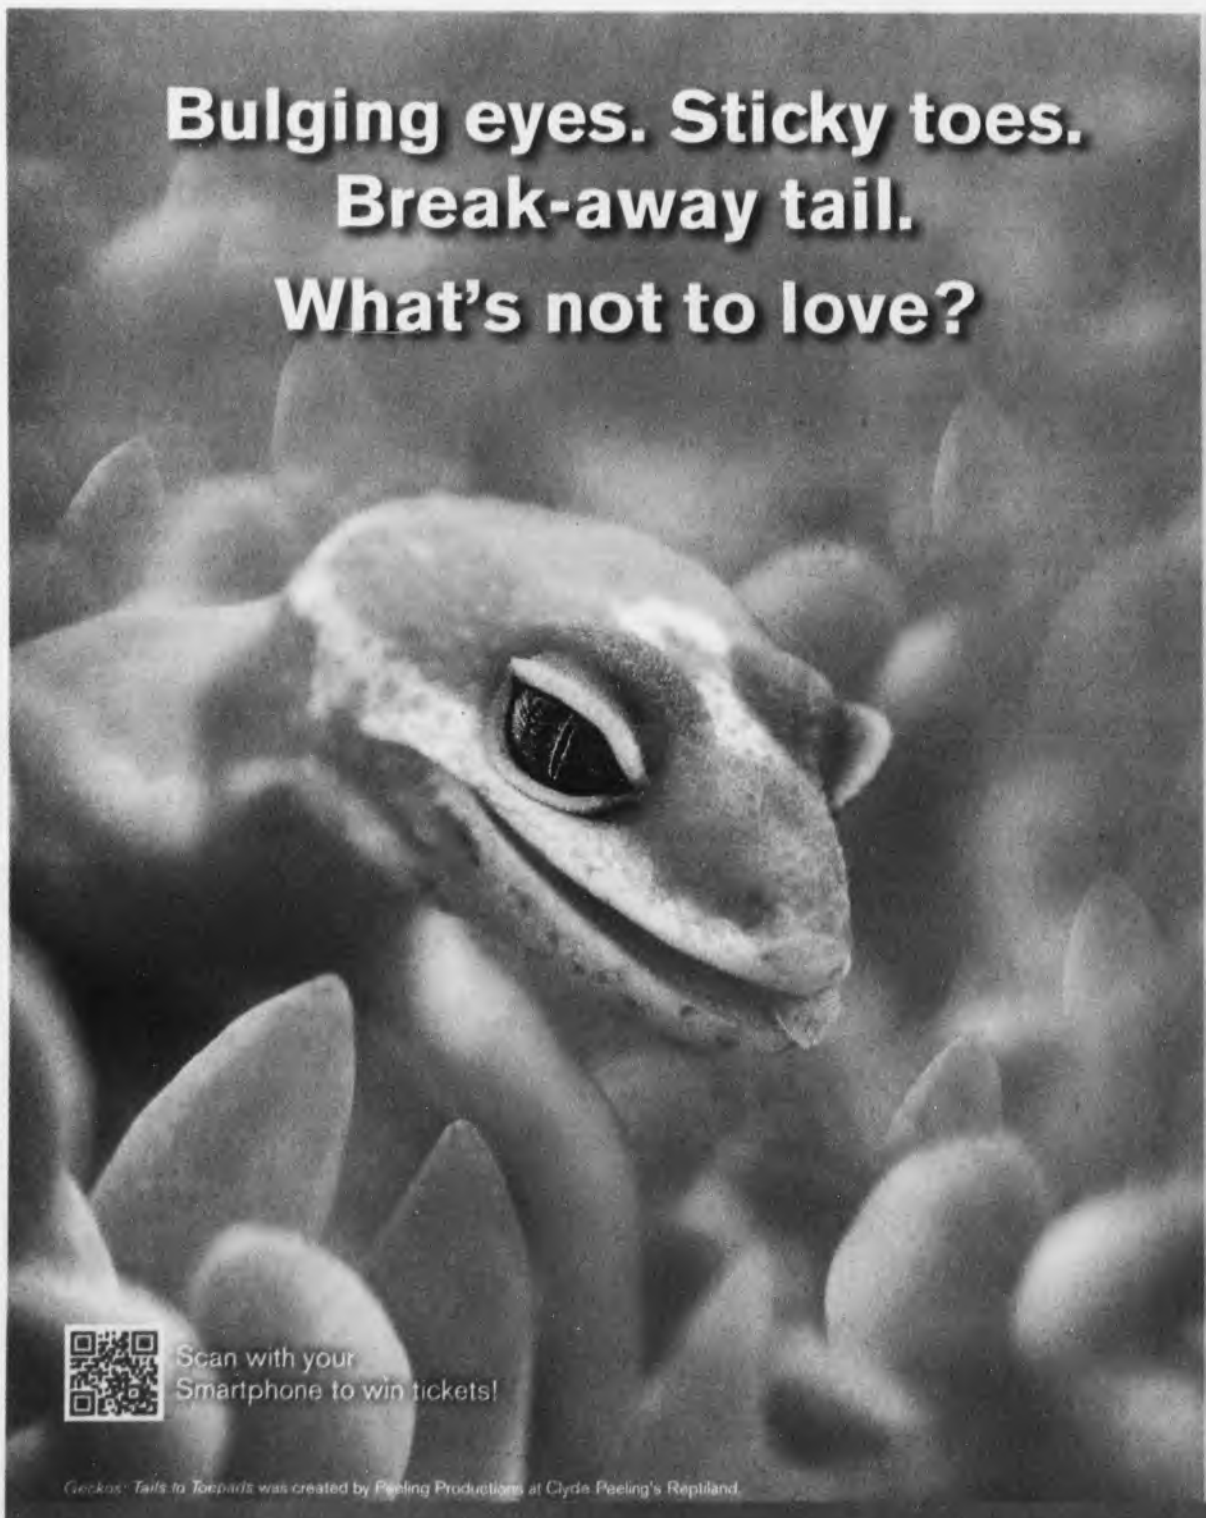
August Wilson was a remarkable playwright who created a unique, compelling, even mesmerizing sound for his plays. I haven't seen his play "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom," but I can imagine Wilson's almost jazz-like use of words will match well with the play's story of a legendary 1920s blues singer who gathers with her musicians in a Chicago recording studio just as racial tensions explode. Local audiences are fortunate that the Huntington Theatre Company's very special relationship with August Wilson has continued even after the great playwright's death. They present the play, March 9 to April 8, at the B.U. Theatre in Boston.

Boston Ballet offers up "Play With Fire" (March 1-11 at the Boston Opera House), featuring the work of three choreographers in one night: Jiri Kylian presents a sensual work with partial nudity; Boston Ballet resident choreographer Jorma Elo uses the music of J.S. Bach; and then choreographer Christopher Bruce finds his inspiration in tunes of The Rolling Stones.

In a relatively short amount of time, China has changed beyond recognition. Just ask the 13 million readers of "Wild Swans: Three Daughters of China." Now the ambitious American Repertory Theater in Cambridge brings the story to the stage. Following a courageous family, "Wild Swans" (Feb. 11 to March 11, at the Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge) takes viewers from the early days of hope in struggle in communist China, to the chaos of Mao's Cultural Revolution, to the rise of a superpower. Sounds topical and epic.

The cartoons of Chaz Addams never seemed like fodder for a stage musical. But then again, they never seemed like they'd inspire a TV show either. Both happened. And now the Broadway show, "The Addams Family," is out on a tour that lands Feb. 7-19 at the Shubert Theatre, in Boston.

Anna Prohaska and the Boston Symphony Orchestra perform "German Requiem" by Brahms, April 5-7, at Symphony Hall.



Operas aren't my forte, so I listen to the people who know about them. And they say, when it comes to comedies, Rossini is the man. And when it comes to Rossini, "The Barber of Seville" is his masterpiece. Boston Lyric Opera presents this story that features love songs, a classic shaving scene and a failed elopement, March 9-18, at the Shubert Theatre in Boston. This sounds like a great choice for people, like me, who are trying to expand their knowledge of opera.

The subject of death may not sound like a fun night out, but in the hands of Brahms, it can be. His "German Requiem" is regarded as a deeply personal work, and when performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and supported by the voices of Anna Prohaska, Hanno Muller-Brachmann and the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, it sounds like a powerful night out, April 5-7, at Symphony Hall.

You better have the right cast if you want to do "Long Day's Journey into Night." Sounds like the New Repertory Theatre has rounded up an impressive bunch, starting with Will LeBow and Karen MacDonald. The Eugene O'Neill classic runs April 1-22 at the Arsenal Center for the Arts in Watertown. A great production of "Streetcar Named Desire" in Williamstown last summer got me excited about revisiting these American classics.

The deCordova Museum's Biennial Exhibit gives talented New England artists a great showcase for their work. This huge, diverse and engaging show runs through April 22 at the deCordova Sculpture Park and Museum in Lincoln. Sounds like a great way to welcome the warm months.

— Alexander Stevens

TAILS TO TOEPADS
Geckos have amazing night vision, and can climb a sheet of glass. They are stealthy, camouflaged hunters, and neon-colored nectar eaters. Now you can meet more than 60 live, exotic geckos in this new exhibit at the Museum of Science.

ARTS PREVIEW: MOVIES | AL ALEXANDER

Feed your 'Hunger' for films

Spring lineup offers some offbeat and intriguing movies

The students in "American Pie" reconvene for their 10-year reunion in "American Reunion."

"The Hunger Games," starring Jennifer Lawrence, is probably the most anticipated film of the spring.

Fantasy, comedy and mayhem are in vogue with this spring's lineup of movies, beginning Valentine's Day, when Cupid's arrows will be no match for the weapons Tom Hardy and Chris Pine pack as CIA operatives battling over Reese Witherspoon in the action-comedy "This Means War."

The flames from that conflagration will barely have time to ebb before Nic Cage re-ignites the fire under his smoking-hot chopper in "Ghost Rider: Spirit of Vengeance" (the sequel to 2007's "Ghost Rider") on Feb. 17.

A week down the road, on Feb. 24, Paul Rudd and Jennifer Aniston play a down-and-out married couple who unexpectedly wind up in a bizarre hippie commune in the comedy "Wanderlust." If you prefer more intense bedlam, the weekend also will welcome "Gone," a serial-killer thriller in which Amanda Seyfried plays a former kidnap victim who believes the same assailant has just snatched her younger sister.

March rolls in, but not like a lion; more like a "Lorax," which is the title character of this animated Dr. Seuss adventure about a mysterious forest creature helping a young man land the girl of his dreams. Also opening on March 2, is "Jeff, Who Lives at Home," an outrageous comedy about a young man (Jason Segel) imagining a world in which he no longer needs to reside with his smothering mother.

Chaos returns March 9 with the unveiling of sci-fi adventure flick "John Carter," the story of an American soldier (Taylor Kitsch) caught up in a civil war on the planet Mars. Co-written and directed by Andrew Stanton ("Finding Nemo"), "Carter" marks the first foray into live-action flicks by animation giant Pixar.

If you prefer more cerebral violence, the same weekend offers up "The Raven," an intriguing mystery in which a series of grisly slayings in 19th century Baltimore closely resemble a series of murder mysteries written by local reporter Edgar Allan Poe (John Cusack).

The violence won't lesson the following week, but it will be a whole lot funnier when the TV show that launched Johnny Depp's career, "21 Jump Street," receives a big-screen send-up starring Jonah Hill and Channing Tatum. Across the hall at the multiplex March 16, another movie icon, Julia Roberts, tries to resurrect her sagging career with "Mirror Mirror," a fantasy in which she plays an enchantress plotting to dethrone a young queen (Lily Collins) and steal her prince (Armie Hammer).

If those flicks don't satisfy your appetite, wait until March 23 and dig into "The Hunger Games," a post-apocalyptic adventure starring Oscar-nominee Jennifer Lawrence as a teenager forced into a game of kill-or-be-killed by her nation's despotic leaders.

It could be worse, though. You could be Sean Penn, piling on the eyeliner to play a fading Goth rock star March 30 in "This Must be the Place," an extremely quirky drama in which his character takes to the streets of New York City to hunt down the Nazis who tormented his recently deceased father.

That same weekend opens a dandy of a family entertainment called "Pirates! Band of Misfits," an animated "Pirates of the Caribbean" spoof, with Hugh Grant providing the voice of a whacky captain of an even wackier pirate ship.

"Pirates! Band of Misfits" is an animated spoof of pirate movies.

April opens with a shower of movies on the 6th, beginning with a 3D version of James Cameron's "Titanic," which arrives just six days before the centennial of the doomed ship's sinking. Another anniversary of sorts also takes place on the 6th when the cast of "American Pie" reconvenes for its 10-year high school reunion in the aptly titled "American Reunion."

Fans of the Three Stooges can celebrate April 13, when the Farrelly Brothers' long-anticipated tribute to Curly, Moe and Larry finally arrives after what seemed like an endless series of setbacks.

If it's romantic schlock you crave, wait no longer than April 20, when Zac Efron gets his heart broken by Taylor Schilling in the film version of Nicholas Sparks' best-seller, "The Lucky One."

Also opening that day are Eddie Murphy's "A Thousand Words," in which the comedian plays a literary agent in hot pursuit of a religious guru not so eager to put pen to paper; and "Chimpanzee," a Disney nature film in which an orphaned ape is taken in my a compassionate orangutan. Awwww!

Closing out the spring season in grand fashion on the 27th is "The Five-Year Engagement," writer Jason Segel's follow-up to "Forgetting Sarah Marshall" in which he and Emily Blunt play a couple that keeps encountering obstacles on the way to the altar.

John Cusack plays Edgar Allan Poe in "The Raven." Sounds intriguing.

ARTS

Pericet (March 4), at the Majestic Theatre in Boston.

The SpeakEasy Stage Company snagged "Next To Normal," the Tony and Pulitzer winner that uses a pop-rock score to tell the story of a family coming to terms with its past. The show plays March 9 to April 7 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Ballet Hispanico continues to explore the many faces and forms of Latino dance, from smart and spicy to elegant and lyrical. Their program, March 9-11, at the Majestic Theatre, features the Boston premieres of "Mad'moiselle" by Annabelle Lopez Ochoa and a new work by Ronald K. Brown.

The all-female singing sensation known as Celtic Woman pour their hearts into Celtic tunes ("The Water is Wide") and beloved favorites ("Bridge Over Troubled Water"), as they make a tour stop, March 9-10, at the Wang Theatre, in Boston.

Sometimes the most popular musicals are kind of ... lousy. But "Les Miserables" deserves its success. It's big, it's rousing and it's bold, and I admit I'm a sucker for "Master of the House" and "Do You Hear the People Sing?" And now, all of sudden, here comes its 25th anniversary production, presented by Broadway in Boston, March 13 to April 1, at the Boston Opera House.

The ambitious and rewarding "ArtsEmerson: The World on Stage" continues with Ameriville (March 13-18, Paramount Theatre in Boston), a performance troupe that redefines "musical theater" with a show that marries storytelling with jazz, gospel and hip hop. They spin beautiful music around themes of race, poverty and politics.

A Civil War sci-fi musical? Those in search of something different will want to check out "Futurity." A Civil War soldier and a woman seek to create artificial intelligence with use of a steam-powered brain. Featuring music by Cesar Alveras and the Lisps, "Futurity" plays March 16 to April 15, at Oberon, in Cambridge.

In the play "The Temperamentals," two men fall in love while forming the first gay-rights organization in Pre-Stonewall United States. The Lyric Stage Company of Bosto stages it March 30 to April 28.

Perhaps the Handel & Haydn Society has a certain right to Bach's towering "St. Matthew Passion" – the brilliant oratorio was given its first complete performance in this country by H&H in 1879. Led by Harry Christophers, H&H performs it March 30 and April 1 at Symphony Hall, in Boston.

In 1950s Boston, an African-American family wants to buy a house in an all-white neighborhood, so they hire an Irish family to act as their front. But 50 years later, the Irish family wants "their" house back. Kirsten Greenidge's new play, "The Luck of the Irish," brings a personal touch to one of the enduring themes of this country: integration. The Huntington Theatre presents it March 30 to April 29 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

If you're a fan of "Saturday Night Live," then you're a fan of Second City. It seems like a rite of passage that every comic performer must go through Second City before arriving at SNL. See them before they're famous when Second City visits the Wilbur Theatre in Boston, March 30.

The Boston Early Music Festival seems to like the Tallis Scholars – this is the 23rd year BEMF has invited them to perform. The beloved vocal ensemble presents the music of Jean Mouton and William Cornysh, March 31, at St. Paul Church, in Cambridge.

The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre performs April 26-29 at the Wang Theatre.

April

"Riverdance" is 17. And the show has always found an appreciative audience during its many visits to Boston. Here comes another chance to pay homage to the power and spectacle of scads of talented and beautiful performers who can dance without moving their arms. The show runs April 13-15 at the Boston Opera House.

Bribery, fraud, corruption – no, it's not a story about Beacon Hill. Instead, it's a great way for Boston Lyric Opera to bring its season to a comic close. They present John Musto's "The Inspector," an opera marked by great melodies and a large and talented cast of American singers. It plays April 20-29 at the Shubert Theatre in Boston.

When photographer Edward Weston was invited to illustrate a deluxe edition of Walt Whitman's epic poem "Leaves of Grass," Weston and his wife decided to take a cross-country trip from California to New England and back again. His wide-ranging works from that project will be on display as the Museum of Fine Arts, as they present "Edward Weston: Leaves of Grass," April 21 to Dec. 31.

The unique thing about Rudolph Nureyev's "Don Quixote" is that it's not about Don Quixote. Instead, the ballet, which was originally staged for Boston Ballet by Nureyev himself in 1982, focuses on the romance between two of the minor characters. The ballet, featuring the music of Ludwig Minkus, plays April 26 to May 6, at the Boston Opera House.

Artist Alex Katz is known for bold, hard-edged, smartly designed figurative paintings and prints. The Museum of Fine Arts offers up "Alex Katz Prints" (April 28 to July 29), a survey of about 150 of his works, dating from the 1960s to the present.

The New Rep ends its season on a bouncy note, concluding with "Little Shop of Horrors," playing April 29 to May 20, at the Arsenal Center in Watertown. The likeable comedy about everyone's favorite flesh-eating plant makes a great night out for everyone in the family.

Tom Brokaw seemed pretty much like just another news anchor. And then he wrote the acclaimed book, "The Greatest Generation," and elevated himself above the fray of talking head news anchors. Brokaw speaks April 25 at Symphony Hall, part of the Boston Speakers Series.

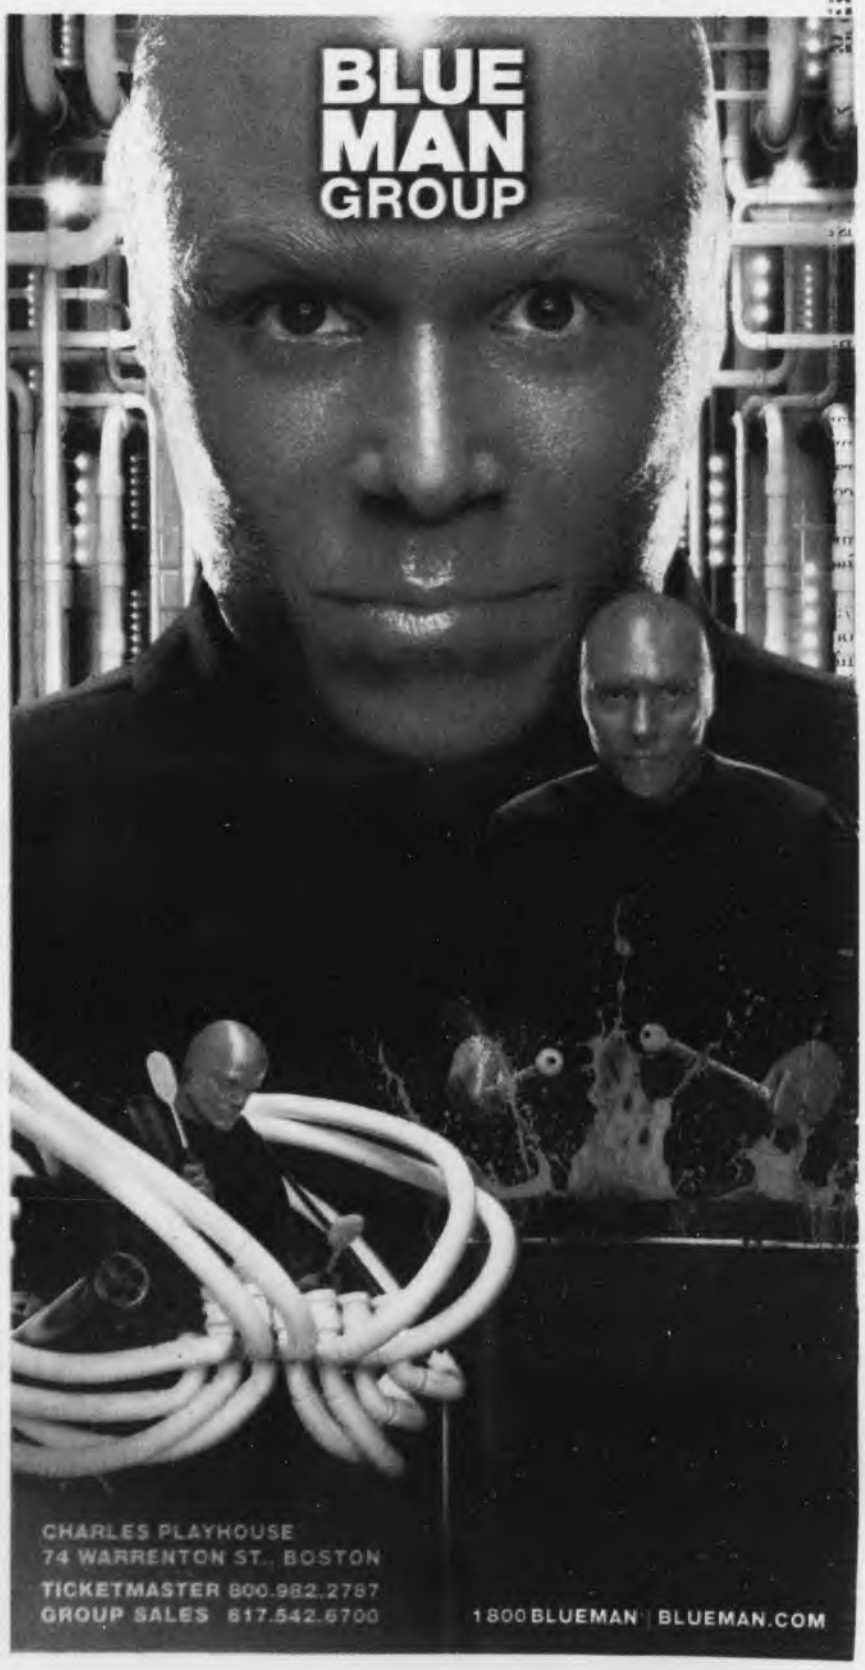
The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre continues to thrive, and their visits to Boston have become a celebrated tradition for many. One of the country's great dance companies, AA brings fire and passion to both their classics and their new works. Presented by the Celebrity Series, they perform April 26-29 at the Wang Theatre in Boston.

The great soprano Rosemary Joshua joins the Handel & Haydn Society for Mozart's "Coronation Mass," one in a night of coronations (including Haydn's Symphony No. 85), played April 27 and 29 at Symphony Hall.

May

Colin Hay – singer and storyteller – performs May 4 at the Berklee Performance Center. His old Men at Work fans will revel in "Down Under" and "Who Can It Be Now?" but he's also winning over a new audience his new solo acoustic stuff.

Woody Guthrie fans will rejoice. The American Repertory Theater brings the folk music hero back to life with "Woody Sez," May 5-26, at the Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge. At a time when many music performers are afraid to tell you their political party of choice, it's easy forget that Guthrie used music as a vehicle for social protest and change.



Leonard Bernstein helped start this theater season off on a high note (his "Candide" was my favorite production of 2011), and now maybe he'll help us end it on a high note. Boston Ballet's "Fancy Free" features Lenny's music and Jerome Robbins' choreography. It plays May 10-20 at the Boston Opera House.

Was the original "Xanadu" (the 1980 film) – yes, you remember, Olivia Newton-John on roller-skates – meant to be a comedy? I don't think so. But there's no doubting the intentions of this musical adaptation of that camp classic. Take the story of a magical Greek muse who descends to Earth to help a struggling artist achieve the dream of opening a roller disco, add some songs ("Magic," "Evil Woman"), and you've got "Xanadu," presented by SpeakEasy Stage, May 11 to June 9, at the Boston Center for the Arts.

There's no way around it: Puppets behaving badly is just funny, as patrons of "Avenue Q" know. The Lyric Stage Company of Boston presents their version of the puppets-and-humans musical comedy, May 11 to June 9. Warning: Adult language and puppet nudity.

Theater companies often like to leave you on an upnote. Case in point, the Huntington Theatre Company closes out its season with "Private Lives," the Noel Coward classic about a divorced couple that just can't seem to stay away from each other. Filled with Coward's trademark style, wit and humor, the durable comedy runs May 25 to June 24 at the B.U. Theatre, in Boston.

LIFE AT CHS

Semi-formal is tonight at town hall

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

After a long week of finals and midyears, first semester is officially over. On Monday, we will have a sort-of second first day of school, as we go to all five periods and get acclimated to our new classes. AP classes and some English classes last all year, but most people will have between two to four new classes to get used to – exciting!

Tonight's dance is now the Freshman/Sophomore/Junior/Senior Semi Formal. The theme is casino/"Queen of Hearts" and there will be black and red decorations, Black Jack, and snacks. Tickets are $15 and will be available at the door. So come on down to the Town Hall at 8 pm tonight for a fun time! If you're in Middle School, remember that the winter "Snow Dance" is happening tonight in the cafeteria from 7-9 pm.

High school Cabaret was Wednesday evening at Atlantica. The chorus sang, and students were able to display their musical talents by singing, dancing, and playing instruments. It was Mr. Marks' last Cabaret ever – so sad!

The Model United Nations team is at Harvard University this weekend. This annual conference stimulates UN organizations and debates. Over 2,900 delegates from 37 countries are stimulating 30 committees. Delegates discuss global issues, meet students from around the world, and learn about international diplomacy.

Spinnaker articles are due next week for the February 14th Valentine's Day edition! Also, parent ads for the yearbook are due January 31st and extra pictures are due February 1st. Do not miss out on submitting your memories.

The girls' basketball team defeated Carver 37-47 at home on Tuesday. Their next game is Saturday night versus Norwell at 5:30. Come to the game and support the Lady Skippers in this intense match-up. The boys' basketball team played Carver on Tuesday too, and their next game is Friday at Norwell. Also on Saturday, the wrestling team has a meet at Duxbury, the swim team is at Norwell, and boys' ice hockey is playing Hull at Pilgrim Rink at 8 pm. Check out the Sports Section for scores and game notes.

Tickets are $15 and will be available at the door. So come on down to the Town Hall at 8 pm tonight for a fun time!

The first real snowstorm occurred this Saturday! Sadly, rain quickly washed away the Winter Wonderland, and everybody's hopes of a snow day. Mid-week temperatures reached the 40s and 50s – what is going on with Mother Nature these days? I hope you all got to enjoy sledding, skating, and playing in the snow for the short while that it lasted.

That's all for this week Cohasset. If you're still feeling a little bit hectic from this crazy busy week, just know that next week will be more relaxed with the fresh start of a new semester.

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 6, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of mixed signals can create an unreliable situation in which to make decisions. Best advice: Hold off on making any commitments until you're sure you know what's going on.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An apparently friendly offer comes with some strings attached. Be careful not to get tied into something you don't really want. Thoroughly examine all your options before making a choice.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) If you're not careful, distractions can interrupt your best efforts. Continue to focus on what you need to do. You'll soon have lots of time to enjoy the rewards of your dedication.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Knowledge replaces suspicion as you begin to learn more about that "act of betrayal." On a lighter note, someone close to you might be planning a pleasant surprise.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Control your sometimes-overactive jealousy gene before you find yourself saying or doing something that you could later regret. Best advice: Stop obsessing and move on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to loosen up and do something wonderful and exciting before your more reserved nature resurfaces. A message brings news of imminent change.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Cheer up. Things begin to improve significantly by mid-February. However, you might still need help to get through the rest of this sometimes-difficult period.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Something you learned last week takes on new meaning as you begin to relate it to another situation in your life. It's best to keep this matter to yourself for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your energy level is climbing, and so is your self-confidence. Good for you, because you'll need a good dollop of both to tackle an exciting challenge on the way.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A family issue might interrupt a career-linked project. Try to give the matter the attention it needs, but be careful not to jeopardize your workplace situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some self-doubt shows up this week, causing you to question your ability to handle a new challenge. But you know you can do it, and this is your chance to prove it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A personal matter requires you to be as clear and forthcoming as possible in order to avoid misunderstandings. A career move is eased with the emergence of new facts.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of reaching people that makes them feel good about themselves. You would be an excellent motivational speaker.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Navigating the College Financial Aid Process

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

As a parent, I faced down a mountain of college-related paperwork when my son went to school. And in the not-so-distant future, I expect to do it again and again for my daughters. Even for those of us who work in higher education, the processes and the paperwork required for college and financial aid applications for our kids can seem overwhelming the first time around – and even the second or third times around.

It's the right time of year to think about college aid and applications, so I asked our Office of Undergraduate Admissions for some tips for prospective and continuing college students and their families.

Taxes First, FAFSA Second

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is a form that families of new and continuing students should fill out each year to determine their eligibility for financial aid for higher education. Our Admissions and Financial Aid offices usually encourage parents and guardians to complete and submit the FAFSA as early in the year as possible.

In 2012, however, students and families should complete their income tax returns before they file the FAFSA in order to take advantage of IRS Data Retrieval, a tool that pulls tax return data directly from the IRS to use in your FASFA application instead of filling out two similar forms. But before students and families can retrieve their adjusted gross income for FAFSA filing, they must allow two weeks from the date they file their taxes to use IRS Data Retrieval.

Financial Aid Deadlines

Every year, colleges and universities award millions in financial aid, usually on a first-come, first-served basis, so it's important to know the deadlines for financial aid applications.

UMass Boston, for example, awards more than $132 million to qualifying students and this year has a March 1 priority financial aid application deadline for new students in the fall 2012. These students and their families should file taxes in early to mid-February to be able to use the IRS Data Retrieval tool and still meet the March 1 deadline.

Continuing UMass Boston students have a May 1 priority financial aid deadline.

Admissions Deadlines

Now is also the time to double-check admissions deadlines, which can vary widely. Our College of Nursing and Health Sciences, for example, has an application deadline of February 1 for its nursing program, while the deadline for other programs and general undergraduate admissions is April 1 for freshmen and July 1 for transfer students.

I hope these suggestions and reminders have been helpful. The IRS Data Retrieval tool should especially lighten the burden of paperwork for families filling out the FAFSA this year.

For more information about admissions and financial aid at UMass Boston, please contact us at 617.287.5000, or visit www.umb.edu.

Janice Argeros

Janice Argeros

LYNNFIELD – Janice E. (Dewitt) Argeros, 71, beloved wife and of James Argeros of Lynnfield, passed away peacefully on Wednesday January 18, 2012 at the Mass General Hospital in Boston, while in the comforting presence of her family.

Born in Manorkill, NY, she was the daughter of the late Kenneth and Leta (Briggs) Dewitt. She grew up there, and graduated from Gilboa High School and the Albany Business College. She was employed with the Coulter & Barnes Law Firm in Syracuse, NY before she met her husband, Jim, and passionately started an amazing partnership in life that would span over 50 years.

After nine years in Syracuse NY, Jim's retail career brought them to Boston and to Lynnfield MA where they made their home for over 40 years. Janice was a dedicated spouse and mother, dedicating her life to her three children. As a giving soul, she gave great service to the community and to causes that benefited children throughout the world.

Janice was a faithful member of St. Vasilios Greek Orthodox Church in Peabody. She served as the president of the church PTA and was instrumental in the establishment of scholarship funds that today exceed a million dollars. She was a Past President of the Hellenic Women's Guild of the North Shore and instrumental in its growth. As a mother with an art of nurturing, she endeavored to improve the life of children in many of her community activities. She worked diligently as a volunteer on behalf of the Home for Little Wanderers. She was the co-chairperson of a national Luncheon held in Boston on behalf of the Philoptochos National Committee, to benefit children's hospitals in the area. She was also a member of the Archbishops Committee, overseeing the Philoxenia House – a house dedicated to provide housing and sustenance for children and their families undergoing medical treatments in Boston. She was instrumental in organizing an Orphans Weekend for children from the St. Basil orphanage in Garrison NY to visit and stay with local St. Vasilios parish families.

Besides her community service, she enjoyed spending time with her family and especially her 10 grandchildren during summertime in Maine and wintertime in Ft. Meyers Beach Florida. She had a wonderful and nurturing spirit that will be dearly missed by her family and friends as they celebrate their gratitude for her life.

Early in her battle against an unforgiving cancer disease called Multiple Myeloma, she and her family created a Foundation dedicated to raising money for research to find a cure for Multiple Myeloma. The tax free entity is named "Multiple Myeloma Journey of Hope".

She is survived by her husband, James Argeros of Lynnfield, with whom she shared 50 years of marriage; a son and daughter in-law, Arthur and Laurie Argeros of Michigan; two daughters and sons in-law, Demetra and Paul Farren of Cohasset and Cassandra and John McMahon of Boxford; 10 grandchildren, Haley and Olivia of Michigan. Kayla, Alexandra, Caroline, Sean and Isabella of Cohasset. John, Abigail and Tyler of Boxford. Two sisters, Kathleen Dart of Auburn NY and Barbara (Bobbie) Stryker of Stamford NY; a sister-in-law, Barbara Dewitt of Middleburg NY and several nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death, besides her parents, by a sister Lavenia (Bea) Leitcher brothers Dayton and Hubert Dewitt.

Services were held from the Conway, Cahill-Brodeur Funeral Home, 82 Lynn St., Peabody. Expressions of sympathy may be made to the Multiple Myeloma - Journey of Hope, P.O. Box 355, Lynnfield, MA 01940 or to the St. Vasilios Endowment fund, 7 Paleologos Street, Peabody, MA 10960.

Cbay pitches in for Wellspring

Those who resolved to get organized in the New Year, have a perfect outlet for recycling the old and making room for the new. Michael Filbey of Cohasset can help. Last year, Filbey started Cbay LLC, an online selling service that donates a percentage of its profits to charity. Filbey, who began selling his toys on Amazon at the age of 10, started Cbay during his first year in college and so far, Cbay has raised more than $2,700 for Wellspring Multi-Service Center.

Now in its second year, CBay continues to successfully sell household treasures for local residents, returning 60 percent of the sale profits to the owners while making a substantial donation to Wellspring, a regional social service center.

Filbey said, "Got stuff you no longer use? Let Cbay turn your abandoned valuables into cash. From picking up your item to shipping it out, Cbay does all the work; you don't lift a finger. You get 60 percent of the total sale, 30 percent of the sale goes to Wellspring and 10 percent of the total sale goes to Cbay. Ultimately your wallet gets thicker, your home gets cleaner, and the world gets better. Everybody wins."

For more information or to arrange for a sale, call Filbey at 781-534-5276, visit www.cbayonline.com or email cbaygive@gmail.com.

Local student ambassador

Eighth-grader chosen for state service project

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The eighth-grader wrote that he hopes to "create a positive impact on society" while striving to be "the best person I can possibly be."

A Cohasset Middle School student was recently chosen for a big honor.

Eighth-grader Daniel Toomey represented Cohasset in Governor Deval Patrick's Martin Luther King Jr. Day community service program, Project 351.

Joining over 300 students each representing the Commonwealth's 351 cities and towns, Toomey traveled to Boston on Saturday, Jan. 14 to complete service projects that would reach hundreds of thousands of families in need across the state.

Toomey was chosen for the project because of his essay submission, which was chosen by the Middle School and then the state. The eighth-grader wrote that he hopes to "create a positive impact on society" while striving to be "the best person I can possibly be."

The student said he was surprised when he was chosen: "It was surprising to be called into the principal's office." But Toomey added that he was "extremely grateful" for the opportunity.

While he has volunteered at his church and around Cohasset, Toomey said that he hoped to reach out to a larger demographic. The young volunteer got his chance on Jan. 14. Toomey met his fellow eighth-graders at the State House, where they participated in a "Town Meeting" with the Governor before departing to their designated service areas.

The Cohasset eighth-grader said Patrick delivered "a fantastic speech" about growing up on the south side of Chicago and how one can become a leader "no matter how bad the situation might be — you can still make an impact on your community."

Toomey also had the chance to meet and shake hands with the Governor, "one of the nicest men I've ever met." While the conversation was brief, Toomey told Patrick it was an honor to meet him, while the Governor called the work the kids were doing that day "amazing."

"I wish it was longer," Toomey said of his conversation. "But what can you do? He's the Governor."

The service project Toomey was assigned to brought him to Cradles to Crayons, a volunteer organi-

UPDATE

Water Company's RFP raises questions

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's water department is drafting a Request for Proposals (RFP) for a new contract; its current contract with American Water is up in June 2012.

The water commission is advocating for a 20-year concession agreement that would transfer operating risk to the new operator, allowing this operator to collect from the town's revenue stream over the 20 years. What does Cohasset stand to gain from this?

"A big chunk of cash upfront," according to Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio, along with the ability for the water department to continue to set the town's rates.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin has said that he is concerned about this process, in part because he would like to see other options explored, such as a shorter-term contract, and discussed before the decision is made at May's Town Meeting.

Coughlin has also expressed concerns over Aquarion Water, which services all of Hingham, Hull and around 300 customers in North Cohasset.

Hingham is in the early stages of a feasibility study that will explore the town buying its water company from Aquarion.

Hingham's Town Administrator Ted Alexiades explained that legislation that allowed the town to sell the water company in 1879 "anticipated that in the future the

BUDGET TALKS

Five-point plans to tackle overtime

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following last week's Board of Selectmen discussion on overtime issues in the police and fire departments, the Town Manager along with two of the chiefs presented a plan to address the problem.

The "root issue," Town Manager Mike Coughlin said this week, is the addition of manpower to the public safety departments. Both departments have vacant positions and claim that filling these would lessen the money spent on overtime.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca both provided comprehensive five-point plans to tackle the issue in their respective departments. DeLuca could not attend Tuesday's selectmen meeting, but Deputy Chief William Quigley presented the chief's plan in his stead.

The chiefs also prepared overtime status reports detailing the budgeted amount for overtime in fiscal 2012, along with the projected expenditures and deficits (see sidebar).

These reports, said Coughlin, reinforce that the overtime issue stems from "personnel management."

Coughlin explained that a component of these plans "lies in collective bargaining with our public safety unions" that are pending and cannot yet be

Cohasset officer assists with felony arrest

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Officer Jay St. Ives assisted with the arrest of a 39-year-old Scituate man Saturday on numerous charges, including kidnapping and armed robbery, involving a 68-year-old alleged victim.

The incident started on Saturday, Jan. 28, at 1:06 p.m. when a Hingham Police Detective was in the parking lot of the Hull Police Department speaking with a Hull Detective about an open investigation. A 68-year-old man drove into the lot and reported he had just been robbed at knifepoint at a business he believed was in Hull. The alleged victim, who was on oxygen, appeared shaken but not injured. He directed the officers to the parking lot where the robbery occurred.

The lot was actually in Hingham, Victoria's Sub Shop on Rockland Street, close to the both the Hull and Cohasset town lines. The two detectives immediately observed a man matching the description walking away from the parking lot on Hull Street (Route 228) in Hingham.

The detectives ordered the suspect at gunpoint to stop. Other officers, including St. Ives, arrived to assist. The suspect was taken into custody after some resistance taking three officers two sets of handcuffs to secure him.

Subsequent investigation showed the alleged victim arrived at a business in Scituate. The suspect, who knows the alleged victim, was also at the business. The alleged victim agreed to give the suspect a ride. The alleged victim's vehicle is a work utility type van with tools. At some point as they drove, the suspect picked up a work knife that belonging to the alleged victim, began opening and closing the knife, allegedly telling the victim "I can kill you".

He then pointed the knife at the alleged victim. The suspect told the alleged victim to continue driving. He also removed all cash from the alleged victim's wallet.

As they drove onto Kilby Street in Hingham, in an attempt to get away free himself, the alleged victim convinced the suspect they should stop to get food. The alleged victim drove into Victoria's Sub shop, and the suspect told him to remain in the van, allegedly threatening to kill him again, this time with a wrench. The suspect removed the keys and he walked inside. The alleged victim had a spare ignition key and drove out of the lot into the Hull Police lot.

The suspect is Joseph N. Tibbetts, age 39, pf 79 Jericho Rd., Scituate. He was booked at the Hingham Police station and is being charged with nine charges: 1) Kidnapping; 2) Armed Robbery; 3) Assault w/Dangerous Weapon (knife) on a person over 60; 4) Assault w/Dangerous Weapon (wrench) on a Person over 60; 5) Larceny From Person Over 65 (knife); 6) Larceny From a Person Over 65 (wrench); 7) Intimidation of a Witness; 8) Resisting Arrest; 9) Disorderly Conduct.

Tibbetts is being held on $5,000 cash bail, Hingham police said.

Cash missing

A 19-year-old Scituate teen is being summonsed to court to face the charge of larceny over $250 after being caught on surveillance tapes pocketing money from the cash registers at Shaw's where he was employed as a cashier, police said.

The Shaw's manager called police last week to report the alleged theft. Police said the manager and store loss prevention personnel had been investigating the fact that small amounts of cash had been missing from register drawers since the beginning of the year.

The video showed the 19-year-old taking cash and putting it into his pocket. Shaw's told police when confronted, the teen admitted to stealing $545 and provided a written statement to that effect. Police are summonsing him to court to face the larceny charge. The employee was fired, police said.

Watch found

A concerned citizen turned in a gold-colored woman's watch with a black band to the police station on Monday (Jan. 23). The watch was found at the corner of Elm Street and Elm Court, police said. Police said the watch looks like it had been lost for a while and does not appear to be valuable. No one has claimed it, they said.

Property dispute

Police explained to a resident from Jerusalem Road last week who was reporting a property-line dispute that it was a civil matter and advised him that a survey would need to be done.

Hit & run

A 67-year-old Hull Street resident called police at about 7:39 a.m. on Wednesday (Jan. 25) to report his 2004 Subaru Forrester had been vandalized overnight. Further investigation revealed that the vehicle had been sideswiped by another vehicle, police said. The man had parked the Subaru off the road on the shoulder and the other motorist appeared to have weaved over the fog line and clipped it.

Police said there was a long, black scrape on the side of the Subaru on the driver's side and the side-view mirror was hanging off.

Police said the Hull Street man had parked his car at 6 p.m. the previous night and did not realize it had been damaged until the next morning. The man did not hear anything unusual and there was no debris from the other vehicle at the scene to help with the investigation.

Left-turn accident

At 12:37 p.m. on Friday (Jan. 27), police responded to a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Leo's Gulf Station. A 2003 Ford van, operated by a 32-year-old Scituate man, had traveled through the intersection and was making a left into the gas station across the two oncoming lanes. Police said one motorist stopped to let the van make the turn but a 1999 Honda Civic, operated by a 20-year-old Scituate man, came up the inside lane at a high rate of speed and struck the van. The Honda had to be towed; the van was drivable, police said. The operator of the Honda was cited for speeding.

Larceny

A 62-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last week that he believed his ex-wife had stolen a baseball bat valued at $20 and an ax valued at $40. She was in the process of moving her belongings from the home and he believed she took those items at that time.

Protective custody

Police were called to a home last week for reported threats but upon arrival they found a 51-year-old man, who lived there and was so highly intoxicated that it was unsafe to leave him at home. Police placed him in protective custody and brought him to the station. It was unclear who made the threats report, police said.

Violation

A 48-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station last Friday to report that her former boyfriend, who had a court order not to have any contact with her, had been sending her text messages. She showed police the messages. Police arrested the former boyfriend who was held without bail until arraignment on Monday morning.

Intoxication

Police had a guest at the Harbor Inn transported to the hospital last Saturday after they found him in highly intoxicated and still in bed at 2:45 p.m., police said.

Police had responded to a call from the Inn about a male guest that did not answer the door for housekeeping. The 51-year-old man from out-of-state had been at the Inn for three days. He was so highly intoxicated that police decided he needed to go to the hospital.

Moving in

Police responded to a call from an Avalon resident who reported hearing a male screaming. Further investigation revealed when the police went to the unit in question that a husband and wife, ages 71 and 65 respectively, were moving into a two-story unit and were shouting between the floors about where certain items should go.

On bench

A caller reported that a drunken man was lying on the bench at the Mobil Mart on Sunday (Jan. 29) at around 1:10 p.m. As it turned out, he 22-year-old was having a medical issue and was transported to the hospital.

Winter parking ban in effect

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Equestrian Club is approved

The School Committee voted to approve a High School equestrian/dressage club during their last meeting, pending any legal concerns.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said Wednesday that the school's insurance company recommended having parents and guardians sign a hold harmless agreement for student participants.

Staff member Sally Davenport, who volunteered to oversee the club, was "in complete agreement" with the policy, said DeGennaro.

The committee voted in favor of the club, noting that it will be referred to as "The Equestrian Club," leaving "dressage" out of the title.

Davenport appeared at the meeting and thanked the school board for voting to approve the club. She added that the club is open to anyone who wants to join, "whether or not they have a horse."

Principal search now underway

The search for a new Middle High School principal is underway. Assistant principal Dr. Michael Gill has been serving as interim principal since August, following former principal Joel Antolini's departure.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo reported to the School Committee that so far, 15 resumes have been collected. Cataldo said that she is "just the collector of resumes" and that Director of Curriculum Louise Demas is heading up the search committee.

So far, the job has been posted in the Boston Globe and on Monster.com, Cataldo said.

OVERTIME

discussed. He commended both chiefs for putting the plans together and the respective unions for their willingness to discuss the issue.

"We're committed to working on this issue, and there's going to be dialogue. The only way to tackle these issues is to talk about them," Coughlin said.

The town manager told the board that the plans before them offered only short-term solutions, but that the public safety departments and their unions "deserve great praise for being part of the potential solution."

Quigley agreed that the solution is short-term.

"It took seven months to get here and will probably take 18 months to get out of this," the deputy chief said. "We have more positions that bodies right now; 50 percent of our overtime is spent on shift coverage... By adding two officers [last month], we reduced our overtime by 4 percent."

The deputy chief also pointed out that the police department would be reimbursed for dispatcher costs by a state grant when the town fully joins in the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) later this month. The department is getting $18,000 in SETB 911 (Statewide Emergency Telecommunications Board) grant money to reimburse the overtime account, and also billed the SSRECC for $13,700 for dispatch salaries paid last month.

The police dispatchers are no longer employees of the town of Cohasset, Quigley explained, but employees of SSRECC.

Chief Silvia reported that "things are pretty much the same on the fire side of the house," and that lack of personnel has contributed to the department's overtime.

The fire chief said that he is trying to fill two positions and get them into an academy as quickly as possible. He hopes to have new folks trained by the end of the summer.

Silvia explained that when the fire department had 22 people, overtime was lower; when the department dropped to 19, overtime "ballooned considerably."

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore said that he was "glad to see some positive thinking with regard to overtime" but hoped to see an end-of-year projection to better understand what the burn rate is going to be.

The town manager said that the chiefs are already calculating that, adding, "I think that you're going to be happy to see what the projection is." Coughlin said they would have the numbers ready by the end of the month.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr thanked the chiefs for taking "positive steps in the right direction."

Five-point plans

Both the police and fire departments prepared five-point plans to tackle overtime in each unit.

✔ Fire:

Complete hiring all fiscal 2012 funded firefighter positions and seek alternative ways of training those new hires, with the goal of completing the hiring/training as soon as possible
Develop policies, through negotiations with the firefighters' union, for better management of the fire dept. personnel services budget, including how the overtime budget is developed and expended
Add clarity to how the overtime funds are allocated and expended by restructuring how the overtime budget is presented in the FY-13 budget by adding line items for training, mechanic, administrative, etc.

• For FY-13:

Fund one of two presently unfunded positions that were lost through attrition during the economic downturn

• For FY-14:

Fund one additional position, bringing the staffing level to 24 firefighters assigned to the operations division. This staffing level will allow for four shifts of six members and will complete the transition started in FY-13. It will also reduce the reliance on overtime funding while strengthening the town's ability to manage the department's personnel and financial resources.

✔ Police:

Initiated negotiations with the union with regard to minimum manning.
Temporarily reassign the court prosecutor from Quincy Court.
Temporarily reassign the community liaison officer, responsible for community outreach programs such as seniors here in town.
Temporarily suspend the activities of the school resource officer, who is involved in school activities such as teaching a high school law class.
Temporarily reassign the detective to 4 p.m. to midnight as well as temporarily reassign the day sergeant to 4 p.m. to midnight. The detective lieutenant would act as the day supervisor when a sergeant is not scheduled.

NEWS UPDATE

Boiling down budget

Finance dept. presents preliminary numbers for Fiscal '13

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's new town accountant/finance director, Mary Gallagher, along with CPA and interim finance director Eric Kinsherf, presented a budget planning update to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin had put together a preliminary revenue trends and budget guidance for fiscal 2013 with former finance director John Stanbrook, which was presented to the selectmen in October. Another update came in time for Special Town Meeting on Dec. 5. Further updates were warranted this week following the release of Governor Deval Patrick's H2 state budget.

Gallagher and Kinsherf presented the "very preliminary numbers" to the board, both stating that these are "rough estimates" in terms of revenues for the town. While the finance department is waiting to see what the health insurance increases might be, depending on how additional headcount in various departments will impact the numbers.

Using FY-12 as a benchmark, the town could see additional revenue between $1,434,566 and $1,567,566, according to the finance team's estimates.

Coughlin called this "good news" for the FY-13 budget and said he will prepare a budget that makes major contributions to the town's stabilization fund, reserve fund, and capital fund, a request that the Capital Budget Committee and Budget Planning Group have previously made of the Town Manager.

The Town Manager opined that the revenue estimate makes it clear that the town has "the ability to do a level-services budget as opposed to a level-funded budget," the latter of which was proposed by the Budget Planning Group. Coughlin added that he believes the town will have "the same flexibility" in FY-13.

"We're anticipating several years of robust new growth with Avalon," Coughlin told the board. "How we invest that money is important. It makes a clear case that we should go for level services."

Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer said that he is "not convinced the robust growth is going to take us out of our current issues."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said she was concerned that "we don't know exactly where we're going to come out in fiscal 2012... I want to feel comfortable with that before accepting" the projections for FY-13.

Coughlin responded that the finance team would present an update to the Budget Planning Group next week; the final numbers will be ready by Feb. 28.

Advisory chairman and Budget Planning Group member Peter Pescatore noted that the end of February is late for the budget to be reviewed by every single department when Town Meeting is in May.

"We should be further into it by now — a third of the departments should be done by February," Pescatore said.

The Town Manager said that due to "extenuating circumstances," such as hiring a new finance director only a few weeks ago, the finance department is behind.

However, Coughlin said that former town manger Bill Griffin presented the budget on Feb. 19 with a Mar. 30 Town Meeting; interim town manager Steve Lombard introduced the budget on Mar. 6 with an Apr. 30 Town Meeting.

Pescatore countered that the budget process is usually started in the fall and in place by the new year.

Coughlin said that with "a new finance director and new finance team, I don't think it's outrageous" to present the budget in February.

"Give me a couple of weeks to pull the final portion of the budget together and fine-tune expenditures, and by the end of the month we will have a complete picture for you," Coughlin said.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro added that the School Committee does not vote on their budget until their Mar. 7 meeting, which is a public hearing, so the schools won't have their final numbers ready for the end of this month.

The Town Manager said the finance department would work with the schools' preliminary numbers for now.

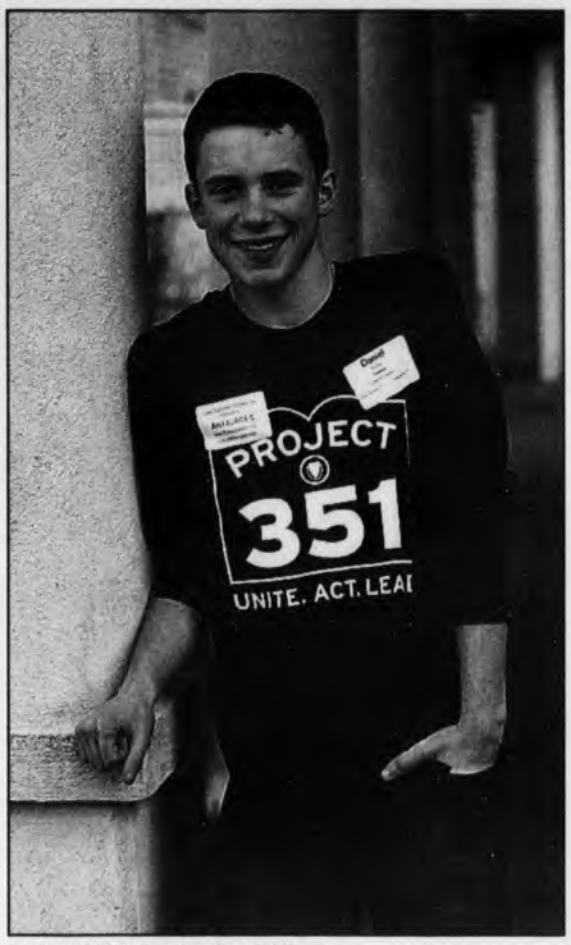
zation that outfits impoverished young children with everyday essentials. Toomey was tasked with putting together outfits and creating care packages. His team had a goal: to create 70 outfits that day; the student reported that they completed 104 in four hours.

In total, the students working in various teams at Cradles to Crayons managed to exceed their total goal of 600 care packages by the end of the day, completing 1,694, Toomey said.

While Toomey said that folding clothes "seems like what I do on a Sunday," he said that the work gave him and his fellow volunteers "a heartwarming feeling."



The student explained that going into the program, he had "no idea what to expect," and wound up being pleasantly surprised.

"Even though throughout the day, all I did was fold clothes the entire time, which seems so basic and mindless, you don't expect you're actually helping anybody... at the end of day we found out how many people we helped in total, just by folding a shirt and pair of pants. It opened my eyes to how much we were helping people."

Toomey said that the total number of families reached by Project 351 is in the range of 6,000 to 7,000.

All in all, the eighth grader said that he was glad to be chosen and that while he folded clothes for hours on end, he also made friends.

"Everybody was really nice," said Toomey. "It ended up being a lot more than I expected."

TECHNOLOGY UPDATE

School board goes paperless, wireless

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo is making major waves with the schools' technology.

One of her first initiatives as the district's new Superintendent was to improve the schools' current technology while implementing some new tools.

Cataldo told the School Committee Wednesday that she will go before the Capital Budget Committee next week to present her plans to bring iPads and MacBooks Airs to the classrooms for both teachers and students to use. Teachers received special iPad training in the fall.

The Superintendent said that she was in the Apple Corporate offices in Boston this week working on this plan. While she does not yet know how much the technology will cost or how it's going to be paid for, these details will be discussed with Capital Budget next Wednesday night.

If all goes according to plan, each High School student would be issued an iPad that they could use for all four years of high school.

Cataldo also told the School Committee that at an upcoming meeting, each member of the board will have a MacBook Air in place of their hard copy reports in an effort to go completely paperless.

Wireless internet has been implemented in each of the schools.

School Committee chair Dr. Helene Lieb asked Cataldo if board members could bring their own iPads to meetings instead; the Superintendent said that they would have that option.

For those who still needed hard copies, Cataldo said she would provide them — "but then you must recycle them."

A few School Committee members said that they were not yet comfortable with the idea of completely throwing paper out the window, and asked if they could continue to receive hard copies for now and receive training on the new Macs.

Lieb agreed that each board member could make the transition to paperless "by choice." She added that she was excited to see "creative work" being done with regard to technology.

More to come in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Sick and Tired...of Being Sick and Tired?

By Elizabeth Johnson

Living in a body that is operating at less than 100% means feeling tired, achy, and/or moody much of the time. It's your body's way of telling you that it wants to be treated nicer. Doing so would only result in a win-win situation for both your mental and physical health.

So the question remains...are you sick and tired of being sick and tired all of the time? And what would it take to change that?

Well...water is a good start. Water is a critical element to all of the body's systems. It certainly takes some planning to ensure you have water with you throughout the day. Here are some examples of strategies that are proven to work: drinking a full glass of water right when you wake up to start your day, choosing water over a regular or diet soda during lunch and dinner, and using a refillable water bottle and trying to fill it up 3 or 4 times throughout the day. Once it becomes a regular habit, you won't be able to imagine how you functioned without sufficient water before.

Another key factor in how you feel physically is how you feel about your self-image. Feeling low and frustrated every time you look in the mirror can bring down your overall health. The flip side, of course, is being confident in your own skin, proud of your body's health and fitness level, and excited to participate in an active lifestyle. Get In Shape For Women can help with all of that. We specialize in helping women transform from the inside - out and develop strong bodies and self-images. If you are sick and tired of feeling sick and tired all of the time, give us a call today!

Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff holds you accountable by scheduling your appointments, checking in with your nutrition, and focusing on getting you results you want! Our program is composed of weight training, cardio, supportive nutrition and accountability to help you meet your goal. For a Free Week trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com. Current client Jeanne Boulter says, "Get In Shape For Women is one of the best things I ever did for myself. At fifty-six years old, I couldn't do the things I used to do without becoming tired and having aches and pains. Five months after joining GISFW, I feel like a new person. The staff is so caring, knowledgeable and motivating. I actually look forward to working out three times a week. I have lost more than twenty-five pounds and eighteen inches, but more important is how much better I feel!"

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Jennifer Haigh speaks on 'Faith'

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Ten years ago, the Boston Globe's Spotlight Team set out to investigate former priest John Geoghan's alleged sexual abuse of young boys. Its research not only uncovered mindboggling numbers of Geoghan's victims but also triggered the most serious crises to confront the Catholic Church in years.

As the Globe Team exposed the subterfuge that concealed a long history of abuse by a multitude of priests — acts that went unpunished by civil law — their articles ignited a furious outcry not just from Boston but from the world. After so many words, so many repugnant stories of victims and collared predators, Globe readers felt mired in a moral darkness made even murkier by the church, and thought "enough, enough."

Jennifer Haigh, author of the novel, Faith, brings a refreshing clarity to this familiar story. She will speak at "Sunday AuthorTalks" at the Cohasset Library on Feb. 12 at 4 p.m. Haigh has written a courageous book, one that tells the tale of an Irish Catholic family whose son, a priest in a local parish, finds himself caught up in the midst of the crises.

Set in a community much like Hull in 2002, the story is told by a savvy narrator who engages the reader with her intelligence and candor. Ron Charles, in his Washington Post review of Faith, says of her: "Two years have passed since that horrible spring and now Sheila McGann is breaking a promise of silence she made to her older half brother, Father Art. A lonely, middle-aged woman long estranged from her family and church, Sheila carefully pieces together "a kind of fifth gospel" to describe the events that ruined his life. "My penance is to tell this ragged truth as completely as I know it," she says, "fully aware that it is much too little, much too late.""

Like the Globe's Spotlight Team in 2002, Haigh relentlessly peels back the layers of deception that have obscured the McGann family's history — and though she chronicles the hysteria of the times, she does so with sensitivity to both human frailty and nobility. Haigh probes with a delicate yet honed scalpel the collision of faith and reason, the elusive dance of truth, and in the process tells a riveting story.

Jennifer Haigh has written three previous best-selling novels: The Condition; Baker Towers, winner of the PEN/LL Winship Award; and Mrs. Kimble, winner of the PEN /Hemingway Award for debut fiction.

Following Haigh's talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for further discussion and book signing. Faith has recently been published in paperback and will be available for purchase.

Admission is free, but seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library, Buttonwood Books, and the Cohasset Historical Society, or phone the Library to reserve a seat (383-1348, ext. 1). Visit cohassetlibrary.org for more information about "Sunday AuthorTalks."

ON THE GREEN BEAT:

Green your Super Bowl party

ERIN DALE

"Going green" may not necessarily go hand-in-hand with Super Bowl Sunday—especially when the home team is playing. Rather, the Super Bowl is one of the least green all-American rituals of the year. Junk food – along with disposable plates, napkins and utensils with which to eat your greasy hot wings, potato chips and dips – is practically a prerequisite for any Super Bowl party.

But if one of your New Years' resolutions was to do more for the planet, what better way to start than the second biggest party of the year (the first being, of course, New Years' Eve)? Here are a few tips and tricks to get you started.

Go recyclable:

If disposable plates and so forth are a must for your football fete, there are at least some eco-friendly versions you can buy. Grocery stores from Shaw's to Whole Foods carry recyclable or compostable brands: a personal favorite is Preserve On the Go Tableware for disposable, compostable and biodegradable plates, cups, plastic forks, knives and spoons (which are also made from recycled plastic). If you can't find the greenest version, you can always go for the plates and napkins containing the highest percentage of post-consumer recycled material.

Go vegan:

For an alternative to Super Bowl munchies, try vegan nachos: they're sure to please herbivores and omnivores alike. You can adjust the menu to suit your tastes, but to keep the snack as healthy as possible, go for organic whole wheat tortilla chips or a brand that contains flax seeds or black beans, which will add omega-3s or protein to your chips. Guacamole adds healthy fat and plenty of flavor. Consider making your own salsa or pico de gallo from scratch with fresh vegetables. Steam some quinoa, an Aztec grain that's packed with protein, to add a rice-like texture to your nachos in place of ground beef. And for the cheese? You can make your own dairy-free version using margarine, flour, soy milk and nutritional yeast — simply whisk the ingredients together in a saucepan on medium heat for a creamy "cheese" sauce. You can also cheat and buy Food For Lovers Vegan Queso from Whole Foods, found in the snack food aisle.

Go sustainable:

If your Super Bowl Sunday can't be green, at least your Saturday can! Check out the Ninth Annual Sustainable Living Expo in Hull on Saturday, Feb. 4 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Nantasket Beach Resort Hotel Convention Center, 45 Hull Shore Drive.

The event is free to attend, and earth-friendly vendors from all over the South Shore are showcasing their wares. It's a great place to go to if you're looking for tips and lifestyle ideas or want to support local companies that are leading the effort to go green.

The Cohasset Mariner wants to hear from you! Send in your tips, tricks and stories and tell us how you stay on the green beat.

Contact Erin Dale at: edale@wickedlocal.com with your green suggestions.

BLACK HISTORY MONTH

Documentary on Boston busing crisis

The documentary film "Can We Talk? Learning from Boston's Busing/Desegregation Crises" will be shown in the meeting room at Cohasset Library from 7 to 9 p.m., on Thursday, Feb. 23. The film takes a look at the long-term impact of the 1970's Boston public school busing/desegregation crises. The film documents the personal testimonials of individuals impacted by court-ordered busing and its residual affects on the City of Boston, its school system and its residents.

The Boston Busing/Desegregation Project grew out of attempts by the Boston-based organization, Union of Minority Neighborhoods, to organize Boston's African American parents in their struggle for a quality public education. UMN heard time and again that parents were weary of engaging with the Boston Public School system because of their hurt and frustration during the era of school desegregation in the 1970s. Listening to different voices and stories from across the city, a consistent theme arose: The traumatic experience of living through the busing/desegregation crises had a profound impact on countless Boston residents.

UMN realized a need to revisit the period of busing and desegregation in Boston. The project is gathering knowledge from written history, individuals, and communities. The process moves past old misunderstandings and builds on success and shared values and acknowledges the many forms of truth about this history and its impact.

Following the film there will be a discussion led by Donna Bivens, project director, and Kathleen Kelly, project facilitator. For more information, call Connie Afshar at 781-383-6006 or refer to the website at www.bbdproject.org. The program is sponsored by Cohasset Diversity Committee.

NUTRITION

Solving the energy crisis

Boost your energy with all-natural foods that kick your body into high gear

By Michael Dwyer

Experiencing the occasional dip in your energy level as the day wears on is common. Thankfully there are proven methods for bouncing back from the exhaustion. And it's no more complicated than treating yourself to good, healthy food.

The right path to follow

Increasing your energy level can be an opportunity to spark your metabolism naturally and do it with nutritious foods. According to HealthMad.com, energy foods "should be rich in micronutrients, which are essential to keep the body healthy and the brain functional." Protein, fiber and "good" (unsaturated) fats are equally important.

Top 10

The following are the top 10 all-natural foods that will help you re-energize and get back in the game:

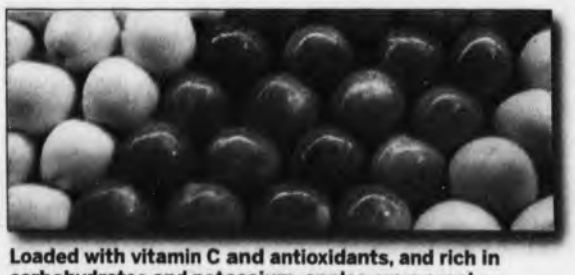
Apples: Loaded with vitamin C and antioxidants, apples are one of nature's perfect to-go foods – just grab and eat. Rich in carbohydrates and potassium, they're a great energizing snack.

Avocado: Rich in unsaturated fats, avocados also contain vitamin B6, vitamin C and folate. Here's an easy serving tip – top your avocado slices with a squirt of lime juice and a sprinkle of salt.

Blueberries: One of the heavyweights of the antioxidant-rich fruits. Antioxidants help to rid the body of free radicals and balance protein levels. Blueberries are also high in manganese, fiber and vitamin K and have been linked to reducing cholesterol levels and improving the overall condition of the heart.

Citrus fruits: Here's a quick solution for boosting your energy – vitamin C. Of course, citrus fruits are abundant in vitamin C. Also, the minerals and dietary fiber that are present in the citrus fruits are necessary for overall health. Oranges and grapefruit can be cut into bite-sized sections for quick eating.

Oatmeal: Oatmeal offers a boatload of health benefits such as easing digestion and stabilizing blood glucose level. Most importantly, the fiber content in oatmeal helps you to get a steady stream of energy. If you work during the day, the trick is preparing your oatmeal in advance for your mid-morning or mid-afternoon snack. Try preparing your oatmeal at home the day before, placing it in a microwave-safe container, then heating it when the craving strikes. Add some berries or chopped nuts, too.



Peanut butter: Peanut butter is an excellent source of protein and a good source of fiber. Peanut butter is also rich with arginine, an amino acid that helps to relax blood vessels and improve blood pressure. Spread peanut butter on a slice of apple or a banana, or stir it into your oatmeal.

Raw nuts: High in Omega-6 fats – one of the good, unsaturated fats – raw nuts are thought to increase your brain function. When choosing nuts as a snack, it's important that the nuts should be consumed raw. Roasting nuts destroys the beneficial Omega oils.

Sweet potatoes: Here's an all-around all-star. Sweet potatoes are loaded with vitamins A, B6 and E as well as potassium and fiber. Again, much like oatmeal, this is an item you'll have to pre-prepare, but it's certainly worth the effort.

Watermelon: A little bit of summer always brightens your mood. This refreshing fruit contains fatigue fighters like vitamin C, lycopene, iron and potassium. Also, its water content keeps you hydrated.

Yogurt: Creamy, refreshing and – surprise – a great energy booster. Packed with B vitamins and protein, yogurt also has calcium, zinc and phosphorous.

Loaded with vitamin C and antioxidants, and rich in carbohydrates and potassium, apples are a great energizing snack. PHOTO COURTESY OF THE FRUIT CENTER MARKETPLACE

Smart shopping can help transform your lifestyle

Eating right and exercising is something we all know we should do, but the follow-through can be harder than we think. You do not need to take part in an expensive or radical health program to improve your life. Thinking long-term and making small changes, like shopping smarter and taking a closer look at what we eat, can help improve our lives.

Shop with a plan

Try to avoid going grocery shopping without a list or menu in mind – or worse still, when you are hungry. Wandering through the aisles can lead to picking up a lot of foods you do not need or are not good for you, leading to expensive shopping trips now and poor health later.

However, if you shop smarter, you can turn the same trip into a much less painful experience on your wallet and your waistline. Creating a list and planning your menu for the week ahead is a great way to start. You can shop for only what you need in a given week, and if your schedule is particularly chaotic, you can prepare many of your meals in advance. Once you get into a routine, it can be much easier to navigate the grocery store.

Look at labels

One way to help get yourself feeling great – inside and out – is to take a closer look at what you are buying. If you are not sure where to start, consider the advice from the American Heart Association and look for foods that are lower in sodium.

Whether you are looking for snack items, main course options or condiments, more and more companies are trying to help consumers by making options that will help you move toward a healthier lifestyle. For example, Vlasic has introduced their new line of reduced sodium pickles that have 25 percent less sodium. One serving of the reduced sodium pickles amounts to only seven percent of the daily sodium intake values outlined by the American Heart Association and the Food and Drug Administration. As an added bonus, these tasty pickles have zero fat and calories.

Keep an eye on serving sizes. If you need help, consult a serving size guide. The National Heart, Lung and Blood and Institute offers the NHLBI Serving Size Card for handy, instant reference. Visit www.nhlbi.nih.gov to download and print the card.

Tweak recipes

For those who love to cook, so many of the recipes handed down from generation to generation are not always the healthiest. Part of the joy of cooking is that it is more art than science, so cut back on ingredients that are not good for you and substitute with healthier options. If you are looking for inspiration or help, search for any one of the thousands of food blogs on the Internet – many of which offer healthier alternatives, like Hungry Girl or the Food Network's Healthy Eating Blog.

Living a better-for-you lifestyle does not mean giving up all the foods that you love and enjoy – it means being smarter about how you shop, cook and eat. Once you do, you will be amazed at how much better you feel about grocery shopping.

Maintaining healthy vision

Answers to some common questions

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

Maintaining healthy vision is important to everyone, especially as we age. Regular eye exams can help prevent age-related problems that are best treated in the early stages. Here, we take a look at two common eye problems – cataracts and macular degeneration – and discuss with vision specialists what patients should look out for, what to do when diagnosed and corrective solution options.

Cataracts

"We recommend everyone get a yearly eye exam from the age of 55 on," said Dr. Dan O'Connor of Post, O'Connor & Kadrmas Eye Centers, which has locations in Plymouth, Mashpee, South Dennis, Middleborough and East Wareham. "If there is evidence of glaucoma, it will be prevalent then. Also, if someone has blurry or dimmed vision, they should also be evaluated."

People who come to O'Connor in need of cataract surgery often complain about glazed vision while driving.

"They also might not be able to read as well," he said. "Some people say they need brighter lights when they are reading or their vision overall is not as good as it used to be."

When can you determine if you are a candidate for cataract surgery?

"It really depends on the person," he said. "It's important to first hear the patient's complaints and then tailor it based on that."

One of the most popular questions after cataract surgery is "How will I see after the surgery?"

"Most people within a day or two of the surgery can already see much better," O'Connor said. "Most eyes are ready to have their glasses changed out within a week of surgery. We tell people they should really try to get as independent of their glasses as possible. A good percentage of people are able to achieve that but most people still need reading glasses."

Cataract surgery involves a surgeon placing an implant into the eye but is it permanent?

"It can be removed, if necessary, but it is designed to be permanent," he said. "Patients do not feel the implant because it is very tiny. The eye doesn't react to it because of its size. The point of implant is six millimeters in size that they see through so it's very small."

Are there any complications that can develop after cataract surgery?

"It is possible someone could develop a hazy membrane behind the cataract that further requires laser surgery but that is a very simple three- or four-minute procedure," O'Connor said. "Most people react well to the cataract surgery. The UV rays from the sun have been determined to lead to cataracts at an early age but the majority of people who do have cataracts are simply due to aging as they get older. In some cases, there can be a genetic and hereditary component, as well."

Macular degeneration

Another age-related problem is macular degeneration but what exactly is it and what should you do if you are diagnosed with it?

"Macular degeneration is the aging change of the retina," said Dr. Eddie Kadrmas, also of Post, O'Connor & Kadrmas. "We don't know the exact cause of it but there are some genetic components. There are two types of macular degeneration – dry and wet. About 90 percent of all patients have dry, which is a gradual degeneration of tissue. Wet involves abnormal blood vessels growing under the retina, which can lead to bleeding in the eye."

The good news is with macular degeneration, patients will not lose their entire vision.

"It involves the center point of vision so patients will lose their ability to read and recognize faces but they will keep their peripheral vision," Kadrmas said.

"There are certain factors that are attributable to macular degeneration. Smoking can accelerate it as well as exposure to sunlight. We caution patients who have macular degeneration to always wear sunglasses when outside. There are age-related macular degeneration vitamins that may slow down the process but there are no treatments for dry."

Patients with wet macular degeneration have more treatment options.

"People can have injections of growth factor inhibitors that bind to receptors in the eye to get rid of the abnormal blood vessel function," he said. "If a patient is in the advanced stages of dry macular degeneration and has lost all tissue or wet and has ended up with scarring, there is not much that can be done at that point. Patients with dry cannot have injections because they don't have abnormal blood vessels. We try to help patients function better with their daily lives."

Heart and soul

Cross-country skiing benefits both

By Rich Harbert
rharbert@wickedlocal.com

Howard Mason was in his late 40s when he discovered the essential benefits of cross-country skiing during the Blizzard of '78. The spiritual joys were a bonus that has lasted decades.

When the monster storm shut down the state that long-ago winter, Mason strapped on skis to get to the store and keep his family supplied. The Randolph man ran into so many others doing the same thing that winter they decided to form a club.

Thirty-three years later, the Massachusetts Cross Country Ski Club is still an active bunch.

Their equipment has drastically improved, but their drive to cut trails in fresh blankets of snow is unchanged.

Next month, Mason, now 80, will lead 10 couples on the club's annual excursion to Craftsbury Nordic Center in Vermont. Craftsbury's 100 kilometers of groomed trails offer an exceptional ski experience. But when there is snow locally, Mason and his wife, Carol, are just as eager to push off on a familiar tour of the Blue Hills Reservation or any number of other state and local parks around Boston.

"It's a lifestyle," Carol Mason said. "It's not something I did as a kid, but I found later I really enjoyed it. Before, I used to hate going out in the cold."

4.5 million and growing

According to SnowSports Industries America, 4.5 million Americans aged 6 and older cross-country skied at least once during the 2009/2010 winter. That's a million more than just three years earlier.

It is truly a sport that knows no age barriers.

Research suggests slightly more men than women participate and the overall majority range in age from 25 to 55. But it depends on locale.

At Waterville Valley Resort in New Hampshire, Nordic Center Director Leah Wilson said the majority of her season ticket holders are 50 and older, so-called Silver Streakers, who prefer the solitude of the resort's 70-plus kilometers of groomed trails to the more frenetic pace of the adjacent alpine slopes on Mount Tecumseh.

Some parents will alternate between the two forms of skiing, looking to give their children a broader base of skiing. Pulks, little sheltered sleighs, are available to tote youngsters who tire along the way.

Wide trails along wooded fire roads at Waterville Valley Resort's Nordic Center easily accommodate two-way traffic and both skate and classic cross-country skiing.
STAFF PHOTO/RICH HARBERT

"You can put kids on cross country skis as soon as they can walk. They don't need poles. They just shuffle along and are only limited by the size of the boot," Wilson said.

Classic vs. skate

Cross-country skiers typically fall into one of two categories – classic or skate.

Classic skiers move along parallel tracks using kick and glide motions. Most resorts make tracks with grooming machines. Back-door skiers must blaze their own tracks, but most parks and forests where skiers congregate in winter will have an abundance of tracks from early-bird skiers after any storm.

Skate skiing is more like in-line skating. It is faster and more intense, but typically requires special skis and a groomed track.

Classic cross-country skis have evolved greatly from the long, thin skis Howard Mason rode to the grocery store in 1978.

Today's touring skis are shorter, fatter models, and, together with a new generation of boots and bindings, offer vastly improved torsion control, enabling skiers to maneuver much better on turns and hills.

Health benefits

Anyone who has ever stepped on a NordicTrack exercise machine knows how invigorating the kick and glide technique can be. Now just imagine how much longer the workout might last outdoors on a gorgeous winter afternoon after a fresh snowfall.

According to Kelly Davis, research director for SnowSports Industries America, cross-country skiing burns 500 calories an hour and works muscles that might otherwise be forgotten in the gym.

Cross-country skiers can also exercise at their own pace, Wilson, Waterville's Nordic director, noted.

"It's a no-brainer. You can work as hard as you want. You can walk on cross-country skis or you can run. It's a great sport for the entry-level athlete," Wilson said.

Like heaven

Of course, the greatest part of cross-country skiing is the sheer joy of being active outdoors at a time of year when many go into hibernation.

Carol Mason admits she didn't like going out in the cold before her husband immersed their family in skiing, but she quickly discovered the glories of both snow-covered trails and multi-layered clothing.

"I used to work with people who were in a blue funk all winter and hated the cold and the dark, and it was a funny contrast because I was outdoors enjoying myself, meeting super friends," she said. "There are a couple of times every winter after a fresh snowfall when you feel like you died and went to heaven."

Venues

One of the greatest draws of cross-country skiing is the nearly endless supply of venues.

They are literally as close as the front door.

Before snowplows reach the neighborhood, skiers can hit freshly coated streets and sidewalks. Local parks and golf courses often offer fabulous skiing, as well.

Conditions are typically better up north, especially early in the season, but the Masons remember a year when the best skiing was in Myles Standish State Forest in Plymouth.

Vermont and New Hampshire nevertheless offer some of the most spectacular cross-country venues in the country.

Craftsbury, in Vermont's Northeast Kingdom, lies on a plateau that always seems to get snow. The resort will host this year's national championships in March.

Waterville offers magnificent views of the White Mountains and its wildlife on trails like the aptly named Moose Run that meander though fire roads in hills surrounding the village.

Closer to home is the Weston Ski Track, a manmade groomed trail system at the Leo Martin golf course that is readily available to Boston area skiers.

Getting started

Getting out onto the trail is as easy as driving to the nearest park, but most experienced skiers would recommend investing in at least one lesson.

Members of the Massachusetts Cross Country Ski Club traditionally school new members in the basics of the classic technique on their own. Most resorts, meanwhile, offer rental and lesson packages for a fraction of the price charged for entry to most downhill resorts.

Skis can be rented at most venues by the day or season. Some will apply the cost of an introductory rental toward the purchase price of ski packages.

New skis are not that pricy. Country Ski and Sports in Quincy offers a beginner package of Rossignol waxless skis, boots, poles and bindings for less than $300. Just add snow.

Alignment – not just for tires

Consider visiting a chiropractor before symptoms start

By Kellie K. Speed
Correspondent

Back care is important to everyone of all ages so ensuring your best health will lead to less problems in the years ahead. To be certain your spinal cord is properly aligned, you might want to consider a visit to a local chiropractor as a means of preventative care rather than emergency care.

"Chiropractic care is ideal for anybody with any kind of pain-related concerns, from neck aches to backaches and disc issues," Dr. Brian Douglas, of Village Family Chiropractic in Sagamore Beach, said. "We see children as early as right after birth, especially if it was a traumatic birth or if the child has developed postural issues. Everyone should really get checked by the time they are 13 but people usually wait for symptoms. By then, though, it is typically the result of a problem. Today, we are seeing a major shift in the way people are thinking of healthcare these days. Although we see an equal number of people who are symptomatic, we are also seeing those who want to maintain their overall good health."

Dr. Lisa Lewis, of Cohasset Family Chiropractic, believes most people seek chiropractic care for some kind of pain or discomfort. "Chiropractic care doesn't treat anything per se, but it does look at the spine for misalignments of the vertebrae, which puts pressure on the nervous system," she said. "I look specifically for vertebrae that are out of alignment and irritating a nerve. I believe that everyone's spines should be checked. I first started seeing a chiropractor when I was younger to maintain my health, and had seasonal allergies that went away soon after visiting. Most insurance companies do cover the cost of a visit to a chiropractor so people should be checked out to be sure their spine properly aligned."

When treating patients, Dr. Lisa Lewis, of Cohasset Family Chiropractic, looks specifically for vertebrae that are out of alignment and irritating a nerve.

Some people who visit chiropractors are looking to help with pain while others come to make the quality of their life better.

"Baby boomers today are trying to stay as healthy as they can for as long as they can," Eric Deiner, of Bay State Chiropractic in Weymouth, said. "We work with everyone from athletes to Olympic decathlon athletes to treat their spinal cords. If there is an area of their spine that is out of whack, it could cause a pinched nerve and problems down the line. The muscles could go into spasms, which can then cause back spasms. We look to take pressure off the nerves."

Chiropractic care also helps people who have arthritis.

"For older patients, arthritis is a big problem," Deiner said. "Once you have arthritis, we can work the joints, which can be very helpful with older people to provide better mobility. There was a lot of propaganda in the '60s about chiropractors, but since then, there has been better cooperation between doctors and chiropractors. People should know we are also well schooled and well trained."

Organizing your closet

Save time, money and frustration

By Sharon L. Fisher

You're standing at your closet thinking: "Shirt's wrinkled. Jacket at the cleaners. Do those pants fit? Where's the other shoe?"

Is your closet jam-packed? Closets can feel like a dark hole, cluttered with forgotten and misplaced belongings. You may be missing out on wearing what you have spent time and money on.

The benefit of getting your closet organized is that it saves time, money and frustration. You'll feel more in control, less overwhelmed and it will provide you with more space to find and put away items.

Set the stage

Plan the amount of time you are going to work on the closet. To complete the project you may need additional sessions. Pick the time of day when your energy is at its best – you'll make better decisions. Have boxes and bags ready for items to donate, mend or try on. Make space in the room for the items coming out. Don't be hard on yourself. Remember donating items helps others and gets them out of your way. Don't give in to interruptions, so put some music on. Visualize the completed space and concentrate on the end result. You will feel great afterwards.

Take inventory

Start by taking inventory; note everything you would like to store in the closet. Take stock of what is presently in the closet. Decide on the categories you want things organized by; it will save time getting dressed. The items you wear most often should be the most accessible. The less you plan to use something, the more "inconvenient" it should be to get to. Then work and sort by each category. Be sure to keep those categories separate.

Start sorting

Approach each pile one at a time and divide that pile into the following:

Use: Love it, like it, mend it, keep it.

Donate: In good condition? Doesn't fit your taste? Not in style?

Even a closet located under an eave can hold lots of items. Consider using hooks in the back to hold belts and scarves. The white hanging organizers hold necklaces and bracelets while the bureau holds socks, underwear and earrings. PHOTO COURTESY OF COME TO ORDER!

Trash: Broken, unusable, damaged and not worth repairing.

Be reasonable. Simplify your wardrobe with pieces that go together and colors that look good on you. Ask yourself the following: Where are you going to wear it? What are you going to wear it with? Is it dress up or casual?

Sentimental items should be packed and stored separately so they won't take up valuable closet space. Clear storage totes and labels act as reminders of what you have put away. Only return something to the closet if it is ready to wear. For every new item brought in, take one out to donate or toss.

Review

Can you better utilize the space if you purchase a system, hang some hooks, or add another rod or shelf? Be consistent with the type of hanger you choose; it saves space and makes it is easier to see everything.

Sorting your closet should be done each season – review what you have and have not worn. Getting things in order will make the process easier each time.

Remember – an organized closet will save you time, money and frustration.

OUR VIEW

Transparent government

Some may think the Open Meeting Law was created for the press. While reporters are often the only members of an audience at local government meetings – the intent of the law is to make the process of government transparent for all citizens – that means you!

Open, transparent government — that allows its citizens to see how and why decisions are made and gives them the opportunity for comment — goes to the heart of our democracy whether on the national level or right here in Cohasset.

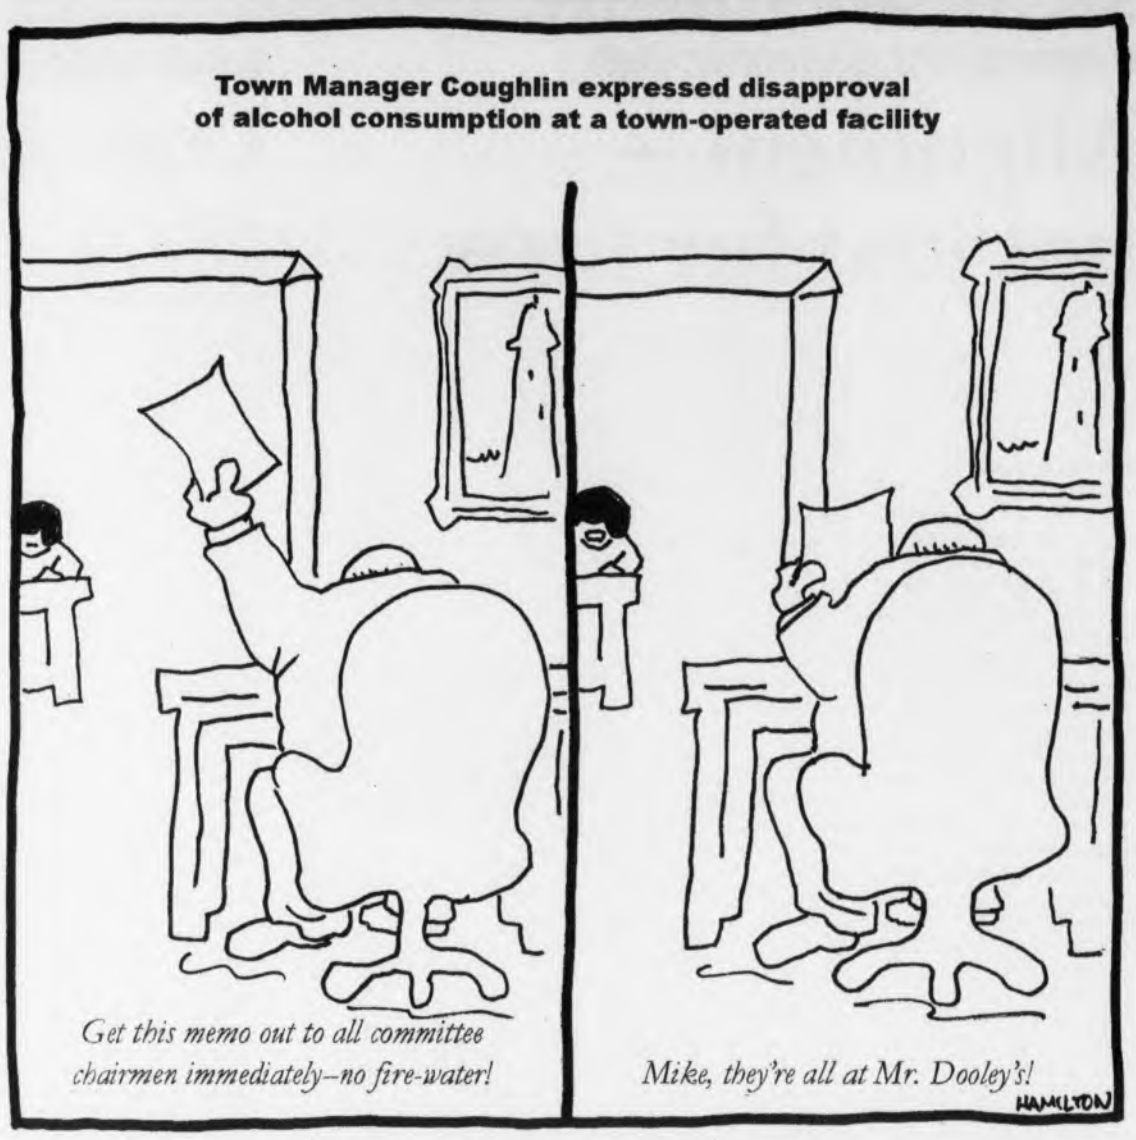
In another town we covered years back, the selectmen went into an illegal executive session to discuss diverting traffic from a main street to a small side street. They didn't want the residents on the side street to have advance knowledge about their decision because it would upset them.

You can imagine how those residents felt when they woke up to discover 18-wheelers barreling through their neighborhood. In a nutshell, they felt betrayed and disillusioned. They were also very angry.

The press can only do so much in objecting to illegal executive sessions, email "meetings," telephone "serial meetings" and so on. You, the people, have to stay involved and care when you are shut out of the process.

We know open meetings can be inconvenient because of the requirements for posting in advance and other rules – but the Open Meeting Law is about all we have to ensure that our government is "of, by and for the people."

There are plenty of smart people in Cohasset who think they know what is best for us. We applaud their involvement and hard work. But they must not be allowed to conduct the town's business behind the scenes no matter how well intended their motives may be.



We want to make it clear that there are committees that are doing a great job following the Open Meeting Law and we applaud them!

Meetings whether "informal or formal," "official or unofficial" that involve quorums of town boards must be held openly, with an agenda and minutes kept.

Oftentimes newly elected or appointed board members either don't understand the Open Meeting Law or want to be team players and go along with their more seasoned counterparts whether communicating via email about town business (not just scheduling or receiving information) or discussing matters behind the scenes. After all, it is human nature to want to air a controversial subject with the board in secret to test the waters, so to speak.

In our view, the ends never justify the means. It's the process that the public needs to be part of, not just the decision or the vote.

If you disagree, just think about those residents who woke up to the sound of tractor-trailers on their street.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt thanks for supper support

Last Friday night, despite a pouring rain, more than 200 people of all denominations, ages, and economic backgrounds came together to share in Cohasset's first "Old Fashioned Community Supper," hosted by St. Stephen's Church but sponsored — and made possible by — the many wonderful people at St. Anthony's, First Parish, and Second Congregational churches, too. It was a grand evening of such goodwill and fun that my face actually hurt from smiling when it was over! Really!

I pray that by now I've managed to thank the many members of my own church who helped make this night possible, but because I can't possibly thank everyone else individually, I'm hoping through this letter to send heartfelt gratitude to all my Cohasset clergy colleagues and to their many parishioners who provided the salads (First Parish) the breads (Second Congo) and the desserts (St. Anthony's).

And on behalf of all of our faith communities, I'd like to thank Coral Grande at Cohasset Elder Affairs for providing transportation to the elderly among us, and to Jane Corry for making sure her clients at the Food Pantry knew about the dinner, too. Most of all, thank you Cohasset, for coming out on a rainy night and sharing your evening with us. It was fabulous!

Blessings,
The Rev. Margot D. Critchfield, Rector, St. Stephen's Church

Responding to Quigley's commentary

The commentary published in last week's Mariner prompted me to respond.

Karen Quigley wrote a personal assessment of her view of the difficult issues facing town personnel, boards, volunteers, and the Town Manager.

She is correct when she advises we need to let our leaders, employees, and volunteer advisors do their jobs in a positive work environment. It is all too true that lack of civility cannot be condoned. I'm sure we all agree with that.

Ms. Quigley further points out that when the work of our employees is unsatisfactory their jobs are at stake and those in elective office are subject to the decisions of the electorate at the ballot box. This is how it should be. The ballot box is in my mind the cornerstone of democracy.

It is extremely offensive then when she suggests with a not so veiled inference that... "the hostile relationship in which town officials with vested interests undermine the Town Manager's authority....."

The use of vested interest is insulting, accusatory, and it is inflammatory. Vested interest according to the sources below have as their first definitions the following:

a. A personal stake or involvement in an undertaking or situation with the expectation of financial gain (Merriam Webster Dictionary).

b. Vested interest: the persons, groups, etc. who benefit the most from existing business or financial systems (Random House).

The hurtful accusation is not constructive or respectful especially when she has just called for civility among us.

She knows first hand and has known from her many years of town involvement the time, energy and hard work involved for those who put themselves out there for little or no compensation. We all benefit from their talents, abilities, and commitment to the town. Their motivation is simple; to help keep Cohasset running so that we can all continue to enjoy it even when problems arise.

I hope that the next time Ms. Quigley goes to the sandbox she'll play and speak nicely with her colleagues. Otherwise, perhaps a time out is in order.

Facts of life on the budget

Three cheers for Karen Quigley's article — it is about time that the citizens of Cohasset were told the facts of life.

While some Selectmen seem to want to lay the problems at the Town Manager's door, I believe someone occupied the Town Manager's office long before he did.

I know that the BOS has no operating responsibilities but the town depends upon them to use their heads.

The budget figures are a quick lesson in realty — the CEA budget, about $200,000, is half spent for the year, 97 percent of it on salaries – what's going to happen if the senior center expands to 1,800 square feet in a $6 million building?

COMMENTARY

Role of Budget Planning Group

SAM WAKEMAN

I was disturbed by the reference to the "self-styled Budget Planning Group" in your Jan. 27-Feb. 2, 2012 edition. I believe this reference is erroneous and would like to set the record straight.

This is not a self-styled group. The BPG (Budget Planning Group) was created in April of 2009 by a vote of the Board of Selectmen. The Group includes; two members of the Advisory Committee, two members of the Board of Selectmen, two members of the School Committee, two members of the Capital Budget Committee, and as staff resources the Town Manager, Town Finance Director, School District Superintendent, and School Finance Director.

The objectives of the BPG are

- To recommend fiscal policies to the Board of Selectmen and Town Manager
- Monitor adopted fiscal policies
- Review and monitor the budget process
- Revise the budget and process as needed
- Look for and recommend efficiencies
  - From inter-department cooperation
  - Better methods and procedures
  - Cooperation with other Towns
- Raise public awareness of fiscal Policies.

When the BPG was created we were well into the recession and it had become obvious that revenue from existing sources (state primarily) and uncontrolled expenses (health insurance, pension liability, state assessments) were having a very negative affect on our ability to provide Town services. The group was able to establish very good communication across all departments and develop a projected five-year plan to allow the town to work through the difficult times. This is to be a truly collaborative process. We identified a number of issues, which could make the town more efficient (recycling at the schools was implemented, central vehicle maintenance was identified but never implemented) this was a good start to what is sorely needed.

Unfortunately the severe lack of financial controls and reporting erupted through the "water department crisis". In 2010 the Finance Director and Town Manager abruptly left. This removed critical input from the BPG.

We decided that the interim Town Manager should concentrate on the crisis and should not make long-term decisions for the Town. We would leave it to the new Town manager, when hired, to work with the BPG and move forward. We are now there and the BPG has been carrying forward with its mission. It is unfortunate that the new Town Manager has not seen the BPG as integral to his job.

My personal opinion relative to the 2013 budget is that it should be level funded. Currently we do not have a firm grasp on the Town's financial

After illness, immediately clean and disinfect contaminated surfaces by using a bleach-based household cleaner as directed on the product label.

Flu Virus and similar related viruses spread easily, causing about 20 million gastroenteritis cases each year in the U.S. These viruses begin to appear at this time of year. No vaccine will prevent infection and no drug will treat it. Infection affects the stomach and intestines and causes gastroenteritis (inflammation of the stomach and intestines). Anyone can be infected with norovirus and get sick. The illness often begins suddenly, with stomach cramping, throwing up or diarrhea. Noroviruses are the most common cause of gastroenteritis in the United States. CDC estimates that each year more than 20 million cases of acute gastroenteritis are caused by noroviruses. About one in every 15 Americans will get norovirus illness each year. Norovirus is also estimated to cause over 70,000 hospitalizations and 800 deaths each year in the United States.

Impact of new norovirus strains on outbreaks

Norovirus has caused the majority of acute gastroenteritis outbreaks in Cohasset. New strains which have emerged more recently have not led to more outbreaks.

You may hear the illness called "food poisoning" or "stomach flu." It is true that food poisoning can be caused by noroviruses. But, other germs and chemicals can also cause food poisoning. Norovirus illness is not related to the flu (influenza), which is a respiratory illness caused by influenza virus. Symptoms of norovirus infection usually include diarrhea, throwing up, nausea, and stomach cramping. Other, less common symptoms, may include low-grade fever, chills, headache, muscle aches, and general sense of fatigue.

Norovirus illness is usually not serious. Most people get better in one to two days. But the illness can be serious in young children, the elderly and people with other health conditions; it can lead to severe dehydration, hospitalization and even death.

Care for yourself — It's useful to prevent dehydration by drinking plenty of liquids. Oral rehydration fluids are the most helpful for severe dehydration. But other drinks without caffeine or alcohol can help with mild dehydration. However, these drinks may not replace important nutrients and minerals that are lost due to vomiting and diarrhea.

Norovirus can spread quickly from person to person in crowded, closed places like long-term care facilities, day-care centers, schools, hotels and cruise ships. Noroviruses can also be a major cause of gastroenteritis in restaurants and catered-meal settings if contaminated food is served. A leading cause of disease from contaminated foods in the United States, most commonly involved in foodborne norovirus outbreaks include leafy greens (such as lettuce), fresh fruits, and shellfish (such as oysters). However, any food item that is served raw or handled after being cooked can become contaminated with noroviruses.

Care for others — The viruses are found in vomit and stool of infected people. You can get it by eating food or drinking liquids that are contaminated with norovirus touching surfaces or objects contaminated with norovirus and then putting your hand or fingers in your mouth. Avoid direct contact with a person who is infected with norovirus (for example, when caring for someone or sharing foods or eating utensils with them).

Practice Proper Hygiene — Wash your hands carefully with soap and water, especially after using the toilet and changing diapers and always before eating or preparing food. If soap and water aren't available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer. These alcohol-based products can quickly reduce the number of germs on hands in some situations, but they are not a substitute for washing with soap and water.

Take care in the kitchen — Carefully wash fruits and vegetables, and cook oysters and other shellfish thoroughly before eating them.

Clean and disinfect contaminated surfaces — After illness, immediately clean and disinfect contaminated surfaces by using a bleach-based household cleaner as directed on the product label. If no such cleaning product is available, you can use a solution made with 5 tablespoons to 1.5 cups of household bleach per 1 gallon of water. The items should be washed with detergent at the maximum available cycle length and then machine dried.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Winter is for planning

A small New England farm, with its short growing season has to carefully select plants that provide the most production.

JON BELBER

Each winter, farmers and gardeners hunker down at a table, perhaps with a cup of tea or coffee, with last year's plans. They look at what worked and what might have struggled or failed. The goal is to make a new crop plan and figure out how and where to place the lettuce, wandering pumpkins and beloved tomatoes amidst the hardy perennials. Crop plans are a terrific organizational challenge, so as to make the most out of the growing space and yield the greatest results, while being aware that there are many obstacles and strategies.

Tomatoes are a big concern because they are so wonderful and essential for many a pizza, pasta and BLT. They are also a concern because they take up real estate from June until mid October. Once they are in the ground, they depend heavily on a healthy soil, good drainage and trellis support, so they can bear their fruit come August. Tomatoes, if living an organic existence, rather than conventionally grown with a dependent life of chemical pesticide and herbicide, can deplete the soil of nutrients. Tomato plants also have to survive attacks from aphids and horn worms. A farmer and even a backyard gardener with limited space will do well by rotating the tomatoes to a different growing space every year, for ideally four years. Try to stay ahead of those pesky insects and invasives. Though this can be difficult to arrange, each rotation will benefit the plant's production and the stress you are putting on your soil. Soil is the organic secret to any healthy productive plants. Good, nutrient rich soil will encourage any plant to do well.

The argument for crop rotation differs a bit with lettuce. Most lettuce plants take about 45 days to grow into a nice head, ready for harvest (see "L" above of BLT). The lettuce may spend even less time in the soil, if it is started in a tray in a greenhouse first. Once it is happily growing, the lettuce has more shallow roots and does not take as many nutrients from the soil. It is a plant not needing to bear fruit; its mission is just to produce lovely green leaves. Once harvested, then one can turn that lettuce patch over to carrots, potatoes or squash. The diverse selections of crops are endless, as seeds, plants and transplants all mature at different rates and are ready for their growth cycle in combination or separate from other plants in your crop plan.

A small New England farm, with its short growing season has to carefully select plants that provide the most production. Though there are season extension strategies, the ideal growing season begins with certain crops in March, as soon the ground can be worked and continue right until late October, depending on the Autumn degrees of frost.

Similarly, a small New England school farm garden needs to appeal to the school year and its participants (students, teachers and parents): early greens and radish in late May before school is out; eggplant and tomatoes for a Summer day; and kale and rainbow chard for late October. How does one fit in all the basics and typical, expected crops, while introducing some new varieties to make it interesting and different?

Some school kids in Scituate like the tomatillo salsa verde harvested from their self seeding tomatillo plants. Many Marshfield students gobble up roasted Jerusalem artichokes, after digging the tubers and freeing them from their knotted root system. And several Hingham students enjoyed picking mint that invaded neighboring garden beds, which found its way into ice cream, care of the kind creators at Nona's ice cream shop.

For these are the days of measuring spaces and beds, looking over the calendar as you count germination days, hoping for steady reliable growing conditions and planning for a productive, fruitful season.

The farmer has fields and growing beds that differ from month to month depending on those April showers and dog days of August.

A kindergartner needs to sow bean seeds, while being cognizant of the fourth grader preparing the ground for tomatoes. Working together, in a thoughtful manner will alleviate competition among plants and eager growers. Plan the crops now, early and often with changes and alterations to be made. Variety is the spice of life and an important tip for the hard working New England gardens and farm fields, and the many hands that work the land.

FOR THE RECORD

Putting social media to work

I joked with my wife before she helped me set up my Facebook page that I was waiting for anti-social networking to catch on.

GREGORY MATHIS

This won't come as a shock to those who are "Friends" of mine on Facebook, but it has taken me awhile to embrace social media.

Yes, I have a personal Facebook page, but other than being able to say I have a Facebook page, I'm not much into the whole Facebook thing. At least from a personal standpoint.

First, I don't think my life is interesting enough to share every thought or movement. I'm guessing no one cares what I'm watching on TV or when and where I'm going out to dinner, or what random thought pops into my head while I'm driving around in my car.

Not that there's anything wrong with other people doing that; it's just not me.

I joked with my wife before she helped me set up my Facebook page that I was waiting for anti-social networking to catch on. That's more of my speed, at least when it comes to my personal life.

Needless to say, my Facebook "Friends" are not getting the whole Facebook experience when it comes to me.

Professionally, it's a much different story.

All of our affiliated newspapers and websites have Facebook pages that are geared toward interacting with our readers and "Fans" in the community.

There are different levels of engagement, depending on newsroom staffing and the number of Facebook Fans. Some of the pages have been active longer than others, so those pages may be a little more Facebook-friendly at this point.

Regardless, we've been working toward making better use of all of our Facebook pages.

One type of post you'll always find on Facebook is the latest stories we've put online. We'll try not to bombard your Facebook page with every single story, just the ones we hope you'll find interesting or quirky, or both.

As you may know, we've been asking readers to submit photos on a wide-range of topics over the last couple of years. What better place to go than Facebook for that? Facebook users are constantly sharing photos anyway, so this is another way to get your photos posted on Wicked Local and in the newspaper on the Your News page for even more people to see.

We've also had success in the past asking for information that could be useful for stories we're working on. Hopefully, you'll see more of that as we discover better ways to use Facebook as a resource.

In addition to Facebook, we're catching up with the whole Twitter phenomenon.

Twitter is a little more impersonal than Facebook, but it helps us get information out to followers in real time, whether it's an important story or breaking news. We've also used Twitter to report from big meetings or events in town. We'll be expanding our Twitter presence as well, so you'll want to start following us if you aren't already.

You can easily find the Facebook and Twitter pages for your community on your Wicked Local town website. Click on both links and "Like" us on Facebook and follow us on Twitter. For those like me who still struggle with the whole idea of social media, you'll be glad you did.

WATER

town might want to revisit that and buy it back."

Faced with rate hikes, poor service over water main breaks (most recently in December) and Aquarion's lack of communication with water customers, Hingham selectmen issued a press release stating that the town is looking into buying the water company from Aquarion.

Case in point, when a water main broke in Hingham on Dec. 4, homes in the Union Street/Triphammer Road area were without water from 6 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The Hingham Journal reported that Aquarion Vice President Harry Hibbard said that there is no money in Aquarion's fiscal 2013 $1.5 million capital budget to fix Hingham's water main problem.

A cement pipe installed by the Army in the 1940s is the one in question. Hibbard was quoted as saying that Aquarion inherited "an old system whose replacement needs far outstrip our ability to keep up with [the work]."

In his office Monday afternoon, Alexiades told the Mariner that "significant delivery issues," coupled with high rates, are just a few of the reasons Hingham is taking steps to buy the water company.

"There are significant service delivery issues. Aquarion says they're quick to fix things, but things are constantly breaking."

Priorities

Hibbard said in a phone call Tuesday that Aquarion is shifting its priorities to address this problem.

"We have a water main that has experienced an inordinate number of outages. Unfortunately, it's a dead-end main that leaves the same neighborhood stranded every time it breaks... We have a capital efficiency plan that looks at mains all along our service areas in Hingham, Hull, and Cohasset, and we try to follow it. We prioritize main replacements based on any number of factors," including the age of the pipe and water quality complaints, Hibbard said.

When Hibbard told the Hingham selectmen that Aquarion would have to increase rates in order to increase its capital budget, Alexiades took issue.

Alexiades responded at the time, "Aquarion can't put more money into the capital budget although we have the fifth-highest water rates in Massachusetts and the company is seeking" an increase.

Coughlin's concern for Cohasset is this: if Cohasset's water department goes out to bid for a new contractor, and one of the bidders is Aquarion, why would Cohasset want to ink a 20-year contract with a company that is losing ground in the Commonwealth?

DeCaprio has told Cohasset selectmen and the Mariner that this 20-year contract would transfer operating risk to the operator but still allow the water commission to set the town's rates and realize savings.

What the town of Hingham perceives as high rates are what Sen. Robert Hedlund, (R-Weymouth) has called "the most outrageous" rate hike yet.

Hedlund, along with State Rep. Garrett Bradley (D-Hingham), appealed to the attorney general in October to intervene on behalf of residents of Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset to fight these rate increases.

Hedlund's office told the Mariner Tuesday that the bill that was filed (No. 2040) has been referred to the judiciary committee. The senator also expressed his opinion on the proposed increases.

"I think if you look at the filing and the basis for the increases, we've had some pretty bad increases awarded to Aquarion — extremely significant increases granted," Hedlund said. "Reading [the filing] as a layman, I think it's more of a reach than the ones they've filed in the past."

This rate increase includes the 16.5 percent rate hike on the monthly water bill for Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset, an increase of 21 percent every three years. That means "the water rates are going to double every ten years," said Alexiades. "These are unprecedented numbers, in our opinion."

Bradley said that he has spoken to the Attorney General's office directly about Bill 2040 and that they seem to be receptive to it. The state representative and Hingham resident explained that this bill is in response to not only the recent 16.5 proposed increase, but additional rate hikes.

"Basically, people are looking at over a 50 percent increase over the past four to five years," said Bradley. "That's extremely difficult in these times."

Hibbard told the Mariner that while he did not care to comment on the proposed rate hikes, the number is lower now than the original amount Aquarion requested.

"We submitted what we believe is a reasonable request for rates," Hibbard said in a phone call. "We await the decision from the DPU and fully expect we'll be treated fairly."

The Mariner called the DPU's chief of staff, Kate McKeever, but she could not be reached for comment.

For now, Alexiades said that Hingham is still in the beginning stages of looking at buying the water company. Both the town manager and Hibbard said that there is a long way to go.

"This is a premature discussion," said Alexiades, adding that it's unclear just how much buying the water company will cost. The price, he said, is "part of the feasibility study — price and the ability to negotiate with Aquarion."

"It's going to take a long time for any takeover to happen," said Hibbard.

"Hingham has a long track record of not being afraid to go into long litigation, though that's not the route we prefer to go," said Alexiades. "In the brief conversations I've had with Harry Hibbard, I believe Aquarion feels the same way."

What does it mean for Cohasset?

DeCaprio explained in an email that Cohasset's situation is different from Hingham's, because Hingham "gave up control over rates and capital expenditures when they sold their system years ago."

Conversely, if Aquarion were "to be a contract operator in Cohasset, they would be governed by our rate structure and our policies, established by us, not them," DeCaprio stated. "Because the Cohasset water commission is a creation of a special act of the legislature, the commission has incontrovertible rights over operations which includes our ability to set and control rates, and we are not giving up any of our rights."

However, Alexiades said that the issues in Hingham spill over to Cohasset; if and when Hingham buys the water company from Aquarion, North Cohasset would be affected as part of the Aquarion system. If Hingham purchases the Aquarion system, Alexiades said, "my understanding of state law is that we're required to buy all of it, including Hull and North Cohasset."

Whether or not Hull and Cohasset remain part of Hingham's system, said Alexiades, is something each town will need to explore.

"Part of the feasibility study will include resolution of that issue," Alexiades said.

While whatever happens in Hingham is a long way off, Cohasset is under a time constraint to ink a new contract, extend its current contract with American Water, or consider a town-run model. A decision will have to be voted on at town meeting, which is May 12; the American Water contract expires this June.

Coughlin has urged that this decision is a "paramount issue," and Hibbard agreed.

"Cohasset's efforts need to proceed regardless of what happens in Hingham," Hibbard said.

What will happen if Town Meeting approves the water commission's proposed concession RFP, Cohasset water goes out to bid for a new contractor, and Aquarion ends up as one of the bidders? The discussion may be premature, but Hibbard answered the Mariner's question on that scenario.

"Aquarion expects to look very closely at the RFP when it is issued," Hibbard responded in an email. "We already have a working relationship with your water company and are proud to serve many customers in Cohasset already. It would be difficult to predict what would happen, but Aquarion would be keenly interested in the opportunity."

State. Rep. Bradley advises Cohasset to proceed with caution.

"This is definitely a big deal and should be slow-walked right now. We have some big issues with Aquarion," said Bradley, adding that "it's public knowledge that the town of Hingham is very seriously" looking to buy the water company.

Bradley said that if he were a Cohasset selectman, he would have a "long dialogue with the Hingham selectmen" before "cutting any long-term deal."

A question of ethics

Selectmen review alleged conflict of interest

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Water Commission has dealt with its share of conflicts and controversies in the past. Most recently, the commission's drafting of a Request for Proposals for a new water company contract has raised some questions in Town Hall.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin recently informed Peter DeCaprio, chair of the Water Commission, that Town Hall would not process payment for an attorney the commission hired to process their RFP. Coughlin told DeCaprio in a Jan. 27 email that the decision was due to "ethical issues... the acquisition of counsel services without any approvals from Town Hall and the absence of an authorized contract."

DeCaprio evidently retained the same attorney for both the water commission and matters regarding his Jerusalem Road home, Coughlin said.

DeCaprio's attorney Jay Talerman said in an email to DeCaprio that the water company can, in fact, hire its own counsel.

"The water company is not a board of the Town. By special act, it is a corporation that has the express power to contract. That some of the water company's functions are intermingled with Town Meeting does not give rise to the conclusion that the Town Manager or any other municipal authority can intercede in its legal affairs," the email stated.

The matter came up during the Board of Selectmen meeting Tuesday. DeCaprio told the board that after interviewing several lawyers, the water commission chose the firm Blatman, Bobrowski and Mead because DeCaprio had in fact used them for a personal matter and "found them to be excellent."

When Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr told DeCaprio that while he understood, he felt the water commissioner should have brought the matter up to the board, DeCaprio reiterated that the water company has a right to hire its own attorney under the Special Act.

Still, Carr told DeCaprio, "There's a process for hiring lawyers in this town... this should have been brought to our attention."

Coughlin added that the issue is that the town accountant can only pay a bill if it has gone through the proper process: "They cannot process it without being legally assured that it is an appropriate contract. In the eyes of the law, this is an up-in-the-air issue."

Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer weighed in, saying that the "crux of the matter is whether the water enterprise fund is a private company and has its own contract capability... If we do have a private water company, it needs to be recognized as so."

"Now we know what the fight is about," said DeCaprio.

When Carr brought the topic back to the attorney issue, saying it is a "perception problem," Coughlin suggested having the matter reviewed by the State Ethics Commission.

The perception issue "should be settled," said Coughlin. "There's a simple cure for it... ask town counsel for a ruling, disclose your relationship to this attorney and clear the air."

DeCaprio accused Coughlin of "defamation," adding, "This is clearly political... This political garbage has got to stop."

Gaumer and Capital Budget vice chair Jack Keniley agreed, with Gaumer storming out of the room after calling the issue "a piece of crap."

This forced Carr to use his gavel. The selectmen chair told DeCaprio that the issue wasn't personal. The water commissioner then agreed to avail himself to the ethics commission.

Later in the discussion, Carr told DeCaprio that he would like to apologize, with DeCaprio responding, "You should." The selectmen chair again said that the matter was not a personal attack against DeCaprio, adding that the water commission works hard.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she would have thought the ethics question "would be the responsibility of the attorney, not the client."

DeCaprio responded that the firm he hired said they had no conflict.

Coughlin also brought into question DeCaprio's relationship with Aquarion, which would be a potential bidder on the water company's concession contract and has advised the water commission on its RFP.

Coughlin said that an email between DeCaprio and the Aquarion CEO suggested a close relationship, and that he was concerned about Aquarion's involvement in the RFP process.

DeCaprio explained that both Aquarion and American Water, the latter of whom presently has a contract with Cohasset Water, have provided guidance on the RFP, but that "no one has seen a draft of our RFP except our attorneys."

Recent allegations implicated a conflict of interest between DeCaprio and Aquarion.

Aquarion is the largest investor-run water utility company in New England. DeCaprio is a partner at Crow Point Partners, LLC, a hedge fund sponsor that invests in public equity and alternative investment markets. DeCaprio focuses on the utility and telecom space.

Published reports confirm that Crow Point Partners is owned by Australia-based Macquarie Bank, the parent company of Aquarion.

Mass general law c268a bars public officials with financial interest in a matter from voting on that matter.

Selectman Paul Carlson and Carr both addressed the accusations during the selectmen's comment period.

Speaking out against what he called "false and malicious statements on Peter and the water department," Carlson said that "people should shut up" and should be sure before distributing such information.

"Peter is one of the hardest working people in the water department," Carlson added.

Carr said that he agreed with Carlson, and that "Peter's private business is unrelated to the water department."

Harry Hibbard, Vice President of Operations at Aquarion had this to say of DeCaprio's relationship with the Aquarion's parent company, Macquarie:

"We understand Peter used to have a relationship, however tenuous, with one of the branches of Macquarie Bank. I don't know the nature of the relationship, but I don't believe it is getting in the way of Peter's objectivity."

Following the meeting, DeCaprio issued his own statement to the Mariner via email:

"I have no relationship with Aquarion except for being a customer, like everyone else in North Cohasset not on well water.

"Macquarie Bank is an international bank with $174 billion in assets. It owns a 55 percent interest in Aquarion, with the remainder of Aquarion controlled by the British Columbia provincial investment fund. My firm's relationship with a minor subsidiary of Macquarie was through a series of investment partnerships. The Macquarie entity that invested in my firm in 2006 had approximately $200 million in total assets, representing one tenth of one percent of Macquarie's total assets. Macquarie's investment in my company was less than $15 million, which is less than one one-thousandth of one percent of Macquarie's total assets. The partnership through which Macquarie invested in us was closed in late 2009. We have been a private, employee-owned partnership since early 2011."

DeCaprio also shared the following statement from the water department's counsel:

"The Town Manager has questioned the authority of the Water Commissioners to contract with Special Counsel to assist with their management of the Water Department. Here again, the Special Act controls. While the Town's bylaws vest the Selectmen with the authority to appoint Town Counsel, the Special Act expressly vests the Water Commissioners with the authority to enter into contracts for their exclusive operation of the Water Department. In that the Town Bylaws must yield to the Special Act, it is my opinion that the Water Commissioners are authorized to enter into contracts for any variety of professional services including Special Counsel services. Viewed another way, the Special Act was created to establish Water Commissioners that would have exclusive control of the vital function of the Water Department, free from the political winds of Town government.

"At present, there appears to be an unfortunate (but hopefully resolvable) rift between the Water Commissioners and the Town Manager regarding the operation of the Water Department. In such an instance, the Special Act operates to ensure that the Water Commissioners have the requisite powers and authority to retain such professionals as will enable them to continue delivering water to the water customers of the Town of Cohasset."

Town attorney Paul DeRensis issued a statement as well. In response to the Talerman memorandum, town counsel will not change its August 2011 ruling that stated, "the vote amending the Water Enterprise Fund calls for the Board of Water Commissioners... and the Town Manager to collaborate in overseeing the finances of the Water Enterprise Fund, empowering the Town Manager to share with the Water Commission oversight of all expenditures made from the Water Enterprise Fund, but not general management activities of the Water Department."

Town counsel's memo lists several reasons why they stand by their August ruling, yet seems to agree with the Talerman memo that there is a rift between the Water Commission and Town Manager.

The memorandum states, "...we take note that there exists a breakdown in the normal collaborative process between public officials and a number of communication issues between the Town Manager and the Water Commissioners that at this point in time go far beyond legal issues. To the extent that these issues continue between these two Cohasset institutions, the solution is not in 'lawyering-up' with legal opinions, but rather the solution lies in presenting the issues to the voters of the town for the people of the town to decide themselves."

Some answers have been uncovered, but the matter seems far from over. The selectmen chair said the matter will be on the next agenda, and the water commission and their counsel will all be invited to attend.

As Tuesday night's meeting wrapped around 11 p.m., Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she was sad to see an argument between the selectmen, town manager and town boards.

"We have a water commissioner who has been working his tail off... [but] we haven't been working together," said Kennedy. "I'm sick of it. This is a small town... we're all neighbors and friends and should work together."

CPC UPDATE

Fire museum still a work in progress

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

It is back to the drawing board for the proposal to restore, renovate and enlarge the garage behind Town Hall and turn it into a fire museum housing two antique hand-tub pumpers.

Proponents of the project appeared before the Community Preservation Committee on Monday hoping to get approval for $185,000 in community preservation funds for the project.

While the CPC universally liked the concept of a fire and police museum — as did Selectmen when they heard about the project earlier this month — members could not find a way to pay for it using the guidelines of the Community Preservation Act, which allows funding for historic restoration but not for expansion or recreating a historic structure out of context. The proposed museum would display the two pumpers and other artifacts and be leased by the Cohasset Historical Society.

The proposed building renovation that would cost an estimated $200,000 would involve two garages, a bell tower and plenty of windows for viewing. Glenn Pratt, Merle Brown and Fire Chief Bob Silvia presented the proposal to the CPC with the request for $185,000 in preservation funding.

Currently the two hand-tub pumpers, the fully restored Konohasset, and the Independence, which is in need of restoration, are being stored on a private garage where the public cannot appreciate them.

"It is a shame to keep them in a garage where no one can see them, especially the kids," Brown said.

Pratt explained that plans would be to try to replicate the old fire station that used to be at the cove in the harbor but with plenty of windows to allow for viewing of the two antique engines. Space would also be provided in the garage to store equipment for the Farmers Market that uses the existing Town Hall garage for storage.

CPA funds

■ The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.

■ CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

■ The Community Preservation Committee reviews proposals and recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation. Town Meeting voters have the final say.

"It is a shame to keep them in a garage where no one can see them, especially the kids."
Merle Brown, project proponent

"We are hoping this would fall under historic preservation," Pratt said. Historic preservation, open space and affordable housing are the three main areas where preservation funds can be used.

CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti questioned the historic nature of the plans.

"What the historical significance of the building was apart from the fact it had been there a long time?" he asked.

Bonetti even offered to volunteer his time to help build the museum but explained that the CPC had defined guidelines to follow under the Community Preservation Act and plans for the museum might not pass muster.

Pratt asked if actually replicating an older structure - like the Beechwood Firehouse (that was moved years ago to Clapp Road in Scituate) — would qualify if it were built behind town hall.

But CPC member Todd Goff explained that the surroundings of a structure are critically important and it cannot be built out of context without those surroundings and qualify.

Unfortunately the spot where the Beechwood firehouse once stood is now the basketball court at the Beechwood Ball Park — a fact the ruled out replicating the building there.

Goff also said he did not believe the garage behind Town Hall was a contributing resource to the Cohasset Common Historic District. The Cohasset Common area is on the National Register of Historic Places.

At one point during the lengthy back-and-forth discussion that attempted to explore potential ways to have the building plans qualify as historic preservation — Pratt asked if restoring the Impendence pumper would qualify.

Bonetti responded favorably saying "there is no question about the historical significance of that."

The museum proponents ultimately agreed to withdraw their proposal until it could be explored further. They indicated they would be back in time for next fall's town meeting looking for, at the very least, funds to restore the Independence pumper.

COMMENTARY

Sticking up for DeCaprio

TED CARR

I have read with great interest many commentaries in the Mariner and on the Internet about opinion and heated debate in our public process. The debate is heated; many ask important questions, all with the hope of helping our beautiful town get back on track for a positive future. Recently there have been several experiences where misleading information and personal attack has entered the dialog. I feel there should be no place for this kind of discussion in our public process.

As a member of the Board of Selectman we discuss issues every week that affect all of us in town, we may not always agree, but we are always courteous and respectful in our discussion. I want to recognize everyone who serves in town government; from our terrific new town manager, the employees of the town and all of the dedicated persons who serve on town boards and commissions, all of whom choose public service to help their community. I want to thank them for their continued commitment to Cohasset during difficult times.

I especially want to recognize one individual who has come under considerable personal attack recently, Water Commissioner and Chairman Peter DeCaprio.

I especially want to recognize one individual who has come under considerable personal attack recently, Water Commissioner and Chairman Peter DeCaprio. Due to the nature of his work and his career He has become an expert in the management and finances of public utilities all across North America; it is this expertise that has brought him to the forefront of serving our water department. The personal attacks he has endured are unfounded, and in my opinion lack merit. Having an expert at the helm should be a skill set we should all embrace and not unnecessarily challenge.

All of us serving in public service have been working very hard for some time to help Cohasset government get back on track. I encourage everyone to stay involved or get involved in your community. This will help our town to remain the amazing place to live and work that drew us all here in the first place.

health. I believe this information is coming but it will take another 6 months to have reliable information. If you note every time we think we are almost there a new issue arises: November Town Meeting voting to pay water deficit for 2011 out of the 2012 budget, questions arising in the sewer department as to the proper allocation of expenditures, and so on. This will continue until we have timely and accurate information (The Water Department deficit for 2011 was caused by unpaid water bills of $400,000 at the end of the 2011 Fiscal Year. This happened because the Town Finance Department has not been able to provide an accurate receivables list of those in arrears.)

I have watched as we add new positions to the Town, new services, and act as we have tons of extra dollars to spend. A quick review of the Dec. 31, 2012 expenses vs. budget show a number of areas where we have spent more than 50 percent of the budget allocation and if allowed to continue will show a substantial deficit at year-end. I must assume that the figures are accurate and we will not later come back and say they were wrong. But HOW DOES ANYONE KNOW??? In my mind this is irresponsible and all of us as taxpayers will suffer down the road when and if we have to "bail out" these actions.

It is time to stop, wait until we really know where we are, develop a long-range budget plan, and then move forward.

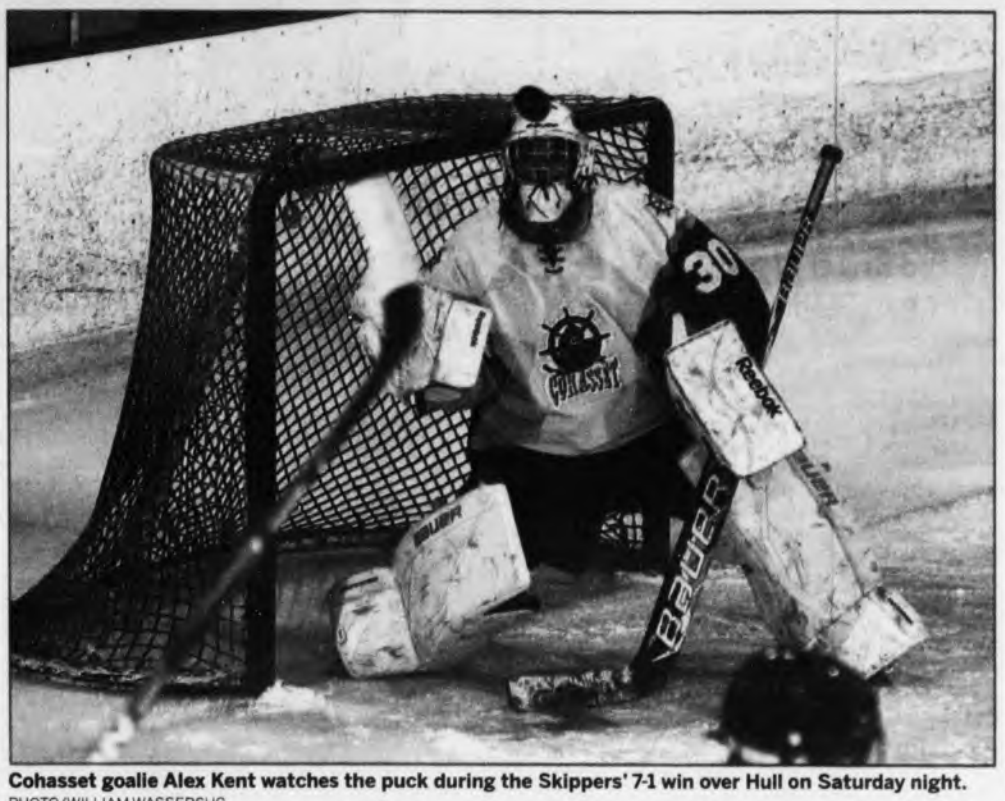
Pucksters need one point for tourney berth

GateHouse News Service

Cohasset moved one step closer to a tournament berth with a strong victory against Hull on Saturday night. Coming off a 12-day break, it was clear to see that the Skippers were chomping at the bit to play a game and pity the opponent they were to face.



This week, the Hull Pirates were the target with Cohasset outshooting the Pirates 23-11, scoring 7 goals in a 7-1 victory at Weymouth's Connell Rink.

"It felt like we hadn't played in a couple of months," remarked senior captain, Alex Evans. "We were ready".

"We had a great pregame practice on Friday," said coach Bob Walsh, "The boys are all healthy and the chemistry on the team is exactly where a coach wants it to be. The boys are playing there best for each other."

For the Skippers, the scoring started just 2:17 into the game when sophomore Tommy O'Brien scored, assisted by senior captain Alex Evans.

Injuries forging extra toughness for young team

Younger players getting firsthand playing experience

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The 2011-2012 season might earn the Cohasset girls basketball team a degree in medicine as the team has gone through some tough times with injuries in the first two months of the season.

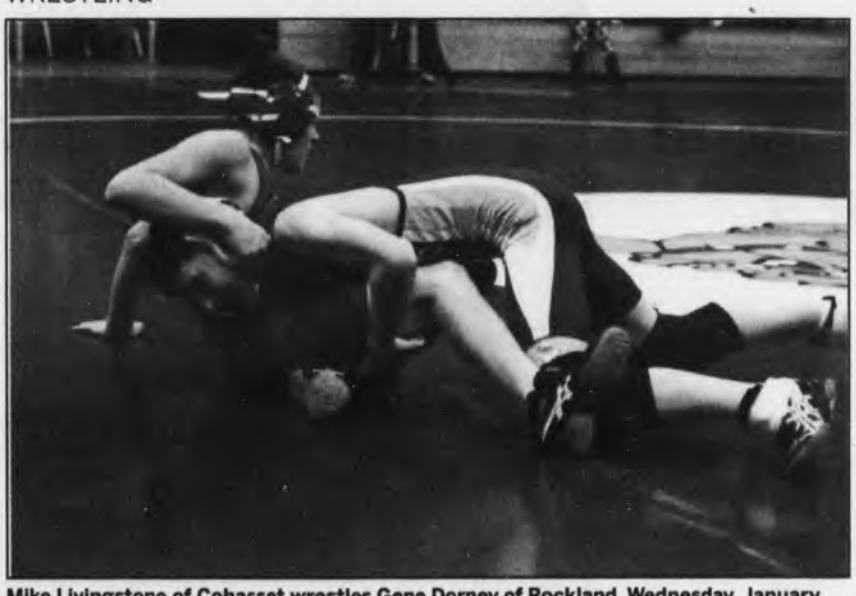
"We have got three starters that have been out all year," said Cohasset coach John LeVangie. "We have had a couple of other players that have been out. The girls are fighting pretty hard, but you can't afford to have 6-1 and 6-0 girls out of your lineup."

The Skippers had a battle with Hull, a 49-47 overtime loss to defending Div. 4 champion Hull, on Tuesday. Hull took a 49-40 lead with one minute left in overtime before Cohasset rallied late.

Isabel Robinson and Kristen Alexander each scored 13 points for Cohasset.

Cohasset faces Rockland on Friday, then has a week off before they play Harwich.

Cohasset had a tough time against Norwell as in its second meeting with the Clippers they fell 48-24.



LeVangie feels that his young players have benefitted from the injuries and got to learn about varsity basketball.

"We are playing three freshmen and a sophomore," said LeVangie. "The girls are playing well. The seniors that are in the lineup are playing really hard and hoping that we get some of the other players back." This has been great for the freshmen. They are learning what the speed of the varsity game. They learned that the games are not easy."

LeVangie is pleased with

Wrestlers prepare for Tournament season

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

As the Cohasset wrestling team headed toward Carver for their final dual meet of the season, the Skippers found themselves stuck in traffic, and coach Torin Sweeney found a moment to chat about the season, which ended last night with a 33-22 Cohasset win that improved the Skippers to 18-8 for the season.

In the win, Greg Berburi won by pin at 115, and Sam Murphy was a winner at 145 for Cohasset (18-8, 6-2).

Now comes the big part of the season, where individuals get their moment on the big stage (or would you say big mat).

Saturday, Cohasset will head to Pembroke for the Div. 3 Individual South Sectional Tournament.

"We're a little bumped and bruised," Sweeney said. "But we've been trying for a good week of practice to get up for Saturday."

Sweeney has a number of wrestlers he feels can do big things over the next few weeks.

One of the starting points is senior, Gus Helbock.

Making the grade

Skippers qualify for Tournament

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys basketball is back in the MIAA Tournament for the third time in four years.

The Skippers earned the invitation on Tuesday night with a 63-24 win over Hull.

"It was a good offensive effort and a good defensive effort," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero said.

The win improved Cohasset to 10-4, 8-2 in the South Shore League.

Cohasset jumped to an early lead, taking a 16-4 advantage after the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Cohasset kept the press on and extended the lead to 34-10 at the half.

"The press set the tone for the game," Ruggiero said. "Hull was undermanned .

In the second half, Cohasset switched to a man defense and rolled to an 18-6 frame while using the bench liberally.

"We had five guys in the scoring column," Ruggiero said. "Ten of 12 scored.

Kyrel Jaundoo led the scoring with 18 points.

Shan Haggerty added 14 in limited action and Chris Murphy had 11.

Robbie Mahoney pulled in 11 rebounds.

"We were on our game. We dominated the tempo," Ruggiero said.

Sunday, Cohasset won what has become a pretty big rivalry game, knocking off Mashpee 65-36 at home in a game that had been rescheduled.

Haggerty had 15 points, including an outstanding 9-11 from the free throw lin.

Mahoney notched a double-double with 10 points and 10 boards.

"We had an opportunity to clear the bench," Ruggiero said. "In both games our full court press took a toll on the opponent."

As for the success, Ruggiero gave the players all the credit,

"Kids are in the right places," he said. "It's energy, enthusiasm and effort. If you play well with the three E's, you win. It's all fundamentals."

Cohasset is at Rockland tonight, looking for payback. The Bulldogs were one of Cohasset's losses.

The next home game is Harwich, Feb. 10 at 6:30 p.m.

Lehr's shining

Cohasset girls basketball stars Tori Lehr and Sammi Lehr were busy last Saturday, both with big games at the next level.

Tori played 28 minutes for the St. Anselm's women's basketball team on Saturday against Adelphi and made it count with a career-high 16 points and four rebounds in a one-point win.

She added an 11-point effort in a 52-45 upset of No. 20 Assumption Jan. 14 and is averaging 6 points per game.

Sammi has averaged 19.6 minutes and 4.8 points per game for Colby-Sawyer College this season.

In recent action, Colby Sawyer hosted Johnson State, scoring an 89-58 blowout win.

Sammi played 15 minutes in the victory.

Season getting closer

The 2012 Cohasset Lacrosse season is Around the Corner...

We are taking registrations for girls and boys in grades 1 through 8 for the spring lacrosse season.

This year will be the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters 17th year.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse (CYL) is the primary organizing body for spring lacrosse instruction, league play and for supporting the woman's and men's Cohasset Varsity Lacrosse program through fundraising and organizing events. The program is run by volunteers and by coaches who strive to promote a love for the game with a focus on providing a positive, encouraging experience for every player.

Teams are separated by grade and our U9 youth clinics are for first and second graders.

Indoor pre-season training begins on the weekend of March 17 and the regular season runs from April 1 to early June.

There will be a number of preseason and spring training opportunities and we will inform you as they become available.

This year we will be working with the Cohasset High School coaching staff to coordinate our training and game strategy methods for our middle school age players. For the middle school age players we will also provide specialized, position-specific instruction by Cohasset High Varsity players and professional coaches.

We will take full advantage of Alumni field this year with a new feature for eighth grade boys and selected girls teams: "Friday Night Lights" program.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse games are on weekends with practices usually run in late afternoons through the week.

So what else do you need to know?

Register for the season by following the registration tab at www.cohassetlacrosse.com .

Contact Chris Arnold (coarnold@comcast.net) for questions about the boys program and David Burke (dburke@mpcprinting.com) on girls related questions.

the way that his team continues to fight and work.

"The way that the girls come to practice and are ready to go," he said. "The way that they are focused. We found a way to beat Carver and we have found a way to compete in each game. We have not been in only one game and that was with Abington. We were down eight points in the second half and did not shoot well."

The Skippers, after their 49-15 loss to Abington bounced back to defeat Carver, 47-37. They had a balanced attack in the win.

Cohasset point-guard Sage Stebbins led them with 13 points. Izzy Robinson added 11 points and Anna Serakis had 10 in the win over Carver.

"Our captains," said LeVangie. "Anna Serakis and Ally Fallon have been playing well and they have done a good job in making sure that the underclassmen have fit it. Sage Stebbins, Izzy Robinson and Kaye Slamp are all playing well."

Cohasset is going to see how they will progress on the court in the month of February as they go through its South Shore League schedule the second time. They are also hoping that they can get some of the walking wounded back in the process.

WRESTLING

Helbock picked up his 100th career victory last Saturday when he went 4-0 in a meet with Bristol-Plymouth, Bristol Aggie, Tri-County and Southeastern.

As a team, Cohasset beat Bristol Plymouth (48-22) and Bristol Aggie (36-21), while losing to Tri-County (48-18) and Southeastern (36-33).

They followed that win with a 31-28 win over a Boston Latin squad that had come off a big weekend where they beat Chelmsford and Central Catholic.

"We had Graden Foley out of action due to an injury so we needed a great team effort," Sweeney said of the Boston Latin win. "Harry Helbock, Greg Berube and freshman Brett Dooley got us started with three wins. Dooley tied his match with seconds to go and then won in overtime."

Gus Helbock beat his opponent then Cohasset lost twice before Derek and Matt Froio both beat their opponents by points. Steve Maher and Mike Livingstone provided wins sandwiched between two Cohasset losses and Matt Froio also had a win.

The match was tied at 28 going into Heavyweight and Freshman Mike Yerardi stepedp up with 3-1 win" to clinch the meet for Cohasset.

As for the next few weeks, Helbock is obviously a threat to go deep in the postseason., while Harry Helbock also has 20 wins this season.

Berube has come on strong the second half, winning 10 of his last 12 matches.

Joe Sestito finished around .500 at 128.

Graden Foley is solid as is Axel Sepella at 138.

Derek Froio, who is single-digits away from his 100th win, should do well. He has 20 wins to lean on.

Senior Chris Brash missed last year with an injury, but the captain has come on this year and wrestled at about a .500 pace in one of the tougher divisions (170).

"Derek was hurt halfway through his freshman year," Sweeney said. "I'd say he missed out on between five and 10 wins. There's 100."

Sophomore Stephen Maher has more than 15 wins this season and could put together a postseason run at 182, and at 195, Mike Livingstone has been building consistency all season.

"Mike has 15 wins," Sweeney said. "Some of those wins have been big ones."

At 220, Zach Washak has wrestled well all season, but has picked up his pace toward the end of the year.

Yerardi should be a top seed. He was over the 20-win mark this season.

Sectionals start Saturday at Pembroke, followed by the Div. 3 State Tournament and All-States.

HOCKEY

Cohasset players celebrate a goal on Saturday night against Hull. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

"The play happened so quickly as it often happens with him, (O'Brien). Tommy is arguably the fastest player I've ever coached at this school. We were in the middle of a line change when "Tommy Gun" jumped on the ice and saw Alex driving the net," said the coach. "Alex took a hard shot close up to goalie Matt Farrell giving a fat rebound. Tommy flew to the loose puck and beat Farrell as he tried to get back in position. I knew it was going to be one of those nights for us after that."

Cohasset's passing was spot one, hitting the open man almost every time; and when they missed the open man the Skippers filled in and regained possession of the puck.

The second goal came about halfway through the period. This time Alex Evans did score assisted by senior captain, defenseman Sean McKenna.

Cohasset's third goal of the period came at 11:05 of the period when junior assistant captain Connor Goetz passed to Tommy O'Brien who snipped a top corner on Farrell once again. The two players combined again for goal number 4 of the first period. This time it was Tommy O'Brien who assisted Connor Goetz putting Cohasset up 4 - 0 with only 56 seconds in the period.

With one second on the clock, the Pirates finally scored when the Skippers turned the puck over in their own zone. Bobby Spitz passed to Dallas Ditullio who beat Brandon Winn for the goal.

"We made a few mistakes like that during the game but they never really cost us until that time," remarked Walsh. "Turnovers are something we talk about all the time. This time it hurt us. What's more important to me is how my guys respond to that kind of mistake. Earlier in the season, this type of mistake would have cost us two or three more goals because we didn't control our emotions quite as well; but now my boys are more focused on the big picture and supporting one another. We don't let that type of thing take us out of our game."

During the second period, the Skippers, once again dominated play limiting the Pirates to four shots but adding two more goals to their side. The first goal was another strike by Alex Evans assisted by senior captain John Collins.

"JC is one of the best playmakers at the high school level. He's an unselfish player who has 19 assists this season alone," said Walsh. "He's always in the play with or without the puck."

The second goal came with less than two minutes in the period when sophomore Terence Doonan scored off a rebound from a Chris Lund (sophomore defenseman) shot; putting Cohasset up 6-1 at the end of two periods.

In the final frame, Cohasset was once again in control, now with junior goaltender Alex Kent in net, turning away all four shots Hull could get on net.

At 6:19 of the period, Cohasset scored it's last goal of the night with a great play beginning with Sean McKenna shooting just wide of the net, from the blue line. John Collins grabbed the loose puck and made a clean pass to senior assistant captain, Vinny Calorio who was camped out in front of the Pirates net for a well placed shot beating Matt Farrell and tallying the Skippers seventh goal of the night.

"Right now we are 9-3-1 giving us 19 points of the necessary 20 points to make post season play. We feel pretty good about our chances since we have seven games to get that last point," Walsh said.

In addition, according to masshshockey.com, Cohasset is in the top five highest goal scoring teams in the state for Mens Division 3 hockey and we have played one less game than the other four teams. Right now, (excluding the game that Carver-Sacred Heart forfeited to us as a 1-0 game), we're averaging more than 6 goals per game and that puts us as No.1 in the state for division 3.

"Yeah, I'm good with that for now," said coach Walsh.

Cohasset faces off against Rockland on Wednesday night at 7:55 p.m. in the Rockland Ice Arena. "Rockland has always been a tough competitor for us. In our meeting earlier this season, Rockland beat us 6-5 in the closing minutes of the game," Coach Walsh said. "This should be a great game for fans."

LIFE AT CHS

Mr. Skipper contest is just around the corner

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

This week marked the start of second semester. Monday was a crazy-busy day, with all five classes and an advisory period jam-packed into a regular school day. The guidance counselors had their hands full with anxious students trying to switch in and out of classes (so much so that they had to lock the doors to avoid students skipping class to change their schedules around).

Last week, I said that semi was on Friday...about that...after selling a grand total of zero tickets in the days leading up to the dance, it was officially called off. Unfortunately for the senior class, the cancellation of semi means less money for the class, and prom as a result. Mr. Skipper is coming up in March and it is going to be the biggest fundraiser, and is extremely important this year. CHS boys, regardless of your class, YOU SHOULD ALL DO MR. SKIPPER! With more contestants, more people will come, generating more cash for the senior class. Plus, it's hilarious, fun, and extremely entertaining.

Parent ads for the yearbook were due on Tuesday. Send them in ASAP if you want them to be in the yearbook! Articles for the Spinnaker were due this week, and the next issue comes out on Valentine's Day. Make sure to bring your dollar, CHS.

This years' final Peer Leaders workshop was today. Sixth and seventh graders discussed cyberbullying, a growing problem in today's technological world, while eighth graders were talked to about "tough situations" involving prejudice and given advice on what to expect in high school. Thanks to all of the Peer Leaders for an incredible year.

It's hard to believe it, but the regular season for winter sports is wrapping up. The girls' basketball team has been plagued by injuries this season. Six out of the 13 players have been hurt sometime during this season. However, the girls are still hanging on. On Tuesday, they played Hull and lost 49-47 in overtime, despite lacking three starters. Their next game is tonight at home against Rockland, so drop by to support the girls at 6:30 pm! The boys' team won against Hull Tuesday and they will be in Rockland tonight. The swim team had a meet against Hingham on Tuesday. Despite a loss in their last regular season meet, five swimmers made Sectional — congrats! The meet is Saturday the 11th at MIT. As for wrestling, Gus Helbock reached his 100th career win. That's absolutely amazing Gus, congrats. For more sports news, see the Sports Section.

Have a great weekend Cohasset, and enjoy the Super Bowl this Sunday! Go Pats!

P.S. On an irrelevant note, shout out to my girl RD, it feels like spring outside and we all know you're the flyest bird in the nest.

MCAS is topic at Tuesday meeting

Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Counsel (SEPAC) is pleased to host "MCAS – Access and Achievement for Students with Disabilities" presented by Clare Vann, attorney and speaker for the Federation for Children with Special Needs. The meeting will be held at the Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, Feb. 7th, at 7 pm. Please feel free to gather with refreshments and speak with the SEPAC board. Vann will begin her presentation at 7:30 p.m..

The Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) is a key strategy for improving education in Massachusetts. It is a way to ensure high standards for students and holds schools accountable for student progress. This workshop explains the reasons why we have this statewide testing system and how it is currently being implemented. Parents examine sample MCAS questions and responses and explore supports and resources available for helping students improve their performance. Federation for Children with Special Needs (FCSN) will be presenting the information, supports and resources that families may use to help their child improve their scores.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for all parents to learn more about the MCAS and how they can help their children," says Diane Herth, President, Cohasset SEPAC.

"Clare Vann is a special education attorney in private practice representing parents in their efforts to get the special education services and programs their children need," Herth said. " She began working in the field of special education law in 1981 as a volunteer at the Federation for Children with Special Needs, where she was quickly hired to help teach special education advocacy courses and to train parents in their rights under special education law. She frequently conducts workshops on special education law on behalf of the Federation, and is presently writing a guide on transition services and issues for the Federation. Ms. Vann has been an attorney since 1986, and has an outstanding track record in her cases."

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit: www.cohassetsepac.org

Light refreshments will be available. The meeting free and open to the public.

COHASSET PSO PRESENTS

Social media and our teens

The Cohasset PSO invites you to an informative evening: Social Media and Teens – What you need to know in 2012. Today, the Internet is no longer confined to the computer; it's on smartphones, iPads, iTouches, xBoxes, and Kindles. In addition, data plans plus free Wi-Fi means accessibility is nearly universal and it's affecting our kids in a number of ways beyond the headline grabbing stalking, sexting and bullying. This event is Thursday (Feb. 9th) from 7-8:30 at the Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium.

Social media marketing consultant, and Cohasset resident, Diane K. Danielson of DKD New Media Strategies LLC (http://DKDNewMedia.com) will conduct a presentation on social media and teens and what parents need to know in order to have meaningful conversations about technology. Diane's research and expertise on this topic stems from her work on behalf of companies that specifically market to teens online as well as from being a parent.

Diane will focus on recent trends in teen use of technology including smartphones, Facebook and Twitter and suggestions on how parents can mentor, monitor and mediate as needed.

The following topics will be covered:

- Cyberstalking — Which kids are more likely to be targeted? It's not always who you think.
- Sexting — What it is, and why smartphones have made this even more prevalent.
- Cyberbullying — It's not just about Facebook anymore. Twitter is the new playground.
- Inappropriate Sharing —What kids are posting online can hurt themselves (stalking, sexting, college admissions) and their friends and family (social host laws).
- . Anti-social commentary — Locker room conversations are now in the public domain. Racist, misogynistic and other comments on social media and video games can affect even those kids who are passive participants.
- . Emotional Stress — Facebook can cause depression in adults, what can it do to impressionable teens who are constantly trying to measure up to impossible standards of "coolness?"
- Physical Stress — The constant texting is now 24/7 even during school hours and throughout the night. This is not only changing how our kids' brains work; but how it's physically exhausting them.

Quilt Show and Luncheon March 3

Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will host its 18th benefit Quilt Show and Luncheon from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, March 3. The sanctuary will come alive with more than 60 quilts draped over the pews. Each has a story to tell and maybe even a few secrets to share. Tickets include a luncheon, served by the all-male wait staff, which will feature a choice of entrees, and topped off by a variety of desserts.

Tickets are available for $15, by calling Second Congregational Church at 781-383-0345 or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with a check. Reservations for groups of four or more will be accepted for specific luncheon seatings by contacting the church. All proceeds will benefit The Spark Center in Mattapan, serving some of Boston's most high risk children: Those living with complicated medical conditions as well as those with family or social concerns.

The entire event is handicap accessible.

GIMME SHELTER

Lexi is looking for love

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Lexi. Lexi is a 4-year-old, grey-and-white, shorthair female who was surrendered to the shelter due to the unfortunate circumstances of her former owner. She's a good-natured feline who enjoys human companionship. She is not accustomed to being with other cats and has taken to cuddling up in a little cubby on the top shelf. Lexi is hoping that someone will come in and say "Who's that lovely cat sitting on the top shelf?"

She would love to be in a home where she's the only cat. If you're looking for that special friend who will always be there waiting for you, please come and meet Lexi.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. This is also a good time to purchase the 2012 Kittendales Calendar, which is also available online.

If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 13, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You don't like rejection. But instead of trying to "ram" your ideas through to an unreceptive audience, stand back and wait for a more favorable environment later this month.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Job commitments call for the tidy Taurean to charge into those problem-plagued projects and get them into shape. Then go ahead and enjoy the fun and friendships of your expanding social life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) The pressures of the workplace are beginning to ease. While you still need to stay connected to your ongoing commitments, you'll be able to take more time to relax with family and friends.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel that you need to prove how much you can do. But be careful not to take on more than you can handle, or you risk being bogged down. An Aries has a message for you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Financially it could be a little tight for a while. So resist the urge to splurge on things you don't really need. There will be time enough to indulge yourself when the money squeeze eases later this month.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You demand trust from others. But someone is creating a situation that could put your own trustworthiness in question. Be sure to keep all lines of communication open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A problem delays the recognition that you hoped to receive for your hard work. But all will soon be resolved. Remember to make patience your watchword this week.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Those wonderful ideas could expand your workplace prospects and ultimately lead you on a new career path. Your personal life also opens up new vistas.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) So much seems to be swirling around you these days that you might find it hard to focus on priorities. Best advice: Take things one at a time, and you'll get through them all.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Work out situations with what you have, and avoid the temptation to create complications where they don't exist. This applies both at home and in the workplace.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Keep your keen senses open to possible changes in personal and/or professional situations. Knowing what might lie ahead gives you an edge on how to handle it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Personal pressures at work could create a problem with your performance. Best advice: Focus on the job ahead of you. If necessary, you can deal with the other issue later.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Like your fellow Aquarian Abraham Lincoln, you have a way of handling the most difficult situations with grace and conviction.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Lecture series at Glastonbury

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: "Without a Vision the People Perish: Why a Religious Tradition?" will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Feb. 9. Mark S. Burrows will present a lecture titled "The Mystical Way: Windows Toward a More Inclusive World."

Burrows, ordained minister, theology professor and writer, will explore "the mystical way" rooted in Jesus' teachings and shaped in the writings of later theologians and visionaries. He will speak to how this mystical way is both the soul of Christian life and a way of convergence with those of other religious traditions. A way of inclusion and reconciliation, of peacemaking and justice-serving, it is described by poets as a mystical vision, a way of seeing and "penetrating beyond explanations" that places us "on the threshold of heaven" in daily living. Burrows, an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ, and professor at Andover Newton Theological Seminary, has written numerous books and many articles on topics related to mysticism, spirituality and poetics.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Reservations will not be taken. Seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, visit the website at glastonburyabbey.org.

VFW to issue monthly newsletter

The VFW Post voted recently to begin to develop a monthly newsletter, to be sent out to members of all services and their dependents who currently reside in Cohasset.

The purpose of our newsletter is to inform and find a way to reach out to families and to invite them to communicate to any member of the Post, who they are, a local mailing address, members of their families who are enrolled in our various local schools.

However, our main goal is to establish a lifeline of mutual respect, and to thank them for their service to our country, which we do not do often enough. Secondly, to make them aware that the VFW is a service organization who truly wants each service member – active and reserves – and their spouses and children to know who we are, where we are located and to inform them of our monthly meeting schedule, and to again invite them to come and let us get to know one another.

Becoming a member is not a priority, because we simply want to support our veterans through conversation, and listening and camaraderie.

To reach us is easy, just call: Commander Ralph Perroncello at 781-383-0879; Vice Commander Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079; or Adjunct Ed Graham at 781-383-9324; or email esgraham34@aol.com.

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Polar Plunge set for March 3

March Madness starts early, on Saturday, March 3, this year. It's the 14th Polar Plunge (formerly Passion Plunge) for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA). If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it. There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Last year, close to 1,000 plungers jumped into the Atlantic Ocean, about half at Nantasket. They raised $360,000 for SOMA (8 percent of the annual budget). Since athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are vitally important in providing year round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for our 13,000 athletes statewide. They range in age from 2 (Young Athletes Program) to 86 (Senior Sports).

In addition to sports training and competition, these donations support Special Olympics' now worldwide "Healthy Athletes" Program," founded here in Massachusetts in 1994, providing free screening in medical and dental issues for our athletes. Of 1,068 athletes screened in 2011, 173 were referred for treatment, including one sent directly to the hospital after finding he'd recently had a heart attack. The joint-ventures with UMass Medical School and Regis College train med students, residents, nurses, and doctors in working with people with Intellectual Disabilities, which will lead to quality healthcare for a host of others with ID in the future.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 12th time, is a 12 sport-athlete, and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which will include Cohasset plungers: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Bill Greentree, Steve Myers, Maria Osborne, Jeff Nothnagle (past Board Chair), Graham, Nick, and Charlotte Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus many from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program, which has 100 athletes from age 6 to 71 from seven area towns.

The public is invited to Nantasket Beach on Saturday, March 3, to support the athletes with a pledge. You can do this with a check to your favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or on-line at www.PolarPlungeMA.org, where you can also register to plunge

BOARD OF SELECTMEN

Exec session held on TM contract

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town Manager Mike Coughlin's employment with the town was the subject of an executive session Tuesday night following the Selectmen's open meeting.

Under the Open Meeting Law, executive sessions, which are permitted for personnel matters, exclude the public. Tuesday night, selectmen sent the recording secretary home and met with Town Counsel Paul DeRensis behind closed doors.

Coughlin has been Cohasset's town manager for six months; his first day in office was August 1. Since then, he has made controversial decisions, such as approving the police department's K9 unit without selectmen approval and restructuring departments in town, exerting himself as joint manager of water and sewer.

The selectmen at first applauded Coughlin at his first meeting with the board, saying they were looking for a town manager to "shake things up" in Cohasset. Selectman Diane Kennedy noted at the time that Coughlin had "hit the ground running," and she was impressed.

When Coughlin asked Carr which non-union employee, the chairman responded, "At least you, and we're considering one other person."

Now, Coughlin told the Mariner that he wonders why the selectmen will no longer support the town manager they chose to appoint.

Board of Selectmen actually held two executive sessions; one before and after Tuesday night's open meeting. The first session, held at 6:30 p.m., pertained to exemption three of the Open Meeting Law (to discuss strategy with respect to collective bargaining or litigation). However, the second session, held following a five-minute break when the public meeting wrapped around 9 p.m., did not have a reason stated on the night's agenda.

But when the board agreed to take a break after the open meeting and reconvene in executive session, selectmen chairman Ted Carr said that it was pertaining to exemption two: "to conduct strategy sessions in

Plenty of eclectic shops and characters

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Village may be small — some might say "quaint" — but it houses such a wide array of shops and local businesses, locals don't have to venture far to find fitness centers, health food stores, clothing boutiques, veterinarians or the perfect cup of caffeine.

While plenty of businesses are housed right in the center of town, there are a few more curiosities located on the other side of the Greenbush tracks.

WATER DEPT.

Legal counsel allowed

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday night to approve the Water Commission's hiring of its own legal counsel. This issue was a hot topic during last week's selectmen meeting, when both the Town Manager and Selectmen chairman raised questions about a possible conflict of interest.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr told the water commission last week that the board of selectmen retains the right to hire any legal counsel in town, and that the water department should have brought the outside hiring to the board's attention sooner. There was also concern because the water commission chairman had formerly retained the same law firm for a personal matter. Tuesday night, the hired counsel was present, and the board sat ready to hear their presentation and consider approving the hire.

All three water commissioners – chairman Peter DeCaprio, Leonora Jenkins and Chris Seebeck – were present Tuesday night, along with

MARCH 1 DEADLINE

Applying for mosquito pesticide exclusion

What
The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project that includes Cohasset understands that there are some individuals who want to have their property legally excluded from the pesticide applications used in mosquito control. As a result, the Project would like to inform those individuals with the steps necessary to make such a request, as specified by Massachusetts Department of Agricultural Resources regulations.

How
Such application is made by a person living on, or legally in control of the property. The application must be sent in the form of a certified letter to the municipal clerk's office by March 1st (annually).

- Include the name, address, and telephone number of the person making the request.
- Include the address of the property to be excluded.
- Include a description of the types of pesticide application programs for which exclusion is requested.

More
Additionally, the person requesting the exclusion has the responsibility to mark the boundaries or areas to be excluded at least every 50 feet with orange surveyor's tape to clearly define the area of exclusion. These markings shall be made known to the Project and the Project will be responsible for communicating the details of the markings to the individuals who will carry out the pesticide applications.

Questions
While the application is sent to the municipal clerk's office, it is important to understand that the role of clerk's office in this process is simply to be the recipient of the certified letter. All questions concerning these regulations should be directed to the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project at 781-585-5450 or the board of health. Additionally, the Project has a link on its website (under Our Program) that will allow individuals to fully read 333 CMR: MA Pesticide Board Standards for Application.

Route 3A accident snarls traffic

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 3:15 p.m. Tuesday (Feb. 7) police responded to a two-car accident at Sohier Street and Route 3A. Police said a 2010 Chevrolet Traverse, operated by an 82-year-old Cohasset man, was attempting to make a left-hand turn out of Sohier Street when the Chevy broadsided a 1991 Audi, operated a 34-year-old Cohasset man. Both vehicles had to be towed and the traffic on Route 3A was snarled for about 30 minutes, police said.

The fire department had to use the Jaws of Life to extricate the operator of the Audi, who was taken to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said. Both vehicles were towed. The operator of the Chevy was cited for failure to yield. The Audi was headed south when the accident occurred.

Red light

At 12:17 p.m. on Monday (Jan. 30), there was a two-car accident at the intersection of Beechwood Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A).

Police said a 2005 Ford Escape, operated by a 77-year-old Cohasset man, was coming up Beechwood (from the direction of S. Main Street) and ran the red light at the intersection, broadsiding a 1996 Jeep Cherokee, operated by a 51-year-old Weymouth man, who was headed south toward Scituate. Neither operator was injured but a 72-year-old female passenger in the Ford was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

The Ford had to be towed but the Jeep was drivable. The 77-year-old was cited for not stopping at the red light, police said.

Hit a tree

After the Super Bowl at 10:11 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 4), police said a 17-year-old Cohasset boy in a 2006 Land Rover was headed south on Jerusalem Road and went off the road into a tree at the bad corner near 260 Jerusalem Road. There were two passengers in the vehicle, a 17-year-old boy and 16-year-old boy, both from Cohasset. No one was hurt. There was heavy damage to the Land Rover, which had to be towed. The driver was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes and speeding.

Vandalism

A 45-year-old Cohasset man reported to police on Monday (Jan. 30) at about 4:22 p.m. that his 2006 Toyota pickup truck was damaged over the weekend while it was parked at the harbor inn. Police said the truck had a white paint-like substance on it that could be washed off.

Marijuana

An 18-year-old Cohasset woman is facing charges of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and with a drug violation in a school zone because she was within 1,000 feet of a school, following a report of erratic driving last Monday (Jan. 30) at around 6:30 p.m. A cell caller notified police about an erratic driver on N. Main Street in a 2008 Jeep that was all over the road. The caller followed the Jeep to the top of Norfolk Road at Milliken Field. Police found the Jeep parked there and when they approached could smell raw marijuana. There was marijuana in plain sight and appeared to be packaged for sale, police said. They also found $228 in cash and a digital scale.

Unlicensed

A 16-year-old boy is being summonsed to court as the result of a traffic stop for speeding on Tuesday (Jan. 31) at 1:54 a.m. near Atlantic Avenue and Nichols Road, police said. Officers stopped a 2003 Dodge Caravan with a 16-year-old male operator who did not have a driver s license or a learner's permit, and had apparently taken the minivan without permission. There were five teens in all in the vehicle, all from Hingham. The vehicle was towed and the boys were all taken to the station where their parents picked them up.

Dog complaint

Police referred a complaint received at 4:43 p.m. on Tuesday (Jan. 31) from a runner to the animal control officer. The woman explained that two pugs had chased her during two different runs and that one had tried to bite her.

Commuter boat fans speak up

MBTA official visits Hingham boat dock

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

"The commuter boat is integral to the success of this development."
Tod McGrath, Shipyard resident

If acting general manager of the MBTA Jonathan R. Davis wanted to hear a sales pitch on the importance of the commuter boat – then he went to the right place on Friday (Feb. 3).

Despite the uncharacteristic bitter cold and sharp wind for this otherwise balmy winter, local and state officials along with developers and yes, boat commuters, themselves, grabbed Davis' ear at 7:30 a.m. at Hewitt's Cove at the Hingham Shipyard to give him the hard sell on why the long-time service should not be cutback or eliminated.

Davis and other MBTA officials also got an earful on Wednesday night (Feb. 8) at Hingham Town Hall for one in a series of public hearings on the MBTA proposed cuts and/or fare increases for buses, trains and boats.

Davis stressed over and over again throughout the meet-and-greet at the commuter boat that nothing is definite that all comments and concerns are being taken into consideration.

"But we have some difficult decisions to make because ultimately we have a deficit to fill," he said.

In the sheltered part of the gangway, before heading to the packed, commuter boat named "Salacia," Hingham Selectman Laura Burns pointed out to Davis the commercial and residential parts of the redeveloped Hingham Shipyard that included luxury condos and affordable housing.

"This is smart growth, transit oriented development," Burns said. "This is the transit that it is oriented to."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley told Davis that the commuter boat is not just for "upper economic" folks. "That perception is inaccurate," Bradley said adding the boat attracts hard working people from Weymouth to Duxbury and that the Avalon apartments at the Shipyard include affordable housing.

The 7:45 a.m. boat was packed as Davis boarded for a few minutes before disembarking to hear for commuters themselves.

Al Chambers of Hingham told Davis that he lives in elderly housing and that public transportation is critical to the elderly demographic.

Crystal Farrar of Marshfield, who has commuted on the boat for 15 years, stressed its convenience and reliability. "The commuter boat is typically on time all the time," she said. She said that morning the Red Line was running 20 to 25 minutes behind schedule but "this boat will be on time."

SEE FERRY, 15

In brief

- The MBTA, which has faced criticism about not dealing with its structural financial problems including carrying too much debt making it unable to invest in the upkeep if its existing system, is facing a $161 million deficit in fiscal 2013.
- To fill the gap the MBTA has offered plans to impose sharp fare hikes and cuts to subway, commuter rail, ferry and bus service.
- The MBTA is currently conducting hearings to get feedback before making a decision.
- According to the MBTA Advisory Board, which provides public oversight to the MBTA, service cuts and fare increases would fill the deficit for fiscal year 2013 only.
- Poor performance of the state Sales Tax, the MBTA's largest single source of revenue, has left the MBTA unable to keep up with growing debt service or build cash reserves.
- In a Jan. 18, 2012 letter to the MBTA Advisory Board, Executive Director Paul Regan stated: "You can honestly tell you neighbors and constituents that all this cost and inconvenience buys only 365 days of fiscal solvency."

WEIGHT LOSS: One Stop Shopping

By Elizabeth Johnson

Losing weight is not easy. It takes a comprehensive program, or "One Stop Shopping" so to speak, that includes not only exercise and sensible nutrition, but also change, commitment, support, and time. You're eager to change your behaviors and thoughts, and you know you are committed to the end result. That just leaves two key variables to tackle...support and time.

Where do you find unwavering support and accountability to stick to positive change...and how do you find the time?

First of all, you need to search out and find a way to be held accountable to reaching your goal. Find someone other than yourself to help hold you accountable. Too often we are "professional" goal-setters, but don't know how to celebrate our progress and reframe our setbacks so we are held accountable to the results we want.

This brings you to the second hurdle: time. The reason you haven't seen results before when you tried to lose weight is because you didn't have the right system that maximized your time. You can't possibly follow one plan for exercise, have yet another program for nutrition, and hope to coincidently find enough accountability and support in your pre-existing network of friends and family to get you to your goal. That requires too much to juggle everything.

So...where will you find this "One Stop Shopping?" Where will you find cardio, weight training, supportive nutrition and built-in accountability all under one roof to help you meet your goals while maximizing your time investment? Only at Get In Shape For Women.

"Get In Shape For Women is a transformation studio for women where we offer small group personal training," explains President and CEO Brian Cook. "As opposed to one-on-one training that can feel solitary and repetitive, our group training is dynamic and supportive with 4 women working with a personal trainer towards a common goal of improved health and fitness."

Get In Shape For Women knows that commitment is hard. Feeling empowered to choose a health and fitness program that supports you and respects your time and busy schedule is critical. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4565 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com.

"I had been putting off getting in shape and losing weight for a long time. Having tried many diet and exercise programs that didn't seem to work, I had just about given up. I was getting concerned about my weight because of how it affects your health. Then I walked into Get In Shape For Women. The small size and four to one client to trainer ratio really appealed to me. The trainers are very supportive while motivating you at the same time. Because you are weighed every two weeks you are held accountable for your weight loss. The "one stop shopping" of working out and a healthy eating program at the same place works really well. I am down eleven pounds in just four weeks and feel great!"

attorney Jay Talerman of the firm Blatman, Bobrowski & Mead, which was hired to help the water department draft their request for proposals (RFP) for a new water contract. The water department's current five-year contract with American Water is up this June.

The water commissioners came before the selectmen in December to explain their desire to go out to bid for a concession contract that would transfer the risk of operating the water system to the operator while still allowing the water department to set the town's rates. The commissioners stated that this type of contract would also help the town realize savings.

When Carr asked the water commissioners on Tuesday if they were all in favor of a concession contract, they all stated that they were, with DeCaprio adding that they were also working on a "bailout option" in case the contract is voted down at Town Meeting.

To that end, the water commission chairman said that he wanted as many people as possible to "have a voice in this process," which is why it is important for the contract to go before Town Meeting. DeCaprio said that he would argue that this contract "would be the most vetted in the town's history."

Seebeck agreed: "We don't want to shy away from people... we want them involved in the dialogue of what we're doing."

Carr said he was concerned that the water department had hired outside counsel in order to sue another town department. Talerman called this the "worst possible result," saying that he could not fathom the water department having to do so and that his firm would take pains to avoid that measure.

A question also arose about how long the water department had been using this special counsel. The selectmen, town manager and water commission all confirmed that the firm was retained on Jan. 26, 2012.

When Town Manager Mike Coughlin said that he had "deep concerns" over the process, which he expressed in a memo to the Board of Selectmen, the water commission wanted to know why they had not seen the memo, which was dated Feb. 6.

Coughlin then provided the commissioners and their counsel with a copy, but the group told the town manager that as "chief procurement officer" he should attend their meetings. The town manager said that he had dispatched the head of the Operations Department, Mark Brennan, to attend these meetings. Selectman Fred Koed said that he felt the town manager and selectmen should work directly with the water department and not go through Brennan. DeCaprio meanwhile said he would be happy to work with Brennan.

The town manager said that the "greater issue" at hand was on the management of the water company; Coughlin has previously exerted his authority as joint manager of water and sewer.

Seebeck asked the town manager and selectmen to stay on point, with Talerman adding that they were not there to debate the Special Act.

Talerman called the difference of opinion between the water commissioners and the town manager "water under the bridge."

Unique position

The water commission and Talerman both argue that the Cohasset water company is in a unique position under the Special Act of 1886, which allows them to hire their own legal counsel. The attorney added that his firm is often brought into towns to help resolve interdepartmental legal issues. Both Talerman and DeCaprio said that they meant no disrespect to the town's law firm, Boston-based Deutsch/Williams.

DeCaprio said the water commission wanted to be as "objective as possible" and thus chose the law firm they believed would be "as independent an agent as possible."

Talerman said that his firm would be effective because they would be "betrothed solely" to the water department. "It helps to stay focused" on the matters at hand "without worrying about what other winds may be blowing."

Carr said that it was important "to pull the water department and the rest of the town together."

"How we got here has been a very bumpy road," the selectmen chairman said, "and we're interested in getting onto smooth pavement."

Former selectmen chair Karen Quigley said during the public comment period that she did not believe the water commission and the rest of the town were, in fact, being brought together.

"We've been hearing a lot this evening [that the water commission] is individual and separate," Quigley stated. "Town Meeting voted that there would be co-management. We're not hearing that we're bringing town and water department together but that the water commission is moving themselves further away."

Seebeck responded that the water company is distinct, which is "one of the reasons the enterprise fund exists. The water company is not a department of the town."

Carr said that the board wanted to be proud of its decision to allow the water commission to hire its own counsel, and asked that they all "work collaboratively."

Koed motioned that the board approve the hiring of the law firm and "get the issue off the table."

Seebeck told the Mariner in a phone call Wednesday that he was "happy that we were able to come to a resolution to the issue working with the selectmen."

DeCaprio in his own phone call agreed, saying, "I'm happy to have the counsel we have representing us. I believe they'll be extraordinarily helpful to us and the board in these evaluations because these issues are complex."

In an email statement Wednesday, Carr wrote, "The Board of Selectman remain committed to working in a collaborative manner with the Water Commissioners. We look forward together to presenting to Town Meeting a series of options pertaining to the operation of our most precious resource, the water department."

What's the next step for the RFP? DeCaprio said that it would be issued into the public domain on Feb. 16.

Governing Cohasset

Selectmen-appointed committee vets other boards

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Mission statement

"The mission of the Town of Cohasset Governance Committee is to examine best practices from top performing towns, recommend Town Manager Act and By-Law revisions as necessary, and identify policies and procedures that foster transparent, professional, effective, and accountable governance that are appropriate for Cohasset."

In light of recent happenings around Town Hall concerning boards, committees, finances, and how everything is managed, it seems that Cohasset needs governance now more than ever.

The governance committee has been meeting and discussing best practices and possible solutions since their inaugural meeting on Dec. 15, 2011.

The committee, consisting of members of the former town manager search committee, was approved and charged by the Board of Selectmen to review boards and committees and how they work. Meetings are held bimonthly on Thursdays at 7:30 a.m., and chairman Michael Milanoski attends weekly selectmen meetings to give updates and offer his perspective when the selectmen ask him to weigh in on behalf of the governance committee.

When the selectmen voted to approve this committee this past fall, they also agreed that it would sunset in Dec. 2012. The committee currently has nine members, not including the chairman. These members were also delegated to recruit and appoint up to four more new members, according to board of selectmen chairmanTed Carr.

The selectmen originally tasked the committee with examining best practices for town boards, including the board of selectmen, following last summer's controversial shakeup on the Conservation Commission — when three veteran members' appointments were up for renewal, the selectmen voted 3-2 to unseat the three members and replace them with three newcomers.

A petition signed by 120 Cohasset residents in July asked the selectmen to rescind their decision, reinstate the ousted members, and submit to an ethics review by a committee appointed by troika (a group made up of the Board of Selectmen chair, the Advisory Board chair and a moderator). Selectmen chairman Carr said at the time that it would inappropriate for him to basically review himself.

This led to the creation of the current governance committee in Oct. 2011.

Milanoski, who serves on the ConCom as an associate, non-voting member and acted as chairman of the town manager search committee, was appointed chairman of the governance committee.

The committee was recently given an added responsibility. During the Jan. 2 selectmen meeting, the board asked Milanoski to have the governance committee scrutinize the Town Manager Act, since there are apparent disagreements between the Act and town bylaws as to who actually proposes the town's fiscal year budget.

"What we've found out is that there are some discrepancies between the town manager act and the bylaws," Milanoski said in a phone interview. "Case in point, the bylaws are still written as though the advisory committee sets the annual town budget when in fact that's not the case; the town manager submits the budget, the board of selectmen approve it, and that's what's sent to town meeting... it's one of the things we need to fix, but we haven't opined on that yet because we haven't heard all sides of the situation."

One adjustment has been made so far, Milanoski said: "a policy directive the selectmen approved last week." The town manager will submit the budget to the selectmen, who will then ask the Advisory and Capital Budget committees to review it and make their recommendations.

"Once they hear all sides and make a decision, that's what will go before town meeting," Milanoski said. "It's almost as if advisory and capital budget work for town meeting, set up to advise the board of selectmen. It's something that clarifies some of the ambiguity. We hope we can get this straightened out shortly."

While not all of the members have been officially sworn in, most of them have since they served on the old search committee.

Carr said that "there may have been some confusion with staff in the selectmen's office as they usually appoint members, but to confirm, this has all been above board and vetted at public meetings."

Milanoski said that getting all of the members, including the new ones the selectmen allowed the committee to appoint themselves, is "something we're working on."

The committee is also working directly with department heads, inviting them to their early morning meetings to hear what, exactly, each department does and what their issues are moving forward.

"I have seen a couple sets of minutes from them and they are actively bringing in chairmen from other committees and most recently had the town manager [Michael Coughlin] attend their last meeting [on Feb. 2] in their effort to reach out to the community before they have a public hearing."

The meetings are held early Thursday mornings because most of the committee members have to work, said Milanoski. Any public hearings, however, will be held at 7 p.m. in order to solicit public input.

Milanoski said that the committee does not yet have a copy of those minutes available, but he has provided the Mariner with copies of all of their meeting minutes leading up to the most recent one.

Town Manager Michael Coughlin said that he talked at the committee's meeting last week about the balance of power between the Town Manager Act and Advisory Committee.

"It may come as a surprise," Coughlin said of his comments to the governance committee, "that I believe that the Cohasset advisory committee needs to evolve into a much stronger entity along the lines of a judicial finance committee."

Coughlin explained that in the last three towns he worked in as either a town manager or town administrator, Northbridge, Southbridge and Westport, the advisory or finance committee would review the budget presented by the town manager, "retool it and present it on Town Meeting floor."

"In this town," Coughlin said of Cohasset, "the town manager presents the budget on Town Meeting floor, which is not consistent with the American checks and balances" form of government. However, the town manager said that he also took issue with the problem of "basic democracy against the chosen few," stating that just as the advisory board should be allowed to weigh in, so should the town's citizens.

"It's the right of the individual to stand up in front of their legislative bodies and make amendments," said Coughlin. "It's just as appropriate on the local level at town meeting that individual citizens are encouraged to stand up and talk budget.

"We're stewards of the public; we try to do what's in the public's best interest."

While Coughlin agreed that the Town Manager Act likely warranted some revisions, he took issue with the manner by which the act is being examined.

"It's contradictory that the same committee that was looking for a strong town manager... has evolved" into a committee that is now scrutinizing the town manager's roles and responsibilities, said Coughlin. He conceded, however, that we would "be content with any model [of government] they adopt... It is not the role of the town manager to define what the government of this community will be. That said, I have a fundamental issue with the process being used here."

Milanoski declined to comment further on what was discussed and what Coughlin presented at last Thursday's meeting, but said that the minutes are being drafted.

The next meeting of the governance committee is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 23.

EXEC SESSION

preparation for negotiations with non-union personnel."

When Coughlin asked Carr which non-union employee, the chairman responded, "At least you, and we're considering one other person."

Tracy Connors Kelly, the recording clerk, confirmed that she was dismissed from the executive session.

Coughlin said in an interview Wednesday that he waited for two hours Tuesday night while the board deliberated. He was then approached by Carr, vice chairman Paul Carlson and Town Counsel Paul DeRensis.

Coughlin declined to comment further on what was discussed, saying only that the session was about "my employment relationship with the town."

Coughlin said that his future as Town Manager of Cohasset has been called into question with two board members saying in separate emails over the past several weeks that they would "lead the effort" to have Coughlin removed.

The first email, from Capital Budget Committee vice chairman Jack Keniley took issue with Coughlin's disagreement with the Budget Planning Group's recommendation to level fund the fiscal 2013 budget; the second, sent by Water Commission chairman Peter DeCaprio, had to do with Coughlin's opposition to the water department's request for proposals for a new water contract and the process by which the RFP is being written.

Coughlin called these "undue threats" to remove him "deeply disturbing" and said that it is part of his "fiduciary duty" under the strong Town Manager act to ask questions, particularly those concerning "the financial stability of the town."

At the same time, Coughlin said that he has been "buoyed by the support of numerous citizens, employees, and department heads in town.

"I look forward to doing my job in an environment free of such undue stress and influence," said Coughlin.

The selectmen are unable to comment on the matter of Coughlin's employment contract, as it was discussed in executive session and members of the public are excluded from such discussions under Open Meeting Law.

Selectmen chairman Carr issued the following statement to the Mariner via email on Wednesday:

"Last night the Board of Selectman met twice in Executive Session with town Counsel present both sessions pertained to contract negotiations with union and non-union personnel. Because the sessions pertained to contract negotiations with employees of the Town of Cohasset, and those negotiations are ongoing, the Board of Selectmen makes no comment."

Classic film

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee invites you to view a classic, 1958 film about a city mayor's re-election campaign. The film was directed by John Ford and stars Spencer Tracy. This film tells the powerful story of Frank Skeffington, a "sentimental but iron-fisted Irish-American" who was the powerful mayor of an American city in the Northeast. In the political world of the '50s, when television was beginning to play a role in public life, Skeffington's old political strategies meet the test of a new political process. Using every tactic possible to defeat his opponent who is backed by that city's civic leaders and one of the city's newspaper editors, Skeffington struggles against the odds to get re-elected. Power politics, money and ethnic hatreds, strategies of Skeffington's opponent, affect the election outcome of this formerly powerful mayor.

The film is based on the novel of the same name by Edwin O'Connor and was based in part on the life and career of Boston Mayor, James Michael Curley. Tracy's memorable performance made him the recipient of two major film awards. It's an old story of the influence of money currently playing out in today's politics some fifty plus years later. Please join in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library on Friday February 17th. CDTC movies are free and refreshments are served and the audiences are convivial.

Anthology to perform at First Parish Cohasset

Celebrate Valentine's Day with Anthology, a professional women's vocal quartet based in Boston. They will perform a mix of folk, jazz and classical selections on the topic of love and weddings at First Parish Cohasset at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Feb.19. First Parish is on the green at North Main Street. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Anthology will offer a varied mix of songs. This time around they will present a program full of songs about love and marriage. From the wedding marches by Purcell, Wagner, Pachelbel and Mendelssohn, to classic jazz numbers like "Orange-Colored Sky" and "I Got Rhythm," to a love song by Sinead O'Connor, the one constant will be that four women's voices will make all the music.

Anthology is a professional quartet of women's voices. Their variety of music is presented with the polish of classical training and whimsy that rises from an enthusiasm for all styles of performance. Anthology's repertoire is a collection of classical choral music, jazz, Renaissance polyphony, world folk traditions, and music from the razor's edge of local Boston compositions. Anthology sings fresh new arrangements of old classics, discovering new repertoire in children's songs, TV anthems, popular music and anything that inspires them. It is hoped the audience will Anthology's a cappella four-part delights. Anthology is Michelle Vachon, Vicky Reichert, Anney Gillotte and Allegra Martin, who is also the music director of First Parish Cohasset.

For more information about the concert, call Martin at 617-872-0461.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

It's not easy being green

ERIN DALE

"It's not easy being green."

Kermit the Frog's song from 1970 might have been referring to the amphibian puppet's skin color and acceptance in general, but it's also a phrase that's been linked to the green movement over the years.

The term "being green" is also often used to describe naïveté or inexperience. From Merriam-Webster's definition of "green," the adjective's ninth meaning is this: "deficient in training, knowledge or experience; deficient in sophistication and savoir faire: naïve."

Being "green," new and fresh to a situation or issue might indicate naïveté, but it also implies innocence. And a wide-eyed innocent is usually thought to have pure motives at heart.

I say this because at the end of the day, the green movement is all about kindness: kindness toward the planet and the world we want our children, children's children, and generations down the line to inherit; kindness toward animals; kindness toward all people on a global scale; and kindness toward our own bodies.

It's not easy to take a stance on something controversial and stand up for what we believe in. It's not easy to be kind.

It's certainly not easy to be "green" in a room full of cynics, to hope for and strive for the best when others are content to give in and follow the status quo.

Being "green," being innocent or naïve is often equated with being stupid. The green movement itself is often lauded by critics, or those who just don't want to make the effort to recycle or cut back on waste. But there's nothing stupid about doing the right thing; nothing dumb about wanting to keep noxious materials from seeping into our soil and poisoning our atmosphere and our bodies; nothing foolish about questioning the ethics of factory farming and the mass production of unhealthy food; nothing silly about wanting to be the change we wish to see in the world, as Gandhi advised.

When it comes to being green, there's nothing to be ashamed of. For all of the "greeniacs," "greenzos," or just plain "environmentalist wackos" out there who feel passionate about these issues and constantly encounter a world of indifference, I encourage you to keep standing firm.

And for those wide-eyed innocents who want to keep hoping for the best, remember — sometimes the Pollyannas prevail.

There is nothing wrong with hoping for, striving for and fighting for a better world... one little "green" step at a time.

Erin Dale is the staff reporter for the Cohasset Mariner.

Event lives up to its name

'Chase Away Winter Blues,' a warm and delightful evening

South Shore Conservatory took the chill out of winter when their Chase Away the Winter Blues fundraising event entertained more than 300 guests last weekend. The arts education facility's Hingham campus was transformed into a 4-venue night club-style celebration of the arts, raising more than $50,000 to support financial aid, scholarships and educational programming at the Conservatory, the largest community school for the arts in Massachusetts.

Celebrating six years as the South Shore's premier winter party destination, "The Blues" took on a black and white theme in 2012. Partygoers donned their finest creative black tie garb, stepped out curbside at the valet, and danced the night away to exceptional live music amidst gourmet food, cocktails and a unique silent auction travel packages, one-of-a-kind experience, precious gems, sports memorabilia, fine art and concert tickets.

For more information please visit www.sscmusic.org, or follow South Shore Conservatory on Facebook.

The James Brook Crossing center is well worth the trip across the tracks.

JAMES BROOK

James Brook Crossing has undergone quite a facelift since it was purchased and renovated from ABB Optical back in 2004. The building now houses several separate businesses and offices, which are interconnected with a hallway like an indoor mini-mall.

Head through the entrance that faces Pleasant Street, and you'll find the Windsor Tea Shop, where you can choose from over 100 varieties of loose-leaf teas and enjoy an old-fashioned English afternoon tea, complete with quintessential tiny tea sandwiches.

Enter through the side entrance, and you'll be in the hallway that connects the teahouse to its neighbor, Crazy Paws Veterinarian, a bright and cheery place for pets. Venture just down the hall, and you'll encounter Harps, Tea & Me, where artist Shelli Jones Manuel paints commissioned portraits; Platinum Spike, a hobby shop featuring model trains, rockets and other retro-style childhood memorabilia; Sailmaker Loft, where you can not only order a new sail or have an old one repaired, but can also request custom-made shower curtains and bags; and even a few private law practices.

This eclectic mix drew marketing consultant Jon Leet to James Brook Crossing; he began renting an office upstairs this past summer.

Leet runs his small business marketing consulting firm, JLeet Consulting, a few doors down from Fitness Crossing, which offers strength and yoga classes along with personal training. If you head upstairs to either of these businesses, you'll pass a nautical mural as you climb the stairs that seems to perfectly encapsulate Cohasset.

So does Sailmaker Loft downstairs. Marine artisan and owner Lori MacCausland is an avid sailor who also happens to hold both a Bachelor's of Science and a Master's in technical writing. While MacCausland said she has always enjoyed writing, sailmaking "is a creative outlet, too." Having grown up on the water, MacCausland knows sails, and started her business when she wanted to find affordable fabrics for her family's own boats.

MacCausland moved into James Brook Crossing this past fall after conducting her business from home. Now, people can stop by her loft with their broken sails; MacCausland also does marine cushions and some special accessories, including custom-designed sails, sailcloth shower curtains and bags.

The shower curtains began as a "gag," MacCausland said, but they're quickly catching on. However, new sails are the primary focus of MacCausland's venture.

When this reporter confessed to being a nautical novice who doesn't know much about boats due to her aversion to the water, thanks in part to the movie "Jaws," MacCausland quipped that she saw "Jaws" being filmed on Martha's Vineyard when she was a teenager. The marine artisan added that the film's mechanical great white shark looked "so fake" in person, and she should know — she once saw real, live great white while sailing in Long Island Sound.

Unlike the tagline of "Jaws," "Don't go in the water," MacClausland said that she's "always been on the water. I love boats and keeping people on the water."

For those interested in an alternate mode of transportation, the train shop is just across the hall — or, rather, the hobby shop, which showcases a vast collection of model trains.

Platinum Spike is a treasure trove of classic hobby toys and past times, from baseball cards to Beanie Babies. It's no surprise that the shop had its origins on eBay. The store originally opened a brick and mortar version in Cohasset in 2001, when owner Dan Peterson purchased a store on 3A called Past Times. Peterson changed the name to "Platinum Spike" (a play on the train term "golden spike," he said) and brought model trains in. The store later moved to South Main Street, next to French Memories, and was there for a year and a half.

Peterson was one of the owners who purchased the James Brook Crossing building from the optical center, and the new owners "gutted the building completely," he said, turning the space into an indoor mall.

Platinum Spike started where the Crazy Paws Vet is now, and in that space Peterson showcased a "huge train layout." He gave up the space because the vet needed a larger area.

It's evident that Peterson, who is also president of the South Shore Model Railway Club based in Hingham, is passionate about vintage toys. His store, said Leet, houses "all the stuff us little boys played with before there were video games."

Peterson added, "There's not a thing in here that I didn't play with as a kid... I'm trying to get kids away from the computer."

The hobby shop owner said that the kids who stop by Platinum Spike don't seem to be hooked on electronics.

"Rockets are big with the Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts," said Peterson. And the fascination with model trains is not "just a guy thing," either: "Girls love it as much as the guys."

But for those who favor a different cup of tea – or an actual one, for that matter – the Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room is just down the hall.

Owner Judy McColgan explained that her restaurant used to be an office before it was converted to a tearoom with an added kitchen. The Windsor Tea Shop opened up in October of 2004; McColgan previously ran similar shops in Scituate and Hanover.

The shop functions as both a tea store and a small restaurant. McColgan explained that it's mostly a lunch place, offering soup and sandwiches, along with baked goods from scones to crumpets, all made in-house. McColgan sells over 100 varieties of loose-leaf teas, from black to green, rooibos to herbal. The shop makes for a convenient lunch stop for commuter rail users, but McColgan's emphasis is on serving traditional British afternoon tea. For those who prefer a stronger brew, the shop also serves coffee.

In addition to using Victorian-style décor in the vein of English tearooms from another time, McColgan also likes to showcase local artists. All of the paintings hanging in the tearoom are local, she said.

The teacups and saucers also tell a story. "They've been collected from all kinds of places," McColgan said. "People will give often just give them to me, and I never refuse."

This hodgepodge collection has lead to a charming assortment of dishes.

"Nothing matches," McColgan continued. "It's shabby chic."

The same could easily be said of the assortment of businesses that make up James Brook Crossing.

Artist Shelli Jones Manuel, who owns the Harps, Tea & Me Gallery in the building, agreed that she and her fellow business owners make for "quite the mix."

"It's a fun bunch of people," Manuel said in a phone call from Washington, D.C. (the portrait painter is also a singer/harpist who has performed all over the world, including at the Pentagon, where she once presented a mural she painted called "This is My Flag"). When she opened her gallery in the building this past November, Manuel said the other proprietors became "instant family."

OUR VIEW

Back to the future

From our vantage point – our town government decisions appear to be going to whoever can yell the loudest and argue the longest.

Statements at meetings, vitriol in emails and quotes have put any sense of civility and decorum on the back burner.

On the whole, the Selectmen seem to be a pretty civil group, even on the quiet side but sadly they have been run over by larger, bigger personalities.

Where does the fault lie? We are big believers in individual responsibility. Those doing the yelling, fist pounding and email blasts know who they are. Unfortunately, they are not going to stop until they see the back of Town Manager Mike Coughlin.

Coughlin, who also possesses a big personality, has clashed with the "powers that be." He has used the Cohasset Town Manager Act, sometimes to a fault, to take action and make decisions. He believes the person who sits in his office should be a strong Town Manager. It would have probably been wiser for Coughlin, who is still new to town, to use a less authoritative approach – but that may not be in his DNA.

While Coughlin is far from perfect and diplomacy is probably not his middle name – that is no excuse for others in public office (elected or appointed) to exhibit bullying and indulge in name-calling.

Does Cohasset want a strong Town Manager? One only needs to turn the clock back to the mid-1990s when citizens voted the Act into place over the objections of the then Board of Selectmen who wanted to appoint a charter commission to study the proposal before moving forward. Town Meeting did not want to wait. Citizens were fed up with the micromanaging at Town Hall.

Around the same time, Cohasset departed from having a local, in-town Town Counsel to hiring a large law firm that would also handle sewer and water issues. The town was under a court order to come up with solutions to its leaky septic systems polluting the waterways and was in litigation with Cohasset Heights Landfill. For years, the town had hired "special counsel" (two different firms) to represent it on those difficult matters.

We will never forget newly hired Town Counsel Paul DeRensis holding up a stack of legal papers from special counsel, fanning them and saying in disbelief at the selectmen's meeting something like "this feels like a million dollars being spent."

Now we are back to having a special counsel for the water department and the Town Manager Act – while still strong on paper – may have been dealt a blow whether or not it is tweaked down the road. We have a strong Act but apparently, we do not want a strong Town Manager.

Government of laws, not men

Cohasset's town government is rapidly "going down the tubes." Remember, we are a government of laws and not men, which Selectmen, Capital Budget, Water Commission and some Advisory Board members, seem to have forgotten.

The issues of the Water Department's RFP was shocking to read in Friday's Mariner. Why wasn't an in-house plan proposed for Cohasset as Hingham is proceeding with one? Also, we could propose a joint Hingham/Cohasset operation of water needs.

The Water/Sewer boards analyzed last year should have been brought under the Selectmen's purview along with a change of the legislation previously voted. This current mess would have not occurred.

Finally, the BOS should start to act professionally, and listen to an experienced town manager's suggestions instead of baiting him every week.

Not happy about marijuana law update

Your "update" in the news section about the third anniversary of marijuana decriminalization in Massachusetts (by the will of 65 percent of voters – which went unmentioned) is nothing more than a promotional vehicle for people whose opinions are clearly biased toward wanting more crime. What would be achieved if those 17 citations issued by police over the past three years resulted instead in arrests? Would anyone be safer if we gave those who possessed less than an ounce of marijuana criminal records? Would the town have saved money by arresting them, rather than citing them? I fear that what we have is a bureaucrat who is trying to make it appear his job is essential, when recent experience shows us it is not.

I don't know what is distorting the vision of your deputy police chief, when he claims he sees "loopholes." Aside from turning what was truly an arbitrary application of the old criminal possession law (police could arrest, could choose instead to cite and summons, could scold the offender, or ignore the violation entirely – all were legal responses!) into a more uniform mode of enforcement, the other marijuana laws are literally untouched. Growing, selling, possession more than an ounce, and possession with intent to distribute – all are criminal offenses.

In a news story, I like to hear as many sides as are available. While I appreciate seeing the minority view expressed, it would have been more "news" and less "promotion" had you contacted NORML, the Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition, or Massachusetts Patients Advocacy, who is sponsoring the medicinal marijuana question that will appear on 2012 ballots, and which will receive greater than 76 percent support. I cannot wait to hear what the deputy chief of police will have to say come Jan. 1, 2013, when the medicinal law takes effect.

Keith Saunders, Scituate

HEALTH NOTES

Primary reasons for hospital stay

STEVE BOBO

How long should one expect to stay laid up for a given medical procedure?

It's all very well to go to a doctor and obtain a diagnosis for what one believes to be a minor problem, only to have the doctor or nurse explain that the problem may require more than merely a modest fix like a heating pad or a wet towel. This is the time to consider the possibility of having a stay in a clinic or a hospital.

Perhaps the diagnosis is a call for a quick visit to a medical facility. Reducing length of hospital stay is a policy aim for many health care systems and is thought to indicate efficiency. Routine data has indicated that variations in length of stay between countries, regions and hospitals have shown a decrease over time in most hospitals. Research also consistently fails to show an adverse effect on health outcomes from reducing length of stay. An ethical basis exists for dictating length of stay but there's probably a moral basis for a minimum length. Sometimes, an outcry has been raised at some ultra-short stays, for example "drive-through mastectomy" and "lunchtime abortion" have been discussed in several articles with the conclusion that a lack of relationship exists between length of stay and health outcomes. Clearly, reducing days of care at the low-intensity end of a hospital stay may not necessarily affect health outcomes. A case can be made for tailoring care more exactly to an individual's needs by looking at the actual components of care rather than the place of care – within or outside hospital surroundings.

Length of stay is a term commonly used to measure the duration of a single episode of hospitalization. Inpatient days are calculated by subtracting day of admission from day of discharge. However, persons entering and leaving a hospital on the same day have a length of stay of one day. A popular statistic associated with length of stay is the average length of stay calculated by dividing the sum of inpatient days by the number of patient admissions. The prospective payment system in U.S. Medicare for reimbursing hospital care promotes shorter LOS by paying the same amount for procedures, regardless of days spent in the hospital.

What are the primary reasons for a hospital stay? The World Health Organization estimates that about 75 percent of deaths in people over the age of 65 in industrialized countries are from heart disease, cancer and cerebrovascular disease (such as stroke). Another major cause of death and disability is osteoporosis and associated bone fractures, which affect many women from 55 upward, caused generally by postmenopausal bone loss.

Increased life expectancy in the U.S. has not been accompanied by more years of perfect health. Studies show that average morbidity, the period of life spent with serious disease or loss of functional mobility, has actually increased in the last few decades. The researchers show that the average number of healthy years has decreased since 1998. We spend fewer years of our lives without disease, even though we live longer.

Then there's Munchausen Syndrome, named for Baron von Munchausen, an 18th century German officer who was known for embellishing the stories of his life and experiences. Most symptoms reported in people with Munchausen syndrome are related to physical illness – symptoms such as chest pain, stomach problems, or fever – rather than those of a mental disorder. However, there's plenty of room in the definition to include your favorite illnesses.

MAKING TRACKS

A look into the Operations Department

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Making Tracks is taking a brief respite from its winter hibernation to bring you up to date on our activities during the past month. We have been immersed in a variety of activities somewhat like the proverbial one-armed paperhanger. You may remember that in 2011 our Town Manager, at the recommendation of our interim Town Manager, rearranged the structure of several of the Town departments that provide services to Cohasset Citizens. Mark Brennan was appointed Director of Operations, which permits coordination of the Facilities Department and Department of Public Works under one head.

In addition, the Operations Department assists the Town Manager with his joint management responsibilities for the Water and Sewer Departments. And, Operations continues to have responsibility for several capital projects around Town. This new organization makes sense because it allows the Town to combine resources from what had been different departments into one coordinated work force. This coordinated concept was first proven to be effective during the hurricane that hit us last summer. It will also be helpful as we plan for the fiscal 2013 budget.

Library Project — So, what has Operations been doing? Well, you have read about a number of activities that are going forward in this paper. Operations has various roles to play in a number of these. For example, we are working with the architect to perform the long overdue restoration work underway at the Paul Pratt Library. Presently, this project is nearing completion. This will allow this beautiful historic building to finally have a sound roof over its head.

School roof drain missing its debris screen.

Solar Projects — You may have also read about the two projects that are under consideration for the installation of solar facilities at the Middle High School and on the old Cohasset Landfill site. In addition to potentially generating "green" energy, there is the opportunity to save serious amounts of money for the cost of electric power to the Town.

As an aside, the thing that makes this type of project work well, is that typically an outside developer is given a contract which enables it to erect the solar facility, at their cost, and provide power to the Town at an a negotiated below market price. The real key to the economics of this arrangement is that the contract extends for a prolonged period of time, usually 10 to 20 years. And, the private developer can take advantage of depreciation and other tax savings that a Town cannot avail itself of. This is what makes a solar project a win-win for both the developer and the Town.

It is very important, in the case of a roof-mounted solar system, that the roof be able to last for the term of the contract without significant maintenance, since the solar equipment makes the roof surface less accessible for maintenance. This is especially important for the Middle High School roof since it is already about 10 years old. Consequently, the Facilities Department awarded a contract for a detailed inspection of the roof to determine its actual condition. To cut to the chase, the analysis informed us that the cost to make the roof suitable for a period of 20 years would be about $1 million. This added cost would appear to rule out this site as a prospect for a solar generation facility.

However, there is also a bright side to this inspection. The inspection identified several areas of the roof and its construction that have started to deteriorate. Without this assessment report, we would not be aware of the repair that should be undertaken to arrest further degradation of the roof. The report recommends repairs of about $62,000 in calendar 2012 and about $100,000 in 2013. Since Town budgeting is currently underway, we are in the process of trying to add this work into the new fiscal 2013 capital budget planning. Well see if the priorities will work to get at least part of this work accomplished next year. We have included photos from that report that indicate several areas where remedial work is required. Remember, it's great that we have this report so we know what the maintenance liabilities are. Also, it is very important for the Town going forward to generate condition assessments for all the Town's facilities.

James Brook Project — The James Brook Project is nearing completion. A number of recent tests have indicated that the new tide gate and channel seem to be functioning as planned. Now the Town can proceed with the punch list items to close out the project and undertake the required Operations and Maintenance (O&M) plan with the regulatory bodies.

Well that's just a little glimpse of what we've been up to. As time permits, we'll fill you in on the details of some of our other activities.

Programs for mind and body

LIZA CARENS SALERNO

As the process of aging begins to reduce joint elasticity, exercise becomes a critical component to living a healthy lifestyle. Regular movement forestalls immobility and contributes to overall wellbeing. In addition, mental health improves through continuous flexing of the brain muscle. To this end, Cohasset Elder Affairs is dedicated to introducing programs to seniors that are designed to improve their physical and mental health.

Since space limitations at the current senior center preclude offering many classes in house, Elder Affairs has partnered with the Cohasset Recreation Department to offer drop in chair yoga in the town hall auditorium. This class, held Thursdays from 9:30 to 10:30 is designed for those with less mobility and allows the participant to take advantage of yoga's fitness and health potential from a chair instead of a mat. Regular yoga practice is known for introducing strength and peace of mind. In chair yoga, poses are adapted to take advantage of, or to use the chair as a part of the practice. Regular practice of chair yoga has proven beneficial those with osteoporosis, arthritis, diabetes, heart disease, chronic pain, multiple sclerosis and those who are wheelchair bound. Participants are requested to dress in layers and to contact their health provider with any questions.

In addition to physical health, numerous studies have concluded older Americans may improve their memory by making simple lifestyle changes – such as practicing memory exercises, healthy eating and stress reduction. Reading, writing, and completing brain-teasers, word scrambles or puzzles all demonstrate a benefit in keeping the brain functioning. To assist in that endeavor, a weekly Scrabble game has been introduced on Thursdays at 1:00 p.m. in the Keating room at Cohasset Elder Affairs. Join us for a healthy congregate lunch at noon, or drop in at 1:00. All are welcome. Among the benefits, Scrabble enhances memory skills, increases vocabulary, improves spelling and heightens strategic thinking, arithmetic skills and socialization. For transportation to and from lunch or weekly Scrabble, call 781-383-9112.

Cohasset Elder Affairs continues to work diligently to provide additional programs designed to benefit senior health in anticipation of the day when all activities may be offered under one roof. Current programming sponsored by Elder Affairs, either at the center or at various Cohasset locations, include Tai chi, Bridge, Yoga (non-chair), Line Dancing, Book Group, and Drop in Knitting. For more information with regard to dates, times and locations of these offerings, review the current Vista Newsletter, or call 781-383-9112.

SENIOR SCENE

Full program for February

LOUISE SMULLEN

Feb. 14 is the date of the annual high tea. If you have attended in previous years, you will not want to miss it. Make your reservations right away. It is a great way to celebrate Valentine's Day.

Here we are into February and no snow to speak of yet – truly a strange winter, but still this month and March to get through. Last year children were skating on Meeting House Pond nearly every day, and we were knee-deep in snow — very few complaints this year.

In January elders were invited to the Golden Living Center where we were served a delicious lunch. A speaker discussed the signs and symptoms of depression in the elderly. He also told about the treatment and options available.

The following day at the Lightkeepers the Police Association treated the seniors to a pasta luncheon. Gregg Hartnett, who is now with the P.D. in Quincy, but who has not forgotten his friends here, was back for a visit. His father, along with helpers, prepared the meal. Rumor has it that this may become an annual affair.

Our presenter at one seminar was Phil Flaherty, Scituate Coordinator for the Hooper Elder Pet (HELP) program. This program helps qualified elders with the feeding and care for their pets. He also spoke about other services provided by the Scituate Animal Shelter. Some were hearing about this program for the first time, and questions were put forth by the audience.

It also looks like we have a full program for February. Greg Harris of Hunter Systems, a local company, presented our first seminar. He explained the use of a state-of-the-art facial recognition program. This gives a tool to identify a person with memory loss who has wandered away. It can also be used by the police in law enforcement. Many questions by the group were answered.

Feb. 14 is the date of the annual high tea. If you have attended in previous years, you will not want to miss it. Make your reservations right away. It is a great way to celebrate Valentine's Day.

The topic on Feb. 15 is Preparing for Elder Care Needs. There will be three presenters who will address the care and financial eligibility guidelines for home and facility-based care.

On Wednesday, Feb. 22, Kim Griffin, Clinical Social worker for Visiting Angels, will review tips to ease the transition from a facility to home.

A reservation must be made for the program on Feb. 28. We are having lunch at noon at the Allerton House in Hingham. The topic for the day will be Keeping Your Heart Healthy. Blood pressure checks will be taken for those who wish. There will be van pickup for those needing transportation. Be sure to call 781-383-9112 to make your reservation.

By the time the above programs have come and gone, we will be looking toward spring and watching for the return of migrating birds.

FOR THE RECORD

Laying down the law of the logs

GREGORY MATHIS

Police logs have long been a staple of the community newspaper, but they certainly aren't what they used to be.

Back in the mid-1980s, when I first started in newspapers, the public logs actually conveyed some of the small town hokey-ness many of our communities enjoyed back then. Some were entertaining, with clever little side notes from the officers, or extra details or anecdotes that made it more than just a mundane log entry.

Those days are long gone and have – like most other things – been replaced by computer programs that spit out a very sanitized public log that provides little detail and no interesting side notes.

Love it or hate it, people read the police log for a variety of reasons. They may want to find out what all the commotion was in their neighborhood on a particular night or whether they knew anyone who was arrested, or they are just generally interested in police activity around town.

We know police logs and police news are widely read, because they often appear under our Most Popular section on the Wicked Local website. We assume it's still a very popular item in print.

Police logs are a public record that anyone has access to, but most wouldn't think to show up at the police station and ask to see the daily log. So we do it for you, providing the information in an easy-to-read, consolidated package.

For the first time since October of 2006, when GateHouse Media came to be, the South unit of GateHouse Media New England has a uniform policy for handling police log entries. For some the updated policy is business as usual, for others it's a slight departure from what has been done in the past, and for a few communities it is a significant change.

Moving forward, the police log you read in your community paper and on the Wicked Local website will include the full name (first, middle initial, last), age, full street address (including number) and charges of those arrested.

There is a list of charges, however, that will include this full information based on the seriousness of the charges and the potential for public harm. It is not a random list, but one that is well thought out.

You'll still see all the other calls you normally see listed in the police log. Arrests for charges not on "the list" will still be included in the log, they just won't include the name or street address of the person arrested.

As in all past instances concerning the police log, we do not include the names of juveniles, which is 16 and under. Those 17 and over are not considered juveniles when it comes to the police log, despite what some parents might think.

If you're interested in finding out more about a particular entry, you can always head down to the police station and request to see the public log.

Next week, I'll address how we handle updating police log and police news information online.

Sailing club looks for preservation funding

Money would pay for handicap-access

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

History or recreation? Neither? Both?

That is the dilemma before the Community Preservation Committee on which "bucket" of funds to recommend where the monies could come from to help pay for a new Cohasset Sailing Club clubhouse.

The sailing club is seeking $82,000 plus a 10 percent contingency fund make the planned, new clubhouse completely handicapped accessible including a kitchen, two bathrooms and ramps.

The CPC is looking behind two "doors," if you will, to help the sailing club qualify for preservation funding.

By law, the CPC can fund projects that fall under historical restoration, open space acquisition, recreation and affordable housing. In the case of the sailing club, there are two possibilities: recreation and or historic preservation.

Under the CPA to qualify for recreation, the town would have had to acquire the land with preservation funds. To remedy this, at the suggestion of CPC member Alex Koines, the CPC could acquire and pay for the lease for the land for the sailing club, which is a nominal amount. The club's lease is currently up for renewal with the town, so the timing is optimum. Selectman Leland Jenkins, who sits on the CPC, also backed this possibility.

The other option would be to use funds from the CPC historical preservation account. Under the Community Preservation Act, preservation funds out of the historical account can be granted to a project that is significant in the history, archeology, architectural or culture of the city or town.

To that end the CPC asked the sailing club to get a letter from the Cohasset Historical Commission stating the sailing club is significant to the culture of Cohasset.

Official Cohasset Sailing Club Charter, 1960

"To educate and train the citizens of Cohasset and particularly the youth of Cohasset in seamanship and to develop them in qualities of self-reliance; to afford them opportunities for recreation and to promote their health and well-being by encouraging an interest in sailing; to solicit, raise and administer charitable contributions to carry out such purposes and dedicate such charitable contributions and all assets of the corporation exclusively to the aforesaid purpose."

"That would give us a lot more credibility to move forward," said CPC member Susan Sardina. "We have to have a leg on which to stand. If the project has the stamp of approval from the historical commission on historical grounds then we can say there it is, Let's move forward."

Sardina stressed that as monies are tight, the CPC has to be careful in recommending expenditures in these tough economic times.

"I think as monies are tighter and as communities look harder at how these dollars are expended, we must make absolutely certain that everything we do follows the text and the letter of the law, not just how we interpret this."

Chris Humphrey, a lawyer and volunteer working with the sailing club, said there was no question the sailing club is an integral part of the culture of Cohasset.

"Any question and you need only look at the town seal with two schooners running with the wind toward Minot Light," he said. Humphrey also pointed out that the new clubhouse would meet the objectives of the CPA and ADA (Americans With Disabilities Act) by providing a facility that would be accessible to all."

Ground was broken for the current clubhouse in 1979. The new clubhouse will be completely handicap accessible.

CPA funds

■ The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.
■ CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).
■ Under the Community Preservation Act, 10 percent of the monies accumulated in a town's Community Preservation Fund must go toward preserving open space, another 10 percent toward historic preservation, and 10 percent toward community housing. The remaining 70 percent can be spent for any of the above and recreation. Any money in the fund that is not appropriated can be banked for future years. Borrowing is also allowed with payments for interest and principal coming out of the fund.
■ The Community Preservation Committee reviews proposals and recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation. Town Meeting voters have the final say.

Susan Hoadley, a CPC member and architect, who provided pro-bono architectural services to the sailing club, drove that point home later in last week's meeting. "This is going to be a club for everyone that each and every citizen will be able to access equally," she said.

Commodore Sandra Crough also said that in the future, the club intends to purchase a handicap-accessible boat, which would make the sport accessible to a differently-abled person.

The entire sailing club project is estimated at $450,000-$500,000. Private donations and pledge are currently close to $200,000. The club was founded in 1960; ground was broken for the current clubhouse in 1979.

In a related matter, the Sailing Club agreed to separate a request for $6,000 in CPC funds to repair the brick Minot Oil Shed at the harbor (see sidebar). The historic shed is actually owned by the town.

CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti asked that the oil shed be submitted as a separate request and that it come from the town (similarly to the request to restore the clock at the First Parish Meetinghouse) because of the prevailing wage law for town-owned property.

The Sailing Club plans to be back on the CPC agenda on Feb. 13 with three action items:

- Obtaining a letter from the historical commission about the importance of the historical culture of sailing in Cohasset (The Sailing Club was on the Feb. 8 historical commission agenda).
- Looking into the possibility of using CPC funds for the lease of the land.
- Separating the request for rehabilitation of the oil shed into a separate request from the town.

In the meantime, Bonetti said he planned to check with Stuart Saginor, Executive Director of the Community Preservation Coalition, to ask him to weigh in on how and if the sailing club proposal can quality for CPC funds.

Minot Light Oil Shed steeped in history

There is a small redbrick building behind the Cohasset Sailing Club whose history belies its size.

The Minot Light Oil Shed is historically significant and to that end, Town Meeting voters could be asked to appropriate about $6,000 from the Community Preservation Fund to restore the building.

The oil shed once serviced Minot Light and has been noted as the third contributing building on Government Island that has been accepted for listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Massachusetts Historical Commission describes the shed as "typical of such buildings found on many lighthouse sites, with the walls and interior floors of redbrick and the roof, clad in wood shingles is deeply pitched."

The age of the shed is uncertain but it is first shown on the 1903 atlas map, indicating it may have been build in conjunction with the replacement of Minot Light with a new flashing signal in 1894. The Cohasset Sailing Club leases the building, which has been protected and maintained for more than 50 years with funds an volunteer hours from the club. The sailing club uses it for its original intended purpose, the storage of fuel and other supplies.

The shed was included in the sailing club's request for CPC funds for the new clubhouse. However, because the town owns the shed, the request for funding for its restoration has to come from the town and should be submitted as a separate Town Meeting article, officials said.

Restoration will include repointing the damaged brick; replacing rotting trim; installing a custom door and trim, installing electrical conduit and demolishing and disposing of the concrete pad.

The oil shed has been noted as the third contributing building on Government Island that has been accepted for listing on the National Register of Historic Places.

What's going to Town Meeting and what's not:

So far, CPC will recommend the following at the annual Town Meeting:

- A request for $65,000 from First Parish Church to restore the windows in the 1747 meetinghouse.
- A request from the Town for $12,500 to restore the four clock faces on the Town-owned clock in the First Parish Meetinghouse steeple.
- A request from the Town of Cohasset/Water Dept. for $25,000 for final surveying at five points in the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area. When the boundaries are located and marked, a Conservation Restriction will be drafted, signed and recorded for the benefit of the Trustees of Reservations. (The Trustees paid $60,000 for the Conservation Restriction and has agreed to maintain the trails in the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area in conjunction with their trail system in Thayer/Whitney Woods).

Under consideration:

- A request for about $90,000 to make the planned, new Sailing Club clubhouse completely handicapped accessible including a kitchen, two bathrooms and ramps. (See related story).
- An expected request from the Town of Cohasset for $6,000 to restore the Minot Light Oil Shed by the sailing club. The town owns the shed.

Not recommended:

- A request for $185,000 from the Cohasset Historical Society to turn the garage behind Town Hall into a fire/police museum. The CPC liked the concept but did not think it qualified for preservation funding in the historical resources category.
- A request for $60,000 from the Emergency Management Committee for a generator for the community room in the elderly housing complex off Elm Street. The generator would have provided heating or cooling in the common room of the Harborview Apartments in the case of an extended power outage. The CPC did not think the proposal qualified under the affordable housing funding category.

FERRY

Linda Marshall of Hingham, a 25-year boat commuter, praised the crews and the safety of the boat. Marshall, who is sensitive to perfume, also pointed out that on the boat she can step outside to get some fresh air something she cannot do on a train.

Ed Giardina of Hingham put it simply: "you have a fabulous service here at a reasonable cost to me and a reasonable cost to you – you should be bragging about it not terminating it."

State Sen. Robert Hedlund did not think the ferry service would be eliminated but that fares would be going up.

"What is happening right now is part of a process leading to a foregone conclusion," Hedlund said. "You will see the MBTA back off the threat of service cuts in a lot of areas with a few adjustments to bus line service." He said the fall back position would be higher fares. "They are trying to prime everyone for higher fares that is what this exercise is all about — not that I accept that or agree with it."

As Davis and the entourage exited the boat, commuters in line waiting to get on board could be heard saying "save the boat!"

A brief powwow continued outside with development officials from the Shipyard and other interested officials and citizens.

Peter Foreman, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, was on hand to point out that transit in transit-oriented developments is key.

"I think this is a real dilemma," Foreman said. "As they think about cutting out mass transit in a transit-oriented development, it upsets the whole development strategy around the state.

"How do you do Quincy Center and South Field if you are going to pull the transit later?"

Tod McGrath, who lives at the Shipyard, served on the Hingham Planning Board when the Shipyard redevelopment was permitted. "The commuter boat is integral to the success of this development," McGrath said. "If you had been here three years ago and came back this weekend, you would see a huge change – there is lots of vitality here."

John Bewick of Hingham said the crux of the problem is the MBTA has not enacted a long-term financial plan. He suggested a five-cent increase in the gasoline tax or a regional sales tax as possibilities.

Davis did not argue with any of the points made. He thanked everyone for having him visit saying he appreciated their support and passion for public transportation.

"Public transportation contributes to being the economic engine to the areas we serve," Davis said. "I think if Boston and surrounding communities want to be a world class area for people to live, shop and go to other events – we need a very robust transportation and transit system.

A commuter boat heading out of Hewitt's Cove at the Hingham Shipyard for Boston's Long Wharf passes a sister boat headed into Hingham Bay last Friday morning.

"But we do have difficult decisions to make over the next couple of months to balance our budget – nothing has been decided and at this point, everything is still under consideration. All questions, comments and concerns will be taken into consideration."

Davis then headed off to Pemberton Point in Hull for another meet-and-greet with commuters and local officials.

They said it:

- Peter Forman, president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce: "As they think about cutting out mass transit in a transit-oriented development, it upsets the whole development strategy around the state.
"How do you do Quincy Center and South Field if you are going to pull the transit later?"
- Hingham Selectman Laura Burns: "This is a smart growth, transit-oriented development. This is the transit that it is oriented to."
- Boat commuter Ed Giardina of Hingham: "You have a fabulous service here at a reasonable cost to me and a reasonable cost to you – you should be bragging about it not terminating it."
- State Sen. Robert Hedlund: "They are trying to prime everyone for higher fares that is what this exercise is all about — not that I accept that or agree with it."
- Tod McGrath, Shipyard resident: "If you had been here three years ago and came back this weekend, you would see a huge change – there is lots of vitality here."
- Jonathan R. Davis, acting GM of the MBTA: "Public transportation contributes to being the economic engine to the areas we serve. I think if Boston and surrounding communities want to be a world-class area for people to live, shop and go to other events — we need a very robust transportation and transit system. But we do have difficult decisions to make over the next couple of months to balance our budget."
- Leslie Cohen, senior VP of development at Samuels & Associates (one of three developers at the Hingham Shipyard): "This waterfront destination was closed to the public for so long, now it is open to the public and provides the opportunity for people to work here or live here and get in and out of Boston very quickly."

David Gillespie, Development Director at Avalon Bay, talks about the impact of the ferry on the residential areas and subsequently the shopping at the Shipyard.

Al Chambers of Hingham, left, shakes the hand of MBTA GM Jonathan R. Davis, after he had expressed his concerns about the impact of cutting the ferry service for the elderly who may use it as their only mode of transportation. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

After playing 12 games without a victory, it was beginning to seem like that elusive No. 1 in the win column was slipping away as the team headed into one of the tougher stretches of the season.

Everything changed on Wednesday as the girls notched a solid 4-1 win over Norwell at the Rockland Ice Arena.

Four different players scored for Hanover/Cohasset as they turned around the score form Norwell's 4-1 win in the first meeting of the teams.

Norwell looked like it might roll early, scoring just 20 seconds into the game, but Hanover/Cohasset hung tough.

Cohasset qualifies nine for Div. 3 Individual States

By William Wassersug

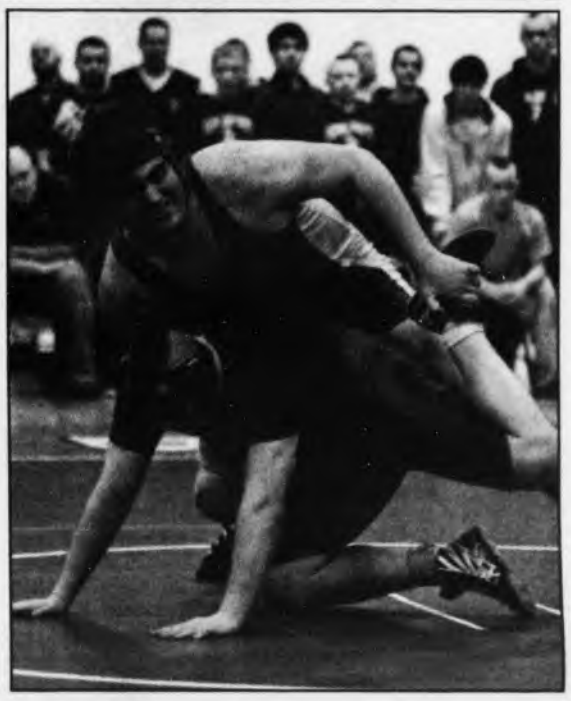
For 11 Cohasset wrestlers, a long ride to the edge of the state is something to smile about.

Being on the van to Taconic High School in Pittsfield means there's still wrestling to be done this season, and that's a good thing.



Taconic is the site of the Div. 3 Individual State Wrestling Championship on Friday and Saturday, and it took a top-four finish in Saturday's Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament to earn the right to make the three-plus hour trip and chance to advance to the All-State Tournament Feb. 24 and 25.

Nine Skippers qualified on Saturday along with two alternates.

Those finishes also gave Cohasset a third-place finish in the team standings to send them to the Div. 3 State Team Tournament Feb. 19 and 20 at Lowell's Tsongas Arena.

"It was a great tournament," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "We finished third. We were there from start to finish while Hingham and Pembroke slugged it out for first."

Free throws key to success

Cohasset Girls Travel Hoop roundup

Basketball coaches at every level know that it is axiomatic that a key to success in every game is strong free throw shooting. The Cohasset sixth grade girls Old Colony League travel team learned the value of making their shots from the charity stripe yet again this season when Elle Hansen cooly sank both ends of a 1-and-1 with 20 seconds to play to cement a 24-21 triumph over Hingham Sunday afternoon.

Hingham came into the contest tied with Cohasset and Whitman for first place in the OCL, but the Blue & White Super Sixers executed their offense perfectly in the opening six minutes to sprint out to a 10-2 lead. However, Hingham hung close and eventually drew within a point, 22-21, in the final minute.

The Cohasset defense got tough in the final minute, with the quintet of Zoe Doherty, Lauren Cunning, Kate Fitzpatrick, Kate Quigley, and Hansen refusing to allow Hingham a good look at the basket. That set the stage for Hansen's heroics and after another Cohasset stop on defense, the Blue & White ran out the clock.

The victory was a total team effort, with the backcourt duo of Margaret Norton and Emma Loft running the offense from the point guard position and the frontcourt twosome of Aidan Chamberlain and Leanne Hayden controlling the boards and igniting the Super Sixers' fast break. Mary Catherine Crumley made a big bucket late in the second half to fend off the Hingham comeback.

Coupled with their 36-12 victory the day before over Duxbury (in which Chamberlain scored 14 points and Hayden struck for 10), the Sixers sit tied with Whitman for first place in the OCL with a 9-1 record.

The victories by the Cohasset Sixths were part of a successful weekend for all of the Cohasset OCL teams, who won all eight of their contests against their foes from Hingham and Duxbury.

The fifth grade squad continued its winning ways to improve to 9-1 on the year, which places the Fledgling Fifths in sole possession of first place in the Grade 5 standimgs.

The Blue & White defeated Duxbury 13-4 and Hingham 17-10.

The guard play of Jane Hansen, Madison Ahern, Leah Fredey, Annie Toomey, Julia Placek, Ally Tolosko, and Anna Cunnie has been outstanding on both the offensive and defensive ends of the court. The forwards, Laney Hixson, Annie Pyne, Caroline McManus, and Elise Wimberly, have controlled the offensive and defensive rebounds.

The defense has stifled the opponents which have led to scoring opportunities. All of the girls are developing into skilled basketball players.

The eighth grade Old Colony league basketball team also won both games this past weekend, 55-22 at Duxbury and 36-18 at home against Hingham.

They are currently in fourth place at 7-3. The point guard play of Shea Kearney and Emily Rosano has directed the offense of the team skillfully. The wing play of Megan Rosano, Kerry Dunn, Rebecca Fredey, and Sophie Wolfe has complemented the point guard play and executed plays. The forwards of Tracy Fogarty, Kyle Burke, and Lauren McManus have controlled the defensive boards and they provide excellent help on defense. The team's full court pressure has produced scoring opportunities which have resulted in the Exceptional Eights being one of the top scoring teams in the league, while the defense has boasts one of the lowest points allowed per game average.

The seventh grade team continued their successful season with two impressive victories, beating Duxbury 31 to 12 and then beating Hingham 30 to 16.

The victories brought the Sensational Sevens' record to 6 wins and 4 losses (matching the combined win total from the previous two seasons).

In the win over Duxbury the team demonstrated tremendous defensive pressure, jumping out to 17 to 1 lead in the first half. The team was led by Abby Osmanski who scored 11 points.

The remainder of the scoring was completed by Nicky Tolosko, Megan McElgunn, Margot Robbins, Caroline Adams, Audry Hart, Charlotte Morrison, Marcella Flibotte, Erin McElhinney and Nikki Federle, representing every member of the team, remarkably the first time every girl scored in a single game.

Against Hingham the team once again applied a swarming defense and tremendous team passing to jump out to a big first half lead.

The scoring was led by Margot Robins, who scored a team high of 14 points (actually the team season high for one game). Nikki Federle and Abby Osmanski chipped in with 4 points each. Erin McElhinney, Meagan McElgunn, Marcella Flibotte and Nicky Tolosko rounded out the scoring.

The four OCL teams will be back in action this Saturday at Kingston.

Pembroke picked up the win when Kevin Beane beat Cohasset freshman Mike Yerardi in the final bout of the tournament.

Sweeney said the final outcome was a good one for Yerardi.

"Mike pinned his way to the finals," he said. "He lost to the same kid who won last year. He did a good job. He was seeded third and took second."

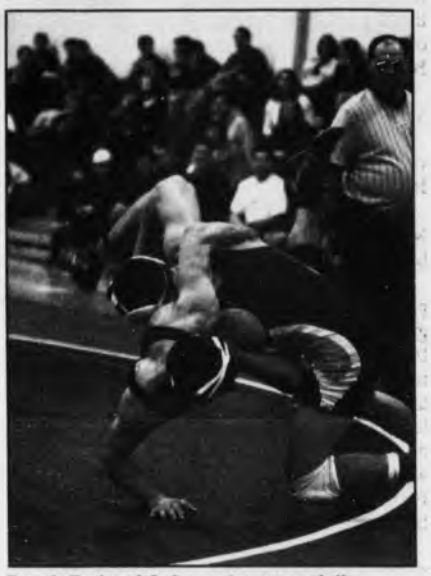
Derek Froio was Cohasset's lone champion, winning the 152 division.

"Derek was seeded first and he took first," Sweeney said. "He beat the kid from Pembroke in the finals. It was a real good win for him. He finished second last year."

Sweeney said he'll be keeping an eye on Froio's numbers as he's getting close to his 100th career win.

Greg Berube made the cut with a fourth-place finish at 115.

At 132, Gus Helbock, who recently won his 100th career match, had a strong showing, finishing second behind Hingham's Jeff DiTullio.



"Gus lost 2-0 to Jeff DiTullio," Sweeney said. "DiTullio wrestled a phenomenal match. To beat Gus you have to do that. He did."

Graden Foley finished second at 145.

"Graden had been nursing an injury," Sweeney said. "The goal was to get him in the finals and then see how he felt. He had three pins in three matches. When it came to the finals, we didn't think it was worth taking the risk of getting hurt and not being able to wrestle this weekend. If he was 80 percent we might have tried. He'll wrestle in States."

Matt Froio was fifth in the 160 division.

"Matt had an exciting match in the consolation semifinal," Sweeney said. "He was losing 13-2, then pinned the No. 3 seed with 10 seconds left in the match."

Derek Froio of Cohasset successfully operates a vicious double-leg takedown of Pembroke junior Ryan Chapman.

Steven Maher had a big tournament at 182, coming back from an illness to live up to his No. 2 seed. On the way, he had two pins in his first two matches.

Mike Livingstone lost in the quarterfinals in overtime at 195, then came back and beat the wrestler who beat him later in the day to score a third-place finish.

In 220 action, Zach Washak finished fourth, beating his No. 5 seed. He finished 3-2 on the day, and beat a wrestler who had beaten him earlier in the season."

Harry Helbock finished in fifth place at 106 and Matt Froio also finished fifth at 160.

Baseball stars, coach honored

GateHouse News Service

The Massachusetts Baseball Coaches Association (MBCA) honored Cohasset All -Stars Jeff Cavanaro and James Faber and their coach Pete Afanasiw for their roles in Cohasset (17-4) achieving its second straight Division 4 State Championship in 2011.

Afanasiw was presented with awards as the South Sectional and State Champion while Jeff Cavanaro was awarded the MVP of the South Section series and Jamie Faber was awarded the MVP for the State Championship.

Awards Coordinator Mr. Joe Leone described Jeff Cavanaro's great senior season including a 7- 2 record and 1.17 ERA including three shutouts in his final three games that included a dominating south Sectional championship one hit performance against West Bridgewater.

Jeff's postseason career is a perfect 5- 0.

Cavanaro also had a great offensive year batting a team high .435 with 21 RBI and a perfect 21-for-21 stealing.

Jeff is attending the University of Mass., where he was recruited to play baseball.

Leone described Faber's State Championship pitching performance as a gutsy two hit victory over Georgetown 6-1 in which Faber also knocked in the game winning RBI. Faber was an offensive powerhouse for Cohasset leading the team in RBIs with 27 along with a 400 batting average and a 4-0 pitching record with a .60 ERA. Faber is returning as a senior and will be one of the Team Captains this year.

Cohasset will be seeking their third straight South Shore title and Div. 4 State Championship this year.

YOUTH LACROSSE

Five days left to register for Spring Youth Lacrosse

Registration is open to girls and boys in grades 1 through 8 for the spring lacrosse season.

This year will be the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters' 17th year.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse (CYL) is the primary organizing body for spring lacrosse instruction, league play and for supporting the woman's and men's Cohasset Varsity Lacrosse program through fundraising and organizing events. The program is run by volunteers and by coaches who strive to promote a love for the game with a focus on providing a positive, encouraging experience for every player.

Teams are separated by grade, and U9 youth clinics are for first and second graders.

Indoor pre-season training begins the weekend of March 17 and the regular season runs from April 1 to early June.

There will be a number of pre-season and spring training opportunities.

This year the program will work with the Cohasset High School coaching staff to coordinate our training and game strategy methods for our middle school age players. For the middle school age players, there will be specialized, position-specific instruction by Cohasset High Varsity players and professional coaches.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse games are on weekends. Practices usually run in late afternoons through the week. Register for the season by following the registration tab at www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

The 2012 Cohasset Lacrosse season is right around the corner. There are just five days left to register. Signups are now open online and the pre-season begins March 17 weekend.

SOUTH SHORE YMCA

Basketball and dodgeball tournaments set for February vacation week

Get your teams together and break up the school vacation boredom with the South Shore YMCA popular 3-on-3 Swish Basketball Tournament and the new Dodgeball Tournament for boys and girls in grades 5-8.

On Tuesday, Feb. 21, the South Shore YMCA at Mill Pond, Hanover will host a Dodgeball Tournament, and on Wednesday, Feb. 22, the YMCA will host the 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament. Both games will start at 11 a.m.

"These tournaments are a great way of getting together with friends, having fun, and getting exercise," sais Sport & Recreation Coordinator Chere Marrese. "The 3-on-3 basketball tournament has been a huge success the last several years with many enthusiastic participants. We're very excited to try dodgeball for the first time this year. With the warm weather and lack of snow, I can't think of a more fun, exciting, and inexpensive way to break up the school vacation week."

The YMCA hosts these tournaments during the school vacation weeks to provide a safe environment for young children to gather with friends and have a good time. With the new dodgeball tournament as an option, more children will be able to participate.

Both tournaments will be double-elimination with prizes for the winning team and are co-ed for players of all abilities. Dodgeball is $50 per team for full members and $75 for non-members. Basketball is $30 per team for full members and $40 per team for non-members. Registration closes at 8 a.m. the day of the tournament.

For more information contact Chere Marrese at 781 829-8585 ext. 349 or email cmarrese@ssymca.org. The South Shore YMCA is committed to strengthening our communities by nurturing the potential of kids, promoting healthy living and fostering a sense of social responsibility.

the University of Vermont. Her first choice is to attend Bentley College.

She is the daughter of John and Mary Mastromarino.

" Kathryn is a terrific young lady that has help out the basketball program in so many ways for the past two years fulfilling a number of very important duties which allow us to function organizationally," Skipper coach Bo Ruggiero said. "She will be tough to replace in the future. "

If you're at a game and see a young man dressed nicely running water, towels, basketballs and other odds and ends, you are looking at Jack Mahoney, the Home Bench Manager.

A fifth grader at Deer Hill School, Jack has been the home game manager for the past two years. His duties include: handling all bench needs for the coach and players, and in general being helpful to all team members.

He is also a basketball player on the CYBA 5th grade travel team. He plays AAU basketball. As a camper for the past three years at Coach Ruggiero's summer basketball Clinic, Jack is a well known guy around the basketball courts.

Finally, it's hard to miss the Pep band. Tim and Joe Cavanaro, along with Evan Canney are the Pep Band.

Organized last season thru Chris Haggerty and father of the boys John Cavanaro, the two brothers Joe Cavanaro, an 8th grader on drums and Tim Cavanaro, a 10th grader on guitar along with a new addition this year of Evan Canney, an 8th grader on keyboard make up the Spirit Pep Band and play at most all home games. They have a unique sound that encompasses everything from classic rock to the Ramones.

"For fans – both Cohasset and visting teams – the level of enthusiasm they bring adds to our home court advantage," Coach Ruggiero said. " They play during pre-game – during time outs , halftime and at the conclusion of our games.

"The boys add some real " juice " to our home game basketball environment with their live music. It makes it a fun atmosphere to be in.

Last year they traveled to Cohasset's tournament games and played at both U-Mass. Boston and the Boston Garden.

Joe is also a member of the Cohasset JV ice hockey team while brother Tim plays on on the golf and JV baseball teams.

Evan, an 8th grader, participates in wrestling and CYBB basketball.

GIRLS HOCKEY

Junior, Nicole Farren (Cohasset) answered with a goal to tie it up and the game was on.

"Norwell scored in the first 20 seconds," H/C coach Deb Beal said. "Then Nicole scored on her second or third shift and everything changed. Nicole is our leading scorer. She's been big for us. She shows great leadership on the ice and she's a solid player. She's smart, quick and experienced. That really helps. She likes to carry the weight on her shoulders. She does a nice job with it."

Nicole skates on a line with sisters Amanda, a senior and Valerie, a freshman.

Hanover/Cohasset then took the lead with a goal from sophomore Julia Dares (Hanover).

"Julia has been very productive for us," Beal said. "She's probably our best skater. She's so quick that her speed creates space and leads to some breakaways."

Junior, Taylor Graf (Hanover) notched the third goal.

"Taylor is one of our strong players," Beal said. "She plays all over the ice, center, defense, anywhere. I ask her to go here or there and she does it."

Freshman Jenna O'Brien closed out the scoring with an empty-netter inside the two-minute mark.

Beal was thrilled to get the victory.

"The monkey is off our back," she said. "It's been building for so long. We knew it was just a matter of time before it happened. Today we stayed focused on offense and defense. We looked to create pressure and do what we do in practice. We kept penalties to a minimum. Our feet were moving and we were feeding off each other."

Beal said a loss would have been tough.

"Had we lost this today, it would have felt like it was getting deeper. We saw the light and chased it."

The best part for Beal was watching her team enjoy victory.

"That was a game-changer," she said. "In the locker room they were screaming and laughing. We're ready to plow through the season."

Beal has enjoyed the season.

"It's been fun," she said. "The one difficult part is having two towns, you go to school with one group and only get to see the other for 50 minutes in practice. We've developed a system and it's working. The girls trust each other. There's a good groundwork."

BOYS HOCKEY

Attack they did with two players scoring hat tricks in this game.

The night started with Brandon Winn in the net for the Skippers.

"Brandon was playing well but was injured during the first period. That's one of the great things about having two good goalies," said the coach. "We were able to have Alex Kent play the rest of the game and feel confident in the process."

Junior goalie Alex Kent turned away all but 3 shots during the game to take the Skippers to their tenth win of the season extending their overall record to 10-3-2.

During the first period action, Cohasset came out flying and dominated the Vikings end of the ice. The first goal came just 2:52 of the game by sophomore Terence Doonan assisted by junior Ryan McGovern. "Terence, (the youngest Doonan; brother to former captains Patrick (08) and Brendan (10), has got the makings of a really good player," remarked Walsh. "He has a really high 'hockey IQ'. He picks up on the oppositions traits and characteristics, he knows where to be with and without the puck and he puts himself in a position to help his line put points on the board."

The second goal came only seven seconds later when senior Vinny Calorio scored his 27th point of the season assisted by senior Alex Evans.

The third goal of the period came at 7:20 with freshman Adam Benson scoring his first of three for the night assisted by Evans and Calorio.

"We adjusted the line because JC, (senior captain John Collins), was out with an injury," said Walsh. "We made a similar fill in earlier in the season and Adam fit like a glove, so I wasn't too concerned that he would be able to play with those guys."

Play he did because 17 seconds later, Alex Evans scored assisted by Benson and Calorio ending the period with Cohasset 4 and SS Voc Tech 0.

During the second period, Cohasset picked up where they left off scoring just 2 minutes into the period when junior Connor Goetz scored assisted by senior Jamie Faber.

Less than five minutes later; at 6:51 Faber scored assisted by Goetz and sophomore Tommy O'Brien.

But the second period totally belonged to the line of Faber, Goetz and O'Brien as they scored all 4 of the second period goals with number three and four by Goetz; earning his hat trick before the period ended. In between goals and at 7:15 of the second period, the Vikings senior captain Thomas McLaughlin scored their first assisted by senior forward Matt Terenzi and sophomore Shane Coughlin with the period ending Cohasset 8, SS Voc Tech 1.

Cohasset scored just 26 seconds into the period when Adam Benson scored his second assisted, once again by Vinny Calorio.

Sophomore Tommy O'Brien scored one minute later for the Skippers assisted by junior Chris Carpenter; putting Cohasset up 10-2.

The shootout continued with South Shore's Matt Terenzi scoring assisted by senior Mike Williams and senior Peter Harrington at 4:34 of the third. Cohasset's O'Brien kicked it into gear with his second of the night at 5:09 of the third assisted by Goetz and Carpenter. As the game wound down, freshman Adam Benson completed his hat trick at 12:05 of the third, assisted by Alex Evans.

With 27 seconds remaining in the game, freshman Curtis Golden scored unassisted finishing the night for the Skippers with a score of 13-3 over the Vikings.

GIMME SHELTER

Vandy is one of a kind

Vanderbilt, who is lovingly called "Vandy," is ready for a place to call home. COURTESY PHOTO

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for a home for Vanderbilt. Vandy is a black and white three-year-old male, who came to the shelter with others in his family. Two of his kittens have already been adopted. People who live in senior housing brought him to the shelter. He and his family were living outside, but were friendly. The shelter is quite sure they once had a home but either escaped or were abandoned.

Vandy is quite handsome and happy to be indoors. He's friendly and would make a great companion. His markings are unique. He'd like to have you visit him at the shelter.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

Vandy is quite handsome and happy to be indoors. He's friendly and would make a great companion.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. This is also a good time to purchase the 2012 Kittendales Calendar, which is also available online.

If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

LIFE AT CHS

Spinnaker goes on sale Feb. 14

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Send a Valentine's Day Candy Gram to your loved ones, on sale at lunch! The money raised will go to the Spinnaker so new issues can continue being printed.

Hello Cohasset! This week was a pretty average at CHS, with nothing out of the ordinary happening except a half-day on Wednesday. Teachers were lucky enough to stay after the students were released to go to meetings, or what ever it is they do on half days (who really knows?). After that crushing loss on Sunday, there was a suspicious amount of empty desks at school. Personal/emotional recovery day anyone?

Winter sports are wrapping up. Good luck to the swimmers and wrestlers competing in states this weekend! The boys basketball team has a home game tonight against Harwich and the girls are tipping off in Harwich at 6:30. The girls are also playing Nantucket on Sunday night at CHS. Come down to support the girls in one of their last games of the season.

The Spinnaker goes on sale on Valentine's Day so make sure to bring your dollar. Do you have a secret crush or a friend you want to show appreciation for? Send a Valentine's Day Candy Gram to your loved ones, on sale at lunch! The money raised will go to the Spinnaker so new issues can continue being printed.

The 5th annual CEF Spelling Bee is this Sunday at the high school auditorium. Stop by to support elementary school spelling enthusiasts and to raise money for our schools.

There have been a few meetings for the annual Mr. Skipper pageant, coming in March. The pageant is generally the greatest form of revenue for the senior class, so make sure to come out and watch this hilariously entertaining event in which boys from all grades compete to show off their talent, signature and formal wear, and their wit in answering philosophical questions. If you are a high school boy (who doesn't suffer from stage freight), you should be participating in Mr. Skipper. The senior class really needs some extra money now that Semi Formal was cancelled...

Can you believe it is already third quarter? Or that there's only one week left until February break? This school year is flying by faster than any year I've ever experienced. Seniors, it'll be June 2nd before we know it! How weird is that? See you next week Cohasset.

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Quilt Show and Luncheon are March 3

Second Congregational Church in Cohasset will host its 18th benefit Quilt Show and Luncheon from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, March 3. The sanctuary will come alive with more than 60 quilts draped over the pews. Each has a story to tell and maybe even a few secrets to share. Tickets include a luncheon, served by the all-male wait staff, which will feature a choice of entrees, and topped off by a variety of desserts.

Tickets are available for $15, by calling Second Congregational Church at 781-383-0345 or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with a check. Reservations for groups of four or more will be accepted for specific luncheon seatings by contacting the church. All proceeds will benefit The Spark Center in Mattapan, serving some of Boston's most high risk children: Those living with complicated medical conditions as well as those with family or social concerns. Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR WEEK OF FEB. 20, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ideas are finally reaching those who can appreciate them. But don't expect any immediate reactions. That will come later. Meanwhile, a personal matter needs your attention.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your energy levels are rising, and you're feeling restless and eager to get into some activity, whether it's for profit or just for fun. In either case, the aspects are highly favorable, so go for it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A relationship seems to be winding down from passionate to passive. It's up to you to decide what the next step will be. But don't wait too long to take the initiative. Delay could create more problems.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A decision looms. But be very sure that this is what you really want before you sign or say anything. Once you act, there'll be little or no wiggle room for any adjustments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Money matters improve, but you still need to be cautious with your spending. Also, set aside that Leonine pride for a bit and apologize for contributing to that misunderstanding.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A tempting financial situation could make the usually unflappable Virgo rush in before checking things out. Be alert to possible hidden problems. Get the facts before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's nice to know that you're finally getting due credit for your efforts. You also should know that new opportunities will follow. A family member brings important news.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Any uncertainty that begins to cloud an impending decision could signal a need to re-examine your reasons for wanting to take on this commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You benefit from taking time out of your currently hectic schedule to do more contemplation or meditation. This will help re-energize you, both in body and soul.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Nursing hurt feelings can zap the energies of even the usually self-confident Sea Goat. Best advice: Move forward. Success is the best balm for a painful ego.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A display of temperament surprises you, as well as those around you. It could be all that pressure you're under. Consider letting someone help you see it through.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Some things don't seem to be working out as you'd hoped. Don't fret. Instead, take some time out to reassess your plans and see where changes could be made.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy traveling and meeting people. You are especially good with children and would make an excellent teacher.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Get a taste of the college experience this summer

By Jim Martinho
GUEST COLUMNIST

Looking to stand out from the crowd in the college admission process? Try a pre-college summer program. You'll get a taste of campus life, explore interesting subjects, and build lasting relationships with peers and professors.

College admission officers love applicants who challenge themselves and push their boundaries, both inside and outside the classroom. As students spend the school year balancing a rigorous course schedule on top of extracurricular activities, athletics, test preparation and – almost forgot – a social life, summer pre-college academic programs offer invaluable opportunities to take advanced courses and make use of resources not available in most high schools.

And with most application deadlines set several months before programs begin, it's never too early to start planning your summer.

Why attend a pre-college summer program?

Summer academic programs allow high school students to:

- Explore specialized subjects from archaeology to veterinary medicine, or learn a foreign language not offered in your high school's curriculum.
- Preview careers in fields like business, engineering and government through pre-professional programs that combine course work with career seminars, guest speakers and field trips to work sites.
- Earn transferable college credit and save on undergraduate tuition.
- Develop the independence and time-management skills necessary to ease the transition from high school to college.
- Build confidence in your academic abilities and demonstrate that you can handle college-level work.

Programs held on college campuses can be a valuable tool in the college search process, providing prospective applicants with an in-depth look at academic and student life.

Although a few colleges guarantee admission or award scholarships to students who complete a summer program on campus, most programs explicitly state that attendance does not improve your odds of undergraduate admission. However, spending a week or more living in dormitories and meeting students and professors will help you better articulate your reasons for wanting to attend when it's time to fill out that application. Or you might find that your dream college isn't so dreamy after all.

Which summer program is right for you?

The first step in selecting a summer program should be discussing your plans with your guidance counselor and family. Decide whether location or subject material is more important to you, if you'd like to attend a residential or commuter program, and how many weeks of the summer you'll have available; session lengths range from two-day conferences to eight weeks or more. Keep in mind that the most valuable summer programs will offer opportunities that aren't available in your high school.

It's important to establish your family's budget, as summer tuition costs run as high as several thousand dollars. Merit- or need-based financial aid may help defray program costs, and some funded programs are offered tuition-free. Admission to free programs is usually very competitive and may be limited to in-state residents or students from underrepresented backgrounds. Paid internships with business or science research facilities offer high-achieving students opportunities to earn a salary or stipend.

Academic programs are conducted by boarding schools, major research universities, smaller two- and four-year colleges, and private companies. Boarding schools offer a preview of dormitory living on small campuses and course material geared towards high school students. Colleges and university programs offer a higher degree of social freedom and less structured course work; programs participants are treated like college students and often enroll in introductory-level classes alongside undergraduates. Private companies operate programs on various boarding school and college campuses, but instructors usually are not affiliated with the school.

Applying to summer programs – it's never too early to start

Summer program application deadlines range from the fall of the previous year for the most selective programs, to others with rolling admission or open enrollment that accept students until programs are filled. Some programs, such as state Governor's Schools, require guidance counselors or principals to nominate students.

Applying to selective summer programs provides a small-scale preview of the college application process, requiring applicants to submit high school transcripts, standardized test scores, teacher recommendations, and one or more essays or writing samples. Prerequisites for admission may include minimum GPA or PSAT/SAT scores, and some programs conduct phone or in-person interviews with applicants.

You'll want to get started early to allow your teachers plenty of time to complete recommendations, and to give yourself time to fine-tune your essays and make sure materials are complete. And don't let a rejection letter from that prestigious first-choice program get you down – apply to a few less selective programs, take a course online or at a local community college, or volunteer at a local service organization.

Demystifying the water RFP

Coughlin said stance landed him in the hot seat

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's town manager of six months has made waves in several departments since taking office, most notably restructuring the water, sewer, and operations departments by asserting himself as joint manager of water and sewer.

Town Manager Michael Coughlin said last week that he believes his stance on the Water Commission's request for proposals (RFP) for a new water contract was the reason his employment was called into question. Coughlin has stated his disapproval of the water department's process, from the 20-year concession contract they are seeking to ink with a new operator to the department's relationship with the water company Aquarion, to the department's hiring of outside legal counsel to help them draft the RFP.

The RFP was due to be issued on Thursday, Feb. 16, Water Commission chairman Peter DeCaprio told the selectmen last week. Selectmen chairman Ted Carr told the crowd who gathered in the auditorium after the Wed. Feb. 15 selectmen meeting that the RFP is still a work in progress.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that the RFP had nothing to do with the board's decision to suspend Coughlin.

"The reasons we are here tonight are not linked to an RFP," Kennedy said during Wednesday's meeting. "It's an idea worth considering, along with other options. Take out the personalities... and it's as literally simple as that."

Both the chairman and commissioner Chris Seebeck said in a phone call Thursday that Coughlin was using the RFP as a "smokescreen" to

UPDATE

Coughlin on notice

Selectmen set stage to fire Town Manager

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Town Manager of six months has come under fire.

Wednesday night, well over 60 citizens packed the small Board of Selectmen's office to hear the verdict on Coughlin, whose contract was discussed during executive sessions on Monday and last Tuesday. Following days of speculation and rumors, the selectmen voted unanimously to suspend Coughlin with pay until they take a final vote to fire him. The decision "is preliminary only and has a 30-day timeline," said selectmen chairman Ted Carr.

In the meantime, Coughlin must surrender his office keys, cell phone, and any town equipment; he is also barred from entering Town Hall or other town property without prior notice and approval of the selectmen chair for the next 30 days.

Through his attorney, Doug Louison, Coughlin asked for a public hearing on the selectmen's decision. The hearing will be held during the regularly scheduled selectmen's meeting on March 13.

Town Counsel Peter Berry sat in Coughlin's usual spot at the selectmen's table as he read the board's resolution to remove the town manager. Coughlin stood before the board with his wife, Bernadette, at his side. His attorney addressed the board after they voted and adjourned the meeting.

When Carr asked if any of the board members cared to deliberate, selectman Diane Kennedy was the only one to speak. She chose to read a prepared statement in which she called Coughlin's removal "an unfortunate day for the town of Cohasset."

Kennedy reiterated the board's resolution, which stated that Coughlin's removal stems from "communication differences" between Coughlin and the selectmen.

"The noise that has been created in town and in the Student imaginations take flight

RISE space station is a hit

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Robots, aliens, moon rocks, intergalactic travel... It sounds like a sci-fi movie, but for students in the Recreation Department's RISE program, it's all part of a winter afternoon's play.

The Cohasset Recreation Department's RISE program, which stands for "Recreation, Imagination, Socialization and Education," provides before- and after-school activities for students of the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. The program kicked off this past summer as part of the Rec. Department's day camp; RISE replaced the school department's before- and after-school programming, Compass.

RISE program coordinator Grace Griffiths, along with fellow Rec. Department employees Marie Dunkelberger and Emelyn Grande, provides a place for children to finish up homework, create arts and crafts, or play and socialize with their friends while they wait for class to start in the morning or for parents to pick them up after school.

Rec. Department director Ted Carroll said the RISE program "is wildly exceeding our expectations in the first six months of the program. The parents are happy, and it is so good to see the kids excited about continuing their day with us. The staff is doing a great job, and like I said back in October, this is a true example of the school and recreation departments working together to offer a service to parents but also a great recreation program."

OPEN MEETING LAW

Coakley offers new regulation

Attorney General Martha Coakley's Office is proposing a regulation that, if adopted, would clarify the standard for a finding by the AG's Office of an intentional violation of the Open Meeting Law. The regulation would define the term "Knowing or Knowingly" used in the Open Meeting Law. A public body that "knowingly" violates the Open Meeting Law is subject to a $1,000 fine per violation. The proposed regulation was posted on the AG's website on Dec. 12, 2011, and published in the State Register on Dec. 23, 2011.

An "intentional violation" of the Open Meeting Law, as defined under G.L. c. 30A, § 18, is "an act or omission by a public body or a member thereof, in knowing violation of the open meeting law." The proposed regulation would read as follows:

"Knowing or Knowingly means acting with specific intent to violate the law, acting with deliberate ignorance of the law's requirements, or acting in violation of the law where the public body or public body member has been informed previously by receipt of a decision from a court of competent jurisdiction or advised by the Attorney General that such conduct violates the law. Where a public body or public body member has made a good faith attempt at compliance with the law, but was reasonably mistaken about its requirements, such conduct will not be considered a knowing violation of M.G.L. c. 30A, §§ 18 through 25."

The Attorney General's Office assumed responsibility for enforcement of the Open Meeting Law with respect to local, regional, district, county and state public bodies on July 1, 2010. Prior to that date, the state's District Attorneys enforced the law as it pertains to local, regional, district and county public bodies. Since July 1, 2010, Coakley's Division of Open Government has responded to thousands of inquiries about the law's requirements, conducted or participated in more than 50 trainings across the state and issued dozens of determinations. In October 2011, in an effort to provide greater transparency and access to the office's decisions, all of the Attorney General's Open Meeting Law determinations became available online through an interactive database, the Open Meeting Law Determination Lookup.

For more information, visit the Open Meeting Law section of the Attorney General's website.

Worker hurt in fall from roof

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

On Monday (Feb. 13), at about 10a.m., the Cohasset Police Department's emergency dispatch center received a report of a construction worker that had fallen off of a roof at the Avalon Apartment's development on Route 3A.

When emergency crews arrived they found that a 33-year-old man from the town of Norton had fallen approximately 15 feet from the roof a building that is under construction. The Cohasset Fire Department Ambulance transported the victim to South Shore Hospital with non-life threatening injuries.

OSHA was called to the scene and the investigation will be turned over to Federal Authorities, police said.

Steaks stolen

The 37-year-old owner of a local restaurant reported to police last Monday (Feb. 6) that his establishment had been broken into and that a box of tenderloin steaks had been stolen. The steaks were valued at $75.

The back door looked as though it had been pushed in, police said. Detectives are investigating the incident.

Dog struck

A large, yellow dog was struck and killed last week (Tuesday, Feb. 7) at around 7 p.m. on Beechwood Street. The 61-year-old Hull man operating a 2009 Toyota reported that he had been traveling about 30 mph when the dog darted out from the side of the street in front of his car. The owner arrived and picked up the dog, police said. The driver of the Toyota and his passenger were not injured and the car did not have to be towed.

Collision

A 54-year-old Duxbury woman operating a 2008 Acura MDX northbound on Route 3A slowed to make a left into Crocker Lane when her Acura was hit from behind by a 2005 Dodge Caravan, police said. The accident occurred at 12:52 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 8).

The operator of the Caravan, a 49-year-old Scituate woman, was cited for following too closely on a state highway. The Duxbury woman driving the Acura was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said. Her car was towed.

Loading dock

At 10:28 a.m. on Friday (Feb. 10), a minor accident was reported between two large tractor-trailer trucks, owned by Shaw's, at the loading dock behind the supermarket. There was very minor damage. Police said it was Shaw's protocol to notify police and the incident was logged in.

Backed into

A 78-year-old Hanover man in a 1997 GMC Sierra backed into a parked, 2000 Ford pickup truck in the parking lot at Tedeschi Plaza last Saturday (Feb. 11) at about 3 p.m. There was very minor damage, police said.

Double parked

Police are stepping up patrols in the North Main Street and Depot Court area in an effort to curb double parking while parents are dropping off or picking their children up at the community center. Police said there have been numerous complaints.

Cleared up

A 53-year-old Cohasset woman went to the police station last Thursday (Feb. 9) to report that her 31-year-old son, who does not live locally, had failed to return her 2004 Chevrolet pickup truck. She came to the station to report it stolen. The officer was able to contact the woman's son and clear the matter up, police said.

Disturbance

In a domestic incident, a 28-year-old Cohasset man is facing charges of assault and battery on a person over 60 for allegedly trying to choke his 73-year-old father during an altercation last week. Police were called to the scene of the disturbance at 9:12 a.m.

Flash mob

Police received a report from a business on Chief Justice Cushing Highway on Friday (Feb. 10) at 8:47 p.m. that a car with three teenage girls inside had pulled into the parking lot. The caller said the girls got out and began to dance to loud music on the lawn before taking off.

Parking complaint

On Saturday (Feb. 11) at noon, a caller reported an SUV was parked in a spot for the handicapped by CVS in Tedeschi Plaza. When police arrived the SUV was gone. Police said the fine for parking illegally in a handicap space is $100.

Window hit

A 58-year-old resident of North Main Street reported hearing a loud bang by his front window at about 9:27 p.m. on Saturday (Feb. 11) and seeing two teenage boys outside with stocking hats, glasses and zip-up sweatshirts on. When confronted they denied throwing anything at the house. The next day, the homeowner discovered a small crack in the front storm window that could have been made by a small rock, BB or pellet.

Deer injured

At 12:50 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 13), a caller reported seeing a deer with a broken leg walk into the woods off Jerusalem Road. Police notified the animal control officer but the deer could not be located.

Why Do You Want to Get Fit?

By Elizabeth Johnson

Photos of Anita Castillo courtesy of GISFW Staff

Many gym-goers know what the advantages are of exercise and improved nutrition: reduced risk of many lethal diseases, improved overall quality of life, and sense of confidence that shines through a healthier body. What about the "why"? The "why" is the critical piece of the puzzle that makes the goal so important and worth working towards. For some women, being fit, active and healthy for their children is the ultimate reason. For others, it's finally feeling confident in their jeans and t-shirt and wanting to go shopping for more.

Schedule time for yourself to really sit down and think about your health and fitness goals, your plan for reaching them, and why they are important to you. The managers and personal trainers at Get In Shape For Women can do just that with you. The result is a plan for success.

Get In Shape For Women has studios all across the country. Our certified staff holds you accountable by scheduling your appointments, checking in with your nutrition, and focusing on getting you results you want! Our program is composed of weight training, cardio, supportive nutrition and accountability to help you meet your goal. For a Free Week Trial call 877-304-4567 or visit getinshapeforwomen.com.

Read Anita's story about why her goal was so important.

Right after getting married, my husband and I decided we were ready for children. But I was having a difficult time conceiving. I was always a big girl and I eventually just got used to being the size I was, but in the three years after I had gotten married, I became the heaviest I had ever been. My doctor finally said my weight had become a factor in my inability to become pregnant. I couldn't believe how heavy I had really gotten until I saw pictures of myself after a trip to Boston. I decided it was time to make a change.

I always joined gyms with friends, which only gave me more excuses NOT to go when our schedules would conflict. When I got the advertisement in the mail for Get In Shape For Women's Open House, I knew I had to join on my own; I couldn't afford any more excuses. During my interview, when I was asked what my ultimate goal was, my reply was simple: "To become healthy so I can have a baby and be the best mom I can be."

On my 35th birthday, I scheduled a doctor's appointment (for a mid-life crisis check-up!) When I got on the scale, I learned I was 4 lbs shy of my goal... but losing 31 lbs. in 5 months was a huge accomplishment for me. I felt like a new person. That day, the scale wasn't my only surprise. While waiting what seemed a lifetime in the exam room, the nurse and doctor both came in and handed me a pregnancy test. It was positive. I learned you CAN reach your ultimate goal, even if you miss some milestones along the way, you just can't ever give up.

FORMER CEDARMERE SITE

Houses planned for Hayes Estate

Informational session is next week

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The former "Cedarmere" project that was left at a dead-end has found new life.

On Feb. 6, the Toll Brothers home building company issued a memo to the Planning Board stating their intent to develop the vacant Hayes Estate on Beechwood Street into 41 detached single-family homes.

The last proposed project on the Hayes Estate site, called Cedarmere, consisted of 105 attached and detached homes. Situated on 41 acres of property, the homes included 22 single detached units, 19 two-family units, a 14-unit manor house, and a 31-unit building containing 27 affordable units. Occupancy was restricted to those aged 55 and over; this was a special permit that was approved by the Planning Board in 2004.

However, the economic downturn led to lack of sales, and the site owners, Leggatt McCall, surrendered their joint share of the property to ING, according to Planning Board meeting minutes from Aug. 18, 2010.

While specific plans for the Toll Brothers development are as yet unknown, Planning Board administrator Jo-Ann Pilczak said that the new community will not contain seniors-only residences because the town's age restriction bylaw was sunset at the April 1, 2006 Town Meeting.

"They can't come in and apply for an over-55 community in Cohasset because there's no bylaw to accommodate it," said Pilczak in a phone interview.

The Toll Brothers will come before the Planning Board in a public hearing on Wednesday, Feb. 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Prior to that, the Toll Brothers plan to hold an informational session at Cohasset Harbor Inn on Thurs., Feb. 23 at 7:30 p.m. Those who wish to attend and learn more about the proposed community are encouraged to RSVP by calling 508-366-1440.

VFW issues monthly newsletter

The VFW Post voted recently to begin to develop a monthly newsletter, to be sent out to members of all services and their dependents who currently reside in Cohasset.

The purpose of our newsletter is to inform and find a way to reach out to families and to invite them to communicate to any member of the Post, who they are, a local mailing address, members of their families who are enrolled in our various local schools.

However, our main goal is to establish a lifeline of mutual respect, and to thank them for their service to our country, which we do not do often enough. Secondly, to make them aware that the VFW is a service organization who truly wants each service member – active and reserves – and their spouses and children to know who we are, where we are located and to inform them of our monthly meeting schedule, and to again invite them to come and let us get to know one another.

Becoming a member is not a priority, because we simply want to support our veterans through conversation, and listening and camaraderie.

To reach us is easy, just call: Commander Ralph Perroncello at 781-383-0879; Vice Commander Joe Laugelle at 781-383-0079; or Adjunct Ed Graham at 781-383-9324; or email esgraham34@aol.com.

UPDATE

Big crowd at Hingham MBTA hearing on service cuts

By Maryellen Dever
correspondent

More than 400 people from Hingham and surrounding towns packed Sanborn Auditorium at Town Hall last Wednesday night (Feb.8) to voice their opposition to the MBTA's proposed service cuts. The meeting, scheduled to end at 8 p.m., ran an hour over to accommodate all 90 members of the public who wanted to comment.

After T representatives outlined their current fiscal issues, local elected officials, including State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, told the T that large numbers of their constituents had contacted them to ask for help in keeping local commuter services.

State Senator Robert Hedlund expresses opposition to the proposed ferry subsidy cuts, fare hikes and bus route eliminations that are on the table.

Bradley said 5100 people signed a petition to save the commuter boat, and many more were equally anxious to save the Route 220 bus that runs from Hingham to Quincy Center.

"If you cut that and the commuter boat, you basically isolate Hull from any public transportation," Bradley said.

Hedlund added, "I cannot fathom where the savings will come from by cutting off the 220 bus at Bicknell Square and shaving off the last two miles."

Hedlund, saying he was speaking for all the bus riders who couldn't be at the meeting, said other cuts to bus service to South Shore Hospital also make no sense. Regarding the commuter boat, he said the ferry started in 1975 and has thrived. "We have not even begun to tap the potential for ferries in this state. [Instead of cutting service], we should be moving in the other direction."

Hedlund also cautioned T officials to be open and honest with their customers, to loud applause from the crowd. "Don't talk about service cuts that won't happen just to get a fare increase. Don't cause anxiety among the people here."

Citizens, who spoke, for the most part said they would be willing to accept a fare increase, but many also demanded that the T commit to more fiscal responsibility. Speakers included students and the disabled who depend on the bus, long-time boat commuters, people who said they moved to this area specifically because of the ferry service, and residents of the Lincoln School Apartments in Hingham. The seniors living at Lincoln School particularly depend on the bus, which stops outside their door, almost as a lifeline. As one resident said, "it keeps us in touch."

Hingham resident James Watson said the system as it exists now provides for all needs. "The train fills gaps that the boat doesn't. The bus stops every few blocks. The bus is the backbone of it all."

Nancy Yotts said she chose to live at the Lincoln School Apartments because it was directly on the 220 bus route. Although she said she was "so nervous" to speak at the meeting, she felt it was important to speak up for herself and her neighbors. She said because of the bus, she is able to be independent. She needs to use the bus for critical medical appointments in Boston as well as for more routine errands.

Many commuter boat users said they would not take the commuter rail if boat service were eliminated. Some worried that the train parking lots are not large enough to accommodate the T's expectations that all boat commuters would change to the commuter rail. Quite a few speakers also said they ride their bikes to the boat, and commute from Rowe's Wharf to their offices in Boston and Cambridge. They do not use the commuter rail simply because bikes will not fit on the train, and most said they would drive to work if the boat was no longer an option.

Hedlund, comparing the $3.9 million subsidy the T pays for the commuter boat, said "Greenbush is losing $30,000 a day. I guarantee the boat is costing nowhere near THAT subsidy!" He added, "There's no equipment cost with the ferry. The T didn't have to spend a half-billion dollars to get it up and running."

Many called for long-term solutions to the MBTA's fiscal issues, the most popular being a call to put the MBTA in receivership. Hull Town Manager Phil Lemnios called for a 10-year plan. It's time for the legislature to take control of this statewide threat and lead." Hingham resident John Bewick said "Fare increases and cuts in service don't begin to address the fundamental problem of the T."

MBTA Spokesperson Lydia Rivera said later, "These are two proposals. We don't expect either will be the one chosen. That's why we have this public outreach process." Although there was overwhelming support for the boat, she could not say what the final decision would be when the board meets in March or April.

In brief

- The MBTA, which has faced criticism about not dealing with its structural financial problems including carrying too much debt making it unable to invest in the upkeep if its existing system, is facing a $161 million deficit in fiscal 2013.
- To fill the gap the MBTA has offered plans to impose sharp fare hikes and cuts to subway, commuter rail, ferry and bus service.
- The MBTA is currently conducting hearings to get feedback before making a decision.
- According to the MBTA Advisory Board, which provides public oversight to the MBTA, service cuts and fare increases would fill the deficit for fiscal year 2013 only.
- Poor performance of the state Sales Tax, the MBTA's largest single source of revenue, has left the MBTA unable to keep up with growing debt service or build cash reserves.

'A concrete way to help'

Blood drive Saturday at St. John's

By Liz Fuller
correspondent

The American Red Cross will be holding a special blood drive on Saturday (February 18), from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at St. John's Church in memory of Christopher Henderson, who, last February, lost his battle with head and neck cancer after a two-year fight.

Christopher's wife, Heather, explained that she had organized a similar blood drive last March, at a time when she believed that her husband would benefit from a blood transfusion. However, Christopher passed away in February. He was 37.

"I still had the blood drive," Heather said. "People wanted a concrete way to help. It was like, 'Here's my arm, take my blood'. There was such an outpouring of support."

Heather and her son, Colin, 4, still receive a significant amount of support. Christopher's parents, Richard and Linda Henderson, reside in Cohasset, his sister, Emily Miller and family live in Hingham, and Heather's brother and his family live in Duxbury. Heather's parents even relocated from Connecticut to Marshfield to be closer to her and their grandson.

"It seems like everything just came together after Chris died," Heather said. "Everyone is so close by now. Chris would be thrilled to know this."

Heather also has the support of friends in town. "I had joined a [playgroup] group when my son was a baby. Chris was diagnosed at that time and these people just reached out and helped us. They cooked us meals for two years. They were there for us and really supported us like they'd known us for years. It was just amazing."

Head and neck cancer is a rare form of cancer, which usually stems from all tobacco use, especially chewing tobacco. "Chris didn't smoke or chew tobacco," Heather said. "His was just a freak thing." Heather said that Christopher was the one who first identified a sore on his tongue that wouldn't heal.

"It was caught early," she said. "Usually with this type of cancer, if it's found early, there is a high rate of survival. But his was like a freight train gone out of control. Like a forest fire." Heather mentioned that Christopher's doctors were devastated by his death. "They really believed that he would be okay because it was caught early. You'll never find a cocky oncologist because each case is important and they truly want to find the answers. They want to help."

Heather is hoping for a strong turnout for Saturday's blood drive. "A lot of people don't know how or where to give blood. The need is as strong as it's always been. That's why community blood drives are so important." Heather stressed that walk-ins are encouraged on Saturday. She also stated that her friend, Sarah Kopcsak, who lives in Colorado, had said that she felt badly that she couldn't participate in the blood drive because she lived so far away. "She decided to hold one in her area on the same day as a tribute to Chris and the person that he was," Heather said. "She is a really special person."

Heather said that if there is anything to learn from Christopher's death it is to be prepared. "This was such a rare cancer. It came out of the blue. All of my friends now have life insurance. They have seen what can happen to a young, seemingly healthy man. Without life insurance, I'd never have been able to keep our home. My son and I would not have been taken care of the way we have been."

As Heather continues on her healing journey, she emphasized appreciating what you have. "You have to hug your kids and your husbands tighter."

Christopher Henderson, 37, who grew up in Cohasset and practiced law here with his father Richard Henderson, passed away last February from cancer. The second annual blood drive in his memory is being held Saturday.

Cohasset Mariner wins three awards

Nancy White, Robin Chan honored for excellence

By Alice Coyle
acoyle@wickedlocal.com

We're in the throes of awards season. Last month the Hollywood Foreign Press saluted movie stars of both the big and the small screen at the Golden Globes. On Sunday the best in the music industry took home Grammy Awards and the 84th Annual Academy Awards is less than two weeks away.

For GateHouse Media New England journalists "Oscar night" came Saturday as the New England Newspaper and Press Association (NENPA) hosted its annual awards banquet honoring the winners in the 2011 New England Better Newspaper Competition at Boston's Park Plaza Hotel.

This year's contest drew close to 3,000 entries in a host of writing, photography, multimedia and advertising categories by journalists in daily, weekly and specialty newspapers throughout the six-state New England region.

GateHouse Media New England's South Unit which produces 27 weekly newspapers and 30 websites from offices in Marshfield, Plymouth and Raynham had another great showing this year; with 16 staff members bringing home 26 awards.

Local highlights included, Nancy White, who won first place in both the business and economic reporting and general news story categories for the Cohasset Mariner. (White, who is now editor of the Scituate and Marshfield Mariners, was the staff reporter for the Cohasset Mariner for 4-1/2 years.)

The judges had this to say about White's business story on local lobstermen: "Reporter Nancy White manages to connect her land-lubber readers with their town's seafaring past and present. Her delightful story captures the rewards and challenges of the lobster industry."

In the general news category, White won for her story on the former Cohasset school department head who resigned over comments she posted on Facebook.

"Skillful reporting of a scenario that's starting to play out with increasing frequency nationwide. The sidebar on Facebook privacy setting was a good public service," the judges said.

Staff photographer Robin Chan won six awards, including three first place awards in the general news photo category for the Scituate Mariner, and for spot news photo and video for the Norwell Mariner.

Editor-in chief-Gregory Mathis was pleased and proud of the South Unit's success.

"Our editorial staff continues to produce quality work as evident by the number of awards, as well as the breadth of categories, won by our reporters, photographers, sports editors and editors," said Mathis.

"It's always rewarding to be recognized by our peers through the annual NENPA Better Newspaper Competition and certainly validates the hard work all of our journalists put in year-round in each community we cover."

AROUND TOWN

Still time to sign up for Polar Plunge!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Happy Vacation!

Happy Vacation Week to all public school students and their families if they have time off as well. Enjoy the time, maybe we will get some snow to play in and if you are going somewhere warm, enjoy that too!

Oasis program

This was a nice story to write about, thank you for sharing. The Sunday School children and Youth Group of the Second Congregational Church held a Valentine's Day bake sale this week to benefit the Flying Kites Oasis, to support church member Frannie Noble who is the Program Director of this non-profit group. The Oasis Program engages local and global communities to significantly improve the quality of care offered to orphaned and vulnerable children by uniting, supporting and building the capacity of existing orphanages in Nairobi, Kenya. The SCC children thoroughly enjoyed this lesson of Love.

Polar Plunge!

We hope you all read the great story in last week's Mariner about the 14th Annual Polar (formerly Passion) Plunge benefiting Special Olympics MA to be held at Nantasket Beach. With two weeks to go until Saturday, March 3rd, the brave Plungers are busy knocking on doors hoping to raise $400,000 for the programs of Special Olympics all across the state.

The 18-member Scituate Mariners Team includes Cohasset residents Jay and Jeff Nothnagle, Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Bill Greentree, Steve Myers, Maria Osborne, Pat Plante, and Doug Yeager and the SSHARCS Team includes Nick, Charlotte and Graham Sida, Phil Faulkner, and Brook Miele from Cohasset. These two teams provide training and competition in 13 sports year round and help the athletes move on to compete in one of the 130 competitions offered state wide annually. There are over 13,000 Special Olympics athletes in MA, ages 2 to 92. Cohasset Recreation Dept. will be starting a Young Athletes Program in the spring —watch for their flyer with the details.

The teams are still seeking more Plungers, Chickens who do not go into the water, and Virtual Plungers who send a picture of themselves in water. You can register to participate or donate online at www.polarplunge-ma.org, or mail a check made to SOMA to Team Scituate Mariners, 36 Atlantic Ave Cohasset, 02025.

Please support this great cause and then come on over to Nantasket on March 3rd to see the fun. There is a costume parade at 11:15 a.m and the Plunge is at Noon. Any questions, call Jeff Nothnagle 781 383-0895.

Black History

Black History Month is here and the documentary film "Can We Talk? Learning from Boston's Busing/Desegregation Crises" will be shown at the Cohasset Library on Thursday evening, Feb. 23 from 7:00 – 9:00 pm. The film takes a close look at the long-term impact of the 1970's Boston public school busing/desegregation crises. The film documents the personal testimonials of individuals impacted by court-ordered busing and its residual affects on the city of Boston, its school system and its residents. Following the film there will be a discussion led by Donna Bivens, project director. For more information, call Connie Afshar 781 383 6006 or refer to the website at www.bbdproject.org.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Paint goes 'green' at Wolfe Painting

ERIN DALE

For Cohasset business owner James Wolfe and his wife, Catherine, going green is a family affair.

Wolfe owns and operates Wolfe Painting, catering to homes all over the South Shore. The Wolfes are committed to living a more eco-conscious lifestyle, which has carried over into their professional lives.

Wolfe spoke talked to the Mariner about how he's "on the green beat" every day, both at work and at home.

Cohasset Mariner (CM): Tell me about your family's eco-living...

James Wolfe (JM): We're pretty conscientious about everything we recycle, for sure, whether it's plastic bottles or tin cans. I'm the dump guy — my wife has me go to the dump. I like going to the [Cohasset] transfer station; it's just really organized. It seems like everyone is recycling — it's always packed with people. Although I go on the weekend, so there's obviously going to be more people, but it's nice to see. My wife is also involved with a third-party energy source that provides cleaner energy [to our home]. You save money, number one, but number two, it's greener energy.

The Mariner also learned that Catherine's brother-in-law, Tim Lopes, owns Go Green of Scituate, a landscape supply company that recycles yard waste and sells organic mulch; so the Wolfe family's commitment to green energy extends not only to other family members, but to other towns on the South Shore.

CM: And what about your paint company? I see that you use eco-friendly paint brands.

JM: It's kind of a big deal around town here, especially with families with young children...

People buying an older home will often remove lead paint and use Natura and Aura paints. They're low-VOC [volatile organic compound], so there are not as many harmful chemicals. I use pretty much just Aura and Natura in the towns of Cohasset and Hingham. It's a little more expensive, but so worth it. There are so many harmful chemicals in the older paints. A lot of my customers will redo a bedroom for their new baby and will repaint with eco-friendly paint.

Wolfe Painting also recycles remaining paint containers that their clients no longer want to keep.

CM: How long have you been interested in the green movement?

JM: I really got tuned into it a couple years ago. The paint companies started really pushing this "go green" paint. I've been to seminars about it through Benjamin Moore; I've gotten to work with it and get educated on the product. It's so beneficial so I can explain it to my customers.

My whole goal is to live that lifestyle all the time, to be as green-friendly as possible.

For more information on Wolfe Painting, visit http://wolfepaintingco.com/. If you would like to contribute to or be featured in On The Green Beat, whether you're a business owner, teacher, board member, concerned citizen or avid recycler, we want to hear from you! OUR WORLD

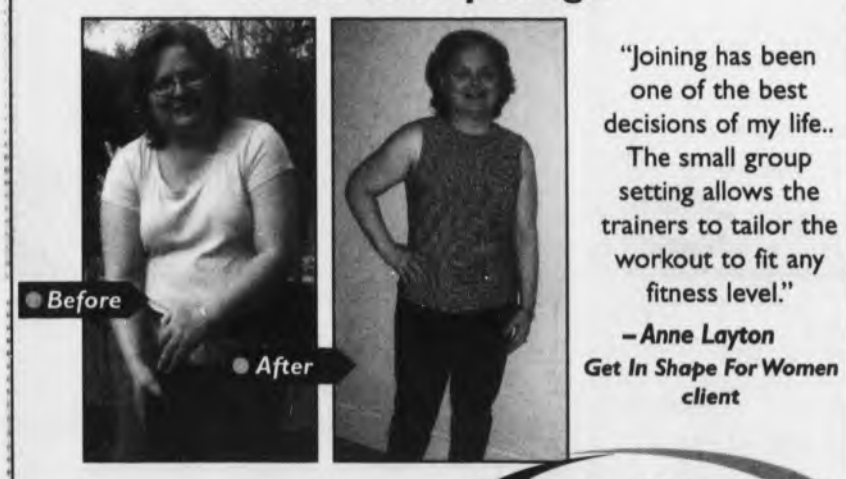
Animal shows on Feb. 22

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St., is now open on Mondays 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The museum will be hosting two animal shows over February vacation. Critters 'N Creatures will be doing two small shows Feb. 22nd at 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. The museum is keeping the shows relatively small, so everyone can enjoy the animals and receives a chance to pet them.

The museum will be taking reservations for this, so call 781-383-3198 to reserve a spot for your child. It is free for members and free with price of admission for others. This event is sponsor by Lemon Lime.

Bring your cameras because after the show, there will be a photo session for your child to pose with an animal.



Weekly Scrabble

On Thursdays from 1 to 2:30 p.m., there is a weekly Scrabble game at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St.

Many experts say games that challenge the mind work to stave off dementia, strengthen critical thinking skills, and promote brain health. Games involving acuity, concentration, and focus enhance the brain's capability stimulate brain cells, and keep neural pathways open and functioning.

Among other benefits, the game of Scrabble may enhance memory skills, increase vocabulary, improve spelling and heightens strategic thinking. In addition, Scrabble helps in building focusing, planning and visioning capacities in players. Aside from that, it's just plain fun! Suggested donation: $1 per game.

SPACE

RISE students have gotten to play in their very own teepee in the fall and make believe they were traveling back in time to meet John Smith; they've also enjoyed a "trip" to Paris, with AP French students coming in to teach them phrases; and during February vacation, students will have "where's the snow?" activities with snowman crafts and hot cocoa.

But now, RISE has its very own space station built from recycled cardboard, plastic containers, egg cartons and other reclaimed materials by Griffiths, who said the structure took about four to five hours to make. While she did the building and gluing herself, she said that she had help painting from college student Nick Wallace, who works for the Rec. Department during school breaks.

"It's just boxes we collected and painted white," said Griffiths of the station, adding that she found much of the material at Hingham Lumber and from stuff she had lying around, like Styrofoam packing from a microwave box.

The kids also used recycled and found items to make their own robots from coffee tins, springs, plastic jugs, cartons and more.

"I asked the [school] kitchen ladies and parents to find bolts, nuts, springs — anything they wanted to recycle," said Griffiths.

Then the students, whom Griffiths called "creative geniuses," crafted their robots, even building one that was as tall as the adults in the room.

The space station structure functions as both an indoor playhouse and teaching tool.

"Normally, kids would have to go to a museum to play in a space station," said Griffiths. "It makes the day special."

Since the kids were playing with rocks, crystals and iron pirite, Griffiths taught a lesson about the periodic table and searching for elements in space. "The fifth graders know about atoms, electrons and protons," she said. "We talked about how we've spent billions of dollars in space, and all we have to show for it are rocks."

The students imagine alien encounters and what their robots would function as on other planets. In this setting, the kids are learning about science while letting their imaginations run free.

"We try to pour in a lot of stuff in a little time," said Griffiths. "It really has been a lot of fun."

Students can suit up for space travel in their very own zip-up space suits (which are really disposable painter's paper suits) and enter the special "transporter" to visit other worlds.

A "five-man crew" is allowed in the space station at a time, said Griffiths, who emphasizes that kids must "go slow, stay low and be safe."

The station boasts a command area and mission control. Once inside, students can play with a microscope, keyboards and Lite-Brites; they can also don helmets for the full astronaut effect.

Bother and sister, Jonathan and Devin Tulio, pause in the window of the space station.

RISE students have a few more weeks to transport themselves to other planets, contact mission control, and send their robots to study moon rocks; the space station will "blast off" and out of the classroom on March 9, said Grace Griffiths, when she will disassemble this year's model.

This is the fifth space station Griffiths has built. It's a big hit with kids of all ages; parents love it, too.

"It's fun to see the parents' reactions when they come into the room," Griffiths said.

The cardboard structure is surprisingly sturdy; Griffiths glue-gunned everything to tables to keep the station together. Students are able to crawl around freely inside without difficulty, but do so cautiously.

"They're very careful," said Griffiths. "It's their property, their space built only for them, and they care. They're very respectful of it."

If nothing else, the RISE space station provides an indoor alternative to the outdoor playground, which can be less than desirable for winter recreation time with this season's lack of snow. This may be why Griffiths decided to build the structure in January.

RISE students have a few more weeks to transport themselves to other planets, contact mission control, and send their robots to study moon rocks; the space station will "blast off" and out of the classroom on March 9, said Griffiths, when she will disassemble this year's model.

Luckily for the kids, there are still plenty of afternoons to get "lost in space."

Kids in space!

RISE students answer the question:

What's your favorite part of playing in the space station?

- Andy Collins, 8, and Jonathan Tulio, 8, like the robot they built together out of tin cans, wire, shoeboxes and paper towel tubes: "It was the tallest!" said Jonathan.
Andy also likes playing inside the command center: "It's awesome... There are new batteries in the lights!"

- Devin Tulio, also age 8 (Jonathan's twin), said, "I love playing in the space station... there are different rooms."

- "It's really cool because it has computer parts," said Eimear Casey, 9. "You get to put in Lite Brites and use the microscope; you dress up as astronauts and pretend to go on missions."

- Lindsay Arruda, 8, Olivia Hinkler, 9, and Emma Humphrey all echoed Casey's statement: "It's cool!" Arruda said she likes playing with the station's toy frog, while Hinkler likes the frog, dog robot and stuffed animals because "we pretend we're doing tests for them."

- "It's really fun," nine-year-old Cassidy Curran chimed in. "I usually just play with my friends."
Best of all, summed up Humphrey, "You get to pretend you're in space."

Locally founded charity Children Without Borders, which operates health clinics in Costa Rica, announced during its Feb. 3 fundraiser in Hingham that it has changed its name to "Children's Well-Being."

The new name reflects the non-profit's mission statement, said Cohasset volunteer Anne Gallagher, who sits on the group's Hingham-based party planning committee.

"The name-change is a way to just continue the mission and move forward in the same direction," said Gallagher, explaining that there was "a trademark issue" with Doctors Without Borders that has since been resolved.

"The new name is reflective of the mission of the organization, and it's nice to keep the same acronym: CWB," said Gallagher. "Children's well-being is exactly what the organization stands for— it's perfect, I think."

The Boston Globe reported earlier this month that Doctors Without Borders had sent a cease-and-desist letter to Children Without Borders, which was founded in 2007 by Milton orthopedic surgeon Dr. George Whitelaw. The Milton non-profit responded with a lawsuit to prove that its name did not infringe on the Doctor Without Borders trademark. The case was settled out of court without CWB having to pay damages, the Globe reported.

The group unveiled the new name at the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham during CWB's annual fundraising party. Over 200 people attended the event, said Whitelaw in a phone call, adding, "It was one of the best [turnouts] we've ever had."

Gallagher said that over $35,000 was raised from ticket proceeds that night.

Whitelaw acknowledged that while the name-change "may cause some confusion," he hopes to "clarify that as much as possible."

"We're trying everything we can to prevent any confusion from occurring, though it's going to be inevitable," said Whitelaw. "I do feel the new name does represent what we're doing now; now, our mission is more preventive. Now, we're not trying to give a hand out, but give a hand up and out so we can help these children get out of the cycle of poverty and allow them to make their way in life... Medical care alone does not resolve it; you have to get into the family situation, psychology, dental problems... Educational and after-school activities round out the program. It helps them to see a way out of their situations."

Gallagher said that her goal, on the local level, is "getting more people involved and getting word out there."

"It's threefold," Gallagher said of the organization's mission. "Get the organization some more press and awareness locally, nationally and globally; raise funds to drive the mission—hiring people, opening new clinics, a recreation center to offer healthy activities for children and give them a place to gather when they're not at home or school; and just get volunteers interested in the organization."

Gallagher is currently the only Cohasset volunteer to sit on the Hingham party planning committee, but she hopes that will soon change.

"We would like to make [the fundraiser] a Hingham-Cohasset event, to bring the two towns together," said Gallagher. "Anyone interested in working on the committee or helping out with next year's party are absolutely welcome."

Gallagher also encouraged anyone who wants to donate time, money, clothing or other supplies can contact her at 781-923-1359 or the party planning committee's organizer Connacht Peterson at connachtpeterson@gmail.com to learn more; they can also visit the CWB's official website: http://www.cwb-foundation.org/.

The volunteer said that she was pleased with the number of Cohasset residents present during the Feb. 3 fundraiser in Hingham.

"I was grateful there was such a wonderful turnout from Cohasset folks," said Gallagher. "The board was pleased Cohasset folks came out to support the cause."

OUR VIEW

Mark your calendar

We wish we had the power to turn the clock back six months and get a fresh start. Maybe things could have been different.

Town Manager Mike Coughlin, who was hired to "shake things up," took charge when Tropical Storm Irene hit town and made sure that National Grid knew Cohasset was on the map. Other towns in our area served by National Grid did not have the same strong advocate — their residents sat in the dark long after Cohasset was fully powered up.

Judging from his quick response to Irene, we think Coughlin had the potential to be an outstanding leader for Cohasset at a much-needed time.

However, like all of us, Coughlin is not perfect. He is headstrong, determined, can overreact and take immediate action when it might have been wiser to "sleep on it."

When all is said and done, the Coughlin chapter could end up being a short but controversial one in the annals of Cohasset history.

For all intents and purposes, Selectmen have fired Coughlin, who has had to turn in his keys, cell phone and any other Town equipment in his possession. He cannot enter Town Hall or Town property without permission.

However, the ink on his termination has yet to "dry" because of steps detailed in the Cohasset Town Manager Act that give Coughlin the right to be heard. Between now and the hearing on March 13, there is a slight chance that things could turn around for Coughlin but at this point, he has an uphill battle.

Selectmen have Attorney Peter Berry of Deutsch Williams at their side and Coughlin has hired Attorney Douglas Louison of Louison, Costello, Condon & Pfaff, LLP.

Wednesday's short meeting when Selectmen voted to suspend Coughlin pending "final Resolution under the Act" was long on "legalese" and short on answers.

The rather bizarre Q&A session that followed, over the objections of Atty. Louison, in the Town Hall auditorium where Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr offered citizens the opportunity to vent simply raised more questions.

The public hearing slated for March 13 on Coughlin's performance as Town Manager is an important event.

The citizens of Cohasset deserve transparency and clarity. There is so much "noise" flying around —about what is right and wrong – that Cohasset is suffering from a collective migraine.

It's time to clear our heads. We don't think the March 13 hearing is going to be pretty – but it may be the only place where we can hear both sides of the story.

A brief tenure

DORMITZER & WAKEMAN

Prior to his tenure, the selectmen, town manager, Advisory Board and Capital Budget Committee collaborated in the development of the budget, in defined roles in accordance with state law, town by-laws and the Town Manager Act.

As many of you know by now, the selectmen made a difficult decision Wednesday evening and voted a resolution of removal of Town Manager Mike Coughlin. We support that decision. In the short six months of his tenure, Mr. Coughlin has alienated the chairs of the Water Commission, Capital Budget Committee, Advisory Board and Budget Planning Group. He has interpreted Cohasset's strong Town Manager Act as a ruling mandate, turning on its ear the collaborative processes by which the town has been successfully run for years, and angering the many members of those committees. Prior to his tenure, the selectmen, town manager, Advisory Board and Capital Budget Committee collaborated in the development of the budget, in defined roles in accordance with state law, town by-laws and the Town Manager Act. Mr. Coughlin has declared those roles inoperative and the budget to be unilaterally his document.

Appearing before the Governance Committee, Mr. Coughlin asserted that he had been advised by town counsel that the budget was his alone. We found this assertion unlikely. Town counsel, Mr. DeRensis, stated that he had specifically advised Mr. Coughlin to collaborate with the selectmen and committees on the budget. He believed that Mr. Coughlin was selectively interpreting conversations and rulings by his firm to support his own (Coughlin's) stated positions.

Two years ago after the first of the extraordinary deficits began in the Water Department, the town meeting voted to modify the authority of the water commissioners by adding the words "to be managed jointly by the Board of Water Commissioners and the Town Manager" to the original enabling act of 2003. Although intended to increase cooperation between the town manager and his finance department and the water commissioners, this rather ill-defined amendment muddied who had authority over myriad decisions that had formerly been the exclusive prerogative of the commissioners. Had Mr. Coughlin interpreted the amendment to require collaboration, it might have been possible to overcome the ambiguity of the language. Unfortunately he chose to interpret it as another mandate, creating conflict with still another group of volunteer Cohasset citizens.

In defense of Mr. Coughlin, many will point to his tireless work during hurricane Irene and his positive management of town employees. Yet even here, there is a belief that he used his relationship with the employees to create a "we/they" environment, setting up barriers for cooperation between the employees and the elected and appointed committees of the town.

The position of town manager in any town can be difficult, a balance between working with the elected selectmen, managing town employees, collaborating with the various elected and appointed committees in town, and coping with strong personalities. Over time, the accumulation of decisions and interactions negatively affecting one or another constituency will result in diminished political support for the individual holding the town manager job. It is highly unusual, however, for that political support to disappear so quickly as it has for Mr.

Accomplished a lot

MIKE COUGHLIN

We have also strived to forge an environment where our employees can do their jobs without undue influence and insisted on the highest of ethical standards.

My wife and I would like to thank all who showed up Wednesday night to express their support. We would also like to thank the many other members of the community who are standing by our side during this difficult period. It is perhaps the best evidence as to why I should be allowed to keep my job.

During the last six months, we have accomplished a lot for Cohasset. We have turned the Finance Department around and improved the town's reputation with the Department of Revenue by setting the tax rate — a task that most observers believed impossible. We have made important improvements to public safety such as modifying the command structure of both the Police and Fire Departments, launching new programs such as the K-9 unit, acquiring high mobility vehicles at no cost to the town, securing a voice in the supervision of the new emergency communications center and securing commitments to make long overdue renovations to our Police/Fire Station. Almost from scratch, we have established a new Operations Department to supervise our public works functions and to help oversee both water and sewer — a reform which was one of the foremost recommendations from the audit by Melanson and Heath. We have restored certification to our library, negotiated a memorandum of understanding to construct a new senior center and sought to expand the recreational programs available to our youth.

We have also strived to forge an environment where our employees can do their jobs without undue influence and insisted on the highest of ethical standards. This has not been easy and on many occasions we have had to fight this battle alone. Nowhere has this been more evident than in trying to get a handle on the issues of the water department. Even before I started on August 1, the Water Commissioners pushed the concept of a 20-year concession agreement based upon a contract that Aquarion Water had with the City of Elizabeth, New Jersey. I was initially optimistic that I could protect the interests of the taxpayers using the vote at the June 14, 2010 Special Town Meeting which established joint management. From the get go, this was resisted. Despite opinions from the Town Attorney, day by day it become evident that the town has heading on a collision course to make a possibly disastrous mistake which would effect the town for the next two decades.

On Tuesday, in perhaps one of my last actions as Town Manager, I filed a complaint with the Inspector General, the State Ethics Committee and the Public Integrity Division of the Attorney General's Office. The issues surrounding development of the RFP, the contacts that certain town officials have had with Aquarion Water and wisdom of entering into a long term contract on one of the most valuable town resources — water, needs to be looked into.

In their resolution, the Board of Selectmen claim that they do not share in common the same views as to how important matters should be handled or communicated. Well, when you encounter a bad deal such as this concession agreement — the way you handle it is easy — you just say no and what must be communicated is that Cohasset insists for no less than the highest standards of ethical conduct and adherence to the law.

HEALTH NOTES

Managing your medications

STEVE BOBO

In time, if one has ailments and sees assorted doctors for diagnosis of different disorders, the medicine cabinet is likely to contain a variety of pills and capsules. Soon, the number of bottles, boxes, capsules and containers may become difficult to manage and will require some attention. Key to managing medications is through organization to ensure they are taken safely and in a timely manner.

Daily pill organizer: At some point, a pill organizer can be very helpful. If you take several types of medications at different times and intervals, pill minders come in a variety of forms and have become quite sophisticated. Most have seven or more compartments to hold each day's worth of medication. To ensure medication is taken on a timely basis, it's useful to keep a dosage schedule nearby that also includes a physical description of each pill, such as "blue capsule" or "large white pill." Children, and younger members of the family are often attracted to an array of bottles jars, etc. in medicine cabinets for a variety of reasons. Pills can be accidentally ingested or even disorganized, which can cause potential overdosing. Another drawback; if you take a too many medications that might not fit in each compartment.

Create a dosing schedule chart. A way to effectively manage medication is to create a medication dosage schedule chart. This can be done on your computer generally with a spreadsheet or word processing program. List all medications, the times they need to be taken, and a space by each dose, so you can check off when each is taken. For those meds that are given "as needed," you may also want to include why it is taken. This can be annotated as "for nausea" or for whatever reason the medication is needed. Medications requiring refrigeration should also be noted in the spreadsheet.

Make a list of all medications with the name, dosage, frequency, side effects, and whether the medication has been stopped, suspended, etc. Also include any allergies you may have to specific medications. Make several copies and give them to doctors at appointments and to your pharmacist. Keep a copy stored in your medicine cabinet.

Waste disposal. The federal government has guidelines for throwing out prescription drugs that may help curb drug abuse, accidental overdose and protect U.S. water sources. Such guidelines generally recommend the following:

• Remove drugs from original container. By removing unwanted, unused, or expired medicine from its original container, you are ensuring that medicine will not fall in the wrong hands. Orange prescription bottles are easily recognizable and can be stolen from garbage cans and landfills.

• Mix drugs with undesirable refuse and throw in garbage. Guidelines suggest mixing medications with items like used coffee grinds or cat litter and placing them in a sealed bag, empty can or jar. Throw container in trash can. This extra step can prevent accidental overdose by children and pets and also possible drug theft.

• Take drugs to a pharmacy for safe disposal. Many pharmacies accept unwanted prescription drugs for safe disposal. If not, call the Board of Health at 781 383-4116 or hospital pharmacy and ask if they will accept your medicine.

• Do not flush old prescription drugs down the toilet unless otherwise stated on the label or in the drug information pamphlet given to you by your pharmacist. The Environmental Protection Agency is currently researching how prescription drugs affect U.S. waterways.

Check prescription labels often. When looking at prescription labels, check the expiration date and refill information. Properly discard old medication. When running low on a medication that has a refill, call your pharmacist before you run out. This way you will not miss any doses. If you think you may need a refill on a medication that has no refills left, call your doctor's office as soon as possible to allow time for the doctor to call the pharmacist.

The Town Nurse at Cohasset Town Hall will accept and dispose of your unused meds, but a disposal container is also in the hall of the first floor of Town Hall, as well as the police station.

Use a pill reminder. Several electronic pill reminders of varying prices are on the market. You can input the name of the medication, how often to take it, and if it is taken with food. An alarm will sound, much like an alarm clock or cell phone ringer, alerting you to what medication needs to be taken and how much. Also, some electronic pill reminders exist that can "talk," relaying information verbally.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Planting the seeds for success

Knowing where your food comes from and how to responsibly care for the environment are two large components of teaching at the farm and at area school farm gardens.

JON BELBER

Soon the farmers will gently tear open the many varieties of seed packets. In early March there will be wood stacked in the propagation hoop house, ready to heat the stove for a cold, late winter night. Rich, dark, balanced soil will be in large troughs, ready to be distributed into flats and trays for seed sowing.

The farmer may even look to coincide seed sowing with the new moon, to encourage the best germination for all the seeds. Then comes the steady, consistent and daily pace of sowing seeds, beginning with onions and peas and all the way to pumpkins and tomatoes. All these annual seeds and over-wintered perennials begin to grow and re-establish green growth. As seeds form sprouts, roots, stems and their first leaves, the greenhouse will be full of seedlings, in their infancy, beginning their life as a plant.

It is the charge of the farmer to observe these seedlings, to check all aspects of their growing conditions. A sunny day fills the hoop house with warmth and the increasing daylight encourages the growth of the seedlings. Once the plants are established and hardy, the farmer can transplant them to a larger pot or the ready ground. As the plants mature, the farmer needs to make sure it is a strong and healthy plant, ready for the outdoor climate and conditions. We prepare the ground by adding nutrient rich compost. Compost is the essential companion for every gardener. Whether it is made over the years in the backyard from kitchen scraps, seaweed and leaves or bought from a garden center, the compost helps any plant, as it is the best balance for the roots and the full growing season.

The two main components of a growing season are observation and compost. The farmer can start seeds in a controlled temperature environment, with healthy soil and continue the plants' production with the addition of compost. I have not mentioned adding any non-organic fertilizer pellet to jumpstart growth. I do not recommend purchasing a miracle spray that may kill nearby bugs, discourage weeds or perhaps prevent fungus and diseases. A strong healthy plant starts life without competition from weeds and without forming a dependency on an artificial fertilizer. The potentially harmful synthetic and chemical sprays harm all living organisms around the plant you are trying to grow. These fertilizers will also stay in the soil, stay in the root system and work their way into the entire structure of a plant. And what is hardest to see, is how the herbicides and pesticides infiltrate our water systems, and then works their way to our consumption.

Knowing where your food comes from and how to responsibly care for the environment are two large components of teaching at the farm and at area school farm gardens. A few years ago, the town of Scituate kindly stopped the annual application of herbicides, meant to keep the school lawns free of dandelions, at all the elementary schools. The children can know grow organic carrots, tomatoes and potatoes without worrying about whether they are safe. They can even pick a dandelion for a vase or study seed dispersal when it goes to seed.

Many gardeners, even if they have an organic garden plot, can now discontinue the four-step lawn treatment plans that may keep their lawn looking green, in favor of adding compost tea and other all-natural amendments. From Quincy to Marshfield there are organic landscapers committed to caring for the lawns and yards today and for the future. After working organically in a yard, one landscaper sets out signs on the lawn for all to see. They are not the little yellow signs telling children, families and dogs to stay off the lawn. The signs tell everyone to play on the lawn and in the yard.

Whether one grows their own plants or chooses to have an open play space, there are ways to have a healthy environment for all and safe food in every garden.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Mariner. He can be reached by email at jbelber-hollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

FOR THE RECORD

Police news gets tangled up in Web

There is no other intent on our part other than to print what's contained in the public record with regards to the police log and court news.

GREGORY MATHIS

This is the second part of a two-part column detailing our policy on police logs. This week's column focuses on the policy as it relates to online police log/court news content.

My kid was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

I'll get fired from my job.

It will be an embarrassment for my children at school.

My mother is ill and if she see this in the police log...

Ah, the police log.

Of all the calls editors and reporters deal with, calls about the police log can be the most difficult to deal with. By the time most people pick up the phone they are in desperation mode, asking, pleading, begging to have their name — or that of a loved one — removed from the online version of the police log.

Hopefully, reasonable people understand that journalistic integrity prevents us from making names vanish from the public record with the flick of a keystroke. It's not because we're cold-hearted and looking to ruin lives. There are certainly those who are victims of circumstance, caught in the wrong place at the wrong time, maybe hanging with the wrong crowd. But the validity of an arrest, or the seriousness of the crime, isn't up to an editor or reporter to decide or interpret.

When an arrest is made, there is a public record of the arrest and charges available in the police log kept at your local police department. From there, the case works its way through the court process, which is also part of the public record. The newspaper and/or website is just the vehicle for which that information is released. We're not judge and jury. There is no other intent on our part other than to print what's contained in the public record with regards to the police log and court news.

We understand errors are made or cases are resolved in numerous ways, either dismissed, continued without a finding or with some other resolution that maybe softens the blow of the initial arrest. Some cases result in a not guilty finding or charges being dropped.

That's where it starts to get tricky, especially from the online standpoint. In this day and age, anything and everything on the Internet is easily accessible by typing in a name in a search engine and that information lives on in perpetuity. That understandably creates a lot of anxiety for those who find themselves in this situation.

Our policy is we do not remove accurate information off the websites. That includes an initial arrest that is part of the public log, even if the case is dismissed. If there's a disposition to the case that can be verified through court documents provided by the named party, the disposition will be added to the online version of the police log in the form of an editor's note. The same holds true for a police story or brief. An editor's note would be added to those online files noting the disposition of the case. Corrections, of course, are printed in the newspaper.

We're not looking to get you fired or prevent you from getting a job by printing the police log in the newspaper or posting it online. We're not trying to embarrass your children. We're certainly not doing it to push your ill parent over the edge. We're just doing our job, without having to be judge and jury for every compelling story, and letting each case run its course through information contained in public records.

media is distracting everyone from conducting the important business of the town and causing many to question the intentions and basic decency of many individuals. This must stop," Kennedy read. She went on to say that Coughlin's opposition of the water commission's request for proposals was "not the reason we are here tonight... Town Meeting will have the final say." (See related story on page 1).

Carr told the gathered crowd, as he did before Monday night's executive session (see sidebar) that the public would not be able to comment during the meeting, but would rather be allowed to speak in the auditorium 10 minutes after the open session's adjournment.

Coughlin's attorney objected to this, saying that a public discussion of a personnel matter would be a violation of Open Meeting Law.

"I'm troubled by an off-the-book gathering to talk about my client's employment," said Louison.

Town Counsel argued, "There is nothing that prohibits one member of the board of selectmen talking to the public."

Roughly half of the large crowd stayed for the public discussion in the auditorium. All of the folks gathered seemed to be there to support Coughlin, and expressed their dismay with the selectmen. Many said that Coughlin should have been given more than six months to prove himself as town manager.

Adrienne MacCarthy stated that she felt Coughlin "did not get off to a proper start" and blamed that on the elected boards. "I feel that Cohasset has way too many chiefs... We have to have respect for the person we hired to do the job we hired him for."

MacCarthy added that she felt Coughlin had inherited a mess.

Karen Quigley agreed with MacCarthy, adding that she felt the blame lied "at the feet of the board of selectmen."

"Right from the very beginning, there was a lack of leadership from the board of selectmen to assert a policy, a tone, which is what the board of selectmen are supposed to do," said Quigley, "and to require the elected and appointed officials to behave in a respectful and supportive manner to an individual that the board of selectmen had just hired."

Paul Pattison asked why, after spending months searching for a strong town manager, the board was "throwing him to the wolves... What did he do?"

To offer some levity from the evening's "somber mood," accountant Eric Kinsherf, who has worked as Cohasset's interim finance director twice within the past year, told an anecdote about working with Coughlin. Kinsherf said the town manager is "very motivational" and has "good leadership skills."

While working after hours on a Friday night to get the tax recap sent to the Department of Revenue, Kinsherf said that Coughlin asked him if there was "anything he could do to help out." Kinsherf replied that he was hungry.

"He came back a half-hour later with a tuna sub and a Diet Coke," said Kinsherf. "Within an hour, that job was done."

Carr responded that he and Coughlin have "spent a tremendous amount of time together over the past six months" and that he has "very mixed emotions" over the selectmen's decision.

"I would say the one thing I'm most proud of is that I consider Mike Coughlin a very close friend of mine and hope to continue the friendship," Carr said.

As the crowd filtered out after the public discussion, Coughlin commented on the turnout.

"My wife and I are gratified by the huge outpouring of support from citizens, department heads and employees," Coughlin said. "It's the best evidence that I've done my job well over the past six months and that I should be allowed to continue. I look forward to making my case on the thirteenth."

Coughlin echoed this statement in an email sent Thursday morning (see letter to the editor). It appears that Coughlin will fight to keep his job as town manager.

Coughlin's attorney is also poised to fight for his client. Louison said after the selectmen's meeting that Coughlin filed a request for a medical leave of absence on Tuesday, which was prematurely leaked to the press. The leave of absence, under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act, allows an employee 12 weeks of protected, unpaid leave. However, the employee must have worked for the employer for at least 12 months. Since Coughlin has only been on the job for six, "the town won't honor his request," said Louison.

The attorney furthermore called the selectmen's decision to remove Coughlin after a mere six months "disgraceful."

Despite what Kennedy had to say about the board's real reason for suspending Coughlin, Louison said, "I think the RFP is the motivating factor here. It's an outrageous, huge mistake. The resolution [the selectmen] submitted is about minor issues of communication. If one examines the town manager's contract, the board is supposed to meet regularly" to evaluate the town manager's performance. "They never met. This was out of left field."

Until the public hearing, Carr said that, Jennifer Oram, the assistant to the town manager, will act as interim town manager. Both Coughlin and Oram said after the meeting that she will oversee the town manager's day-to-day administrative tasks only.

The matter of an interim town manager will be discussed during a public selectmen's meeting today, Feb. 17 at 4 p.m.

Coughlin's time in Cohasset

Since starting his term as town manager on Aug. 1, Coughlin "hit the ground running," according to the selectmen at the time, using the strong Town Manager Act to make decisions and implement structural changes that have caused him to butt heads with some board members.

Issues that have been fiercely debated during public meetings range from Coughlin's approval of the police K-9 unit without conferring with Capital Budget and the Advisory Committee (the dog was paid for by local grassroots fundraising efforts and donations); the town manager's disapproval of the Budget Planning Group's recommendation for a level-funded budget for fiscal 2013; and his ongoing dispute with Water Commission chairman Peter DeCaprio regarding the water department's plan to issue a request for proposals for a new 20-year contract (Cohasset's current five-year contract with American Water expires on June 30).

Coughlin, 53, whose yearly salary is $115,000, is a lawyer himself and has called himself a stickler for ethical practices and Open Meeting Law. Coughlin was dismissed as Southbridge's town manager in 2003 for poor fiscal management, according to the Worcester Telegram and Gazette, and forced to resign from Northbridge in 2006. Following a complaint filed by Coughlin, the Worcester district attorney's office ruled that Northbridge's selectmen and finance committee had violated Open Meeting Law, the Telegram and Gazette reported.

Coughlin was awarded a $200,000 settlement to avoid firing in Northbridge, according to a 2007 report by the New Bedford Standard-Times.

Coughlin then came to Cohasset after four years as town administrator in Westport, where he asked selectmen to change his contract to that of a strong town manager, according to South Coast Today. This was the type of town manager Cohasset selectmen said they were seeking when they hired Coughlin last year, praising his "can-do attitude" in the press.

Coughlin in August that said he pledged to "work cooperatively with [Cohasset's] boards and committees."

Cohasset's selectmen, however, indicated that they do not believe Coughlin has worked cooperatively, citing differences in communication as the reason for the town manager's removal without cause.

Executive session

The Board of Selectmen's office was packed with around 40 citizens Monday night, but the meeting that drew such a crowd was not a public one.

The selectmen held an executive session to discuss Town Manager Michael Coughlin's contract; the board also met behind closed doors last Tuesday night (Feb. 7).

Coughlin could have asked for Monday's session to be held in the open with his own legal representation, but said that there was not enough time or notice to prepare his defense. Monday night's agenda was posted after hours on Thursday afternoon, the town clerk confirmed, following revisions. Coughlin said he learned of this on Friday.

"As a consequence, I barely obtained legal representation in time," Coughlin said in a phone call Tuesday, adding that he met his attorney Doug Louison of Louison, Costello, Condon and Praff, LLP, only moments before Monday night's meeting. "I opted not to go forward prematurely until I had full opportunity to go over the issues with my attorney."

Louison addressed the selectmen before the board went into executive session, while the selectmen's office was still packed with people. He said that he had briefly conferred with Town Counsel Peter Berry and that he looked forward to reaching an agreement.

The large group of town employees, department heads, police officers and board members who gathered in Town Hall as a show of support to Coughlin on Monday were asked to wait downstairs in the auditorium, where Carr said he would meet the group after the executive session.

"I want to hear from all of you and will stay here to listen to everybody's comments," Carr said prior to the session, adding that he would stay in Town Hall "as long as it takes."

Folks waiting in the auditorium and out in the hall were murmuring that a public commentary with the selectmen chair seemed pointless following the executive session.

"They've already made up their minds," one of the supporters said of the selectmen.

The group waited for over an hour for the selectmen to come out from behind closed doors until Coughlin, who was making the rounds along with his wife, told everyone they could go home.

The selectmen ended their session around 9 p.m. and by then, most of the crowd had left the building.

Why folks originally opted to stay and voice their concerns was apparent; several stated off the record that they were there to not only stand up for the town manager, but to stand against a process they deemed unethical.

RFP

create the illusion that his stance on the RFP is the reason for his firing.

"It's ridiculously overblown that somehow this RFP has anything to do with what happened last night [Feb. 15] as far as the selectmen and Mike Coughlin" are concerned, said Seebeck. "I thought Diane did an excellent job of pointing out that the RFP is a request for proposals that has to be voted on on the floor of town meeting. So much work has to be done between now and then. To pretend the RFP being issued is some significant event in Cohasset... is playing upon people's ignorance. It's disheartening to me that something this ludicrous could be put forth."

Seebeck added that the clash between Coughlin and the water commission has been "hurtful for our ability to accomplish what we need to for this town."

"We did not start this dispute with him," said Seebeck. "He has not contributed to this RFP at all; he only brought it up in meetings for political theater purposes. It's not like we worked together behind the scenes — not at all. He was unwilling to work with us from the start."

The selectmen cited communications differences as the reason for Coughlin's removal without cause (see related story on page 1).

Questioning the process

Questions were raised during the Jan. 31 selectmen meeting about whether the water department's hiring of the firm Blatman, Bobrowski & Mead constituted a conflict of interest, since DeCaprio had previously hired the firm over a personal matter.

DeCaprio told the board at the time that the attorney said there was no conflict, and that he hired them because "they're terrific." Selectman Diane Kennedy said in defense of DeCaprio last week that any conflict would be the responsibility of the lawyers' to disclose, not the client's.

DeCaprio's involvement with the water department's RFP was further called into question when the board discussed his relationship to Aquarion, one of the companies that provided the water department some guidance on the RFP (along with current contractor American Water). Aquarion is owned by Macquarie Bank, which invested in DeCaprio's Scituate-based investment firm, Crow Point Partners.

While DeCaprio confirmed that a Macquarie entity had invested in his firm, he said that the two are no longer affiliated.

"My firm's relationship with a minor subsidiary of Macquarie was through a series of investment partnerships," DeCaprio stated in an email last week, saying that Macquarie invested "less than $15 million" of its total $200 million assets in DeCaprio's firm, "which is less than one one-thousandth of one percent of Macquarie's total assets." The Water Commission chairman maintained that his firm's partnership with Macquarie ended in 2009 and that Crow Point has bee a "private, employee-owned partnership since early 2011."

Aquarion's Vice President of Operations Harry Hibbard said that DeCaprio's relationship with one of the branches of Macquarie was slight at best.

"I don't believe it is getting in the way of Peter's objectivity," Hibbard said in a phone interview.

While the selectmen have rallied to DeCaprio's defense, calling him "one of the hardest working board members in town" and stating that DeCaprio's private business is "unrelated to the water department," Coughlin has been vocal about his belief that the water commissioner does have a conflict of interest.

Chief Procurement Officer

The town manager stated that he is trying to do his job as "chief procurement officer" on behalf of the town's citizens and ratepayers, and that he should be allowed to ask these questions.

"Since these issues arose, I have requested that the Town Attorney, Mr. DeRensis, on numerous occasions, supply ethical guidance on the ethical issues that may be present" with regard to the RFP, Coughlin said in a phone call last week, adding that he planned to contact the State Inspector General's Office, the State Ethics Commission and the Director of Accounts Jerry Perry about his concerns over the water department and their RFP because "I am required to report any event that may impact the financial stability of the town." The town manager said that, "as Chief Financial Officer," this is "my fiduciary duty independent of my duty to the Board of Selectmen."

Coughlin followed through on this promise, confirming Tuesday that he has filed a complaint with the Inspector General to block the water commission's RFP, which he said violates chapter 30B of Mass. General Laws "in that it was not overseen by the Town Manager," Coughlin wrote in an email. "Under applicable local by laws establishing joint management between the Water Company and the Office of the Town Manager, the RFP should be jointly issued by the Town Manager and the Water Commission."

Coughlin also issued copies to the State Ethics Commission and the Attorney General's office. Coughlin wrote in an email that this complaint has halted the RFP from being issued and that this would likely be his final act as town manager.

Many of Coughlin's supporters speculated while the selectmen met in executive session Monday night that this was the reason for Coughlin's dismissal or suspension, which was pending at the time — so the water commission could go ahead and issue the RFP without the town manager's approval.

However, Coughlin said that the RFP could not go through without his signature. Selectmen chairman Ted Carr confirmed the same following Monday's behind-doors meeting.

"Mike is still the chief procurement officer of the town," said Carr, adding that the selectmen plan to work with the water commission to move forward, somehow.

"Our law firms and the water department's special counsel, in conjunction with Peter DeCaprio, are trying to reach an agreement on the RFP... If they cannot, they are to present to us together a series of options the water commission and selectmen can opine on; if they're able to reach an agreement and all parties concur, the RFP will be released.

"I've made a personal commitment to work with Peter in a collaborative way, and I stand by that commitment," Carr said.

DeCaprio said that the document requires the signature of a chief procurement officer or a designated alternate. This alternate, whoever the interim town manager will be, will be decided on by the selectmen.

"All the alternate CPO has to do is make sure [the RFP] complies with Chapter 30B regulations, and it will," said DeCaprio.

Despite Coughlin's Ethics Complaint, which he said effectively blocked the RFP from being issued, DeCaprio said that the process "has never been halted."

"This is a Coughlin delusion," said the water commission chairman. "Town counsel and special counsel have been working diligently to move this thing along."

DeCaprio explained that one of the first things special counsel did upon being hired three weeks ago was to call the Inspector General, Attorney General and the Department of Revenue to discuss the RFP's structure. The only issues they had, said the water commission, were "minor concerns that are technical in nature that we are now addressing in a new document... we are on top of that issue."

"We started working on this thing in July before Mike was hired," DeCaprio continued. "The only thing we've had to do is work around [Coughlin's] constraints."

Seebeck concurred, "It's merely an illusion created by Coughlin that we were working around the system... the 'system' being Coughlin and that we're refusing to work with him. He's created this air that somehow we were trying to do something secretive; it's nonsense."

Rather, DeCaprio said he has been reaching out to members of the community to educate them on the RFP process and what the new water contract would entail; as of press time Thursday, DeCaprio was scheduled to speak at a luncheon.

"It's step one in the public education process — I told [selectman] Paul Carlson that if I needed to, I would speak every day for 90 days about this," said DeCaprio. "Today, it begins."

DeCaprio also wrote in an email Thursday that "there are likely to be multiple bidders for our RFP," not just Aquarion. "I get an email a day from other players in the water industry that are interested in what we are up to in spite of Mr. Coughlin's best efforts to derail the process... The point of an RFP is that the selection process is objective. It has to be."

The RFP, said Carr on Monday, "is one step in a series of steps" involving the town's water contract that will be presented at Town Meeting on May 12. "It will be up to the citizens of Cohasset to decide."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Challenges of Governance

Discord among Cohasset's full-time versus part-time elected and appointed Town leaders has been chronic during our 28-year residency. We have vested full-time leadership in a Town Secretary, Administrator, and now a Manager.

I have a unique perspective to offer based on an assignment as active duty full-time advisor to the New York State National Guard and Army Reserve. Human nature causes full-time employees to give "short shrift" to part-timers (whether they be guardsmen/reservists, or elected/appointed officials). "Short shrift" quickly leads to a lack of mutual respect and the breakdown of communications.

Hiring of key town officials is a daunting task. Experience shows that some applicants become very professional interviewers-it is what they do best. Other highly qualified candidate do not interview well. On the other side of the coin are many highly educated elected/appointed volunteer officials who come from the private sector. This pool of volunteers is critical to infusing a relatively stagnant full-time municipal workforce with new ideas and valuable experience.

Many volunteers find it difficult (or will not take the time) to understand the bureaucratic requirements of public governance. They sometimes try to "mold" local government into a reflection of the private sector. Unfortunately, too many well-intended part-time volunteers act precipitously and without sufficient knowledge or sensitivity to legitimate protocols of town governance. No solution is apparent and the taxpayer will pay dearly.

Ousting the town manager

We should be grateful to the selectmen for facing up to the embarrassing task of firing the Town Manager they had selected a few months ago. We should not be so naïve as to fall for the TM's ploy that firing him is to enable a plan to enter into an improper contract with the water department.

Falsely impugning the motives and integrity of the selectmen may serve some "need" of a few individuals, but does not serve the interests of the Town.

Whatever the unpleasant consequences of the firing must be weighed against the future consequences of not having done so.

Support for Town Manager

Editor's note: a copy of this letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

To the Cohasset Board of Selectmen,

This is just a short letter in support of our Town Manager, Mr. Coughlin. I'm sure I have missed some details of the recent happenings at Town Hall regarding employment contracts and Water Department RFPs but I believe Mr. Coughlin should be given a chance to do his job and not be let go at the first moment that he ruffles some feathers. It seems like the Board of Selectmen is getting a lot of practice at getting rid of employees and town volunteers.

Regarding the potential for a 20-year contract with Aquarian Water, I am not in support of that at all given what I have read and heard from dissatisfied Hingham residents.

'The Last Hurrah' at CDTC movie night

The CDTC invites you to view the classic, 1958 film "the Last Hurrah" about a city mayor's re-election campaign, in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library at 7 p.m.on Friday Feb. 17. CDTC movies are free and refreshments are served.

The film was directed by John Ford and stars Spencer Tracy. This film tells the powerful story of Frank Skeffington, a "sentimental but iron-fisted Irish-American" who was the powerful mayor of an American city in the Northeast.

In the political world of the '50's, when television was beginning to play a role in public life, Skeffington's old political strategies meet the test of a new political process. Using every tactic possible to defeat his opponent who is backed by that cities' civic leaders and one of the cities' newspaper editors, Skeffington struggles against the odds to get re-elected. Power politics, money and ethnic hatreds, strategies of Skeffinton's opponent, affect the election outcome of this formerly powerful mayor.

The film is based on the novel of the same name by Edwin O'Connor and was based in part on the life and career of Boston Mayor, James Michael Curley. Tracy's memorable performance made him the recipient of two major film awards. It's an old story of the influence of money currently playing out in today's politics some 50 plus years later.

PLYMOUTH NORFOLK DISTRICT

Davis announces candidacy for State Senate

The candidate provided this announcement.

Genevieve Davis of Norwell has announced her candidacy for the Massachusetts State Senate in the Plymouth Norfolk District, which includes Weymouth, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate.

Davis, a Democrat, wants to replace Sen. Robert Hedlund who has held the seat for 20 years. "I have over three decades of professional experience in the non-profit arena where I have devoted my energies to solving problems related to the needs of families and communities. Moreover, my work in non-profits has made me acutely aware of the problems facing small businesses where jobs are created. As a state senator, I will use my energy, experience and skills to marshal all of the state's resources to develop sound workforce policies, which will increase employment opportunities for the residents of this district and the state."

"According to the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, there will be minimal job growth through 2013, which will impact state revenues. If we are to make progress in this sluggish economy, we must look to new ideas and new leaders. We cannot be content with career politicians who are more interested in serving themselves than the people they represent," said Davis. "Robert Hedlund has become what he ran against 20 years ago when he opposed an incumbent of 26 years. He is now a senior legislator who is not using his years of experience to champion bold, proactive legislation. Instead he has used his knowledge of the public arena to give the appearance of activity where little exists."

Davis, who works in financial management, earned her bachelor's degree from Manhattanville College and a master's degree in business administration from Boston University. She is married to George Davis and they are the parents of two sons, Ian, a college graduate currently serving in the U.S. Navy and Evan who is currently a college student.

Davis has been an active community member, having served as an appointed member of the Norwell High School Parent Council and also served as one of the architects of a study that resolved overcrowding in elementary schools.

"I look forward to continuing my discussions with the residents of this district and hearing more about their concerns. I believe I can bring a fresh, new approach to solving the critical problems we face. Living in this district for almost 30 years has given me the insight needed to understand the complex needs of all of my constituents. If I am elected, I will not shrink from taking a stand on tough issues and I will never compromise the interests of the people in this district and the Commonwealth by acting in my own self-interest," said Davis.

Skippers become knockout artists

Skippers eliminate two hopefuls

By William Wassersug

For a couple of teams in the South Shore League, seeing the Cohasset boys basketball team as an opponent has meanth bad news.

While the Skippers have been rolling along on the way to a 14-5 record (11-5 SSL), opponents haven't been as fortunate.

Friday, Cohasset hosted Harwich on Fan Appreciation Night, and with a big home crowd, sent the vistors home with a 69-50 win that eliminated Harwich from MIAA Tournament consideration.

Cohasset controlled the game from the beginning, running to a 30-7 lead in the first quarter.

Eight Skippers scored and Cohasset kept the pressure into the half, where they led 50-24.

With the lead in hand, Cohasset used some different lineups and then played their younger players in the fourth quarter.

Shane Haggerty led Cohasset with 18 points, while Kyrel Jaundoo added 13.

Chris Murphy came off the bench to score 12 points.

Monday, the Skippers ended the tournament hopes of Mashpee with a 60-45 win at Mashpee.

Haggerty led the scoring charge with 24 points and Jaundoo added 16.

Again, the scoring went deep with eight players putting up numbers.

"Our bench has improved," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero

Upsetting weekend for opponents

Skippers hand Norwell first loss

GateHouse News Service

This year's Skippers boys hockey team has had an interesting season.

After a slow start, the Skippers have really started to click.

"In the beginning of the season," reflected coach Bob Walsh, "we were scoring enough goals to win games but we weren't able to keep the opposition from catching up and, in three cases, beat us in the last two minutes of the game. Even the two ties we ended up with, we just didn't have what we needed to finish."

It seems as though that was in the past.

In fact, since January 11th when Cohasset last lost, (to Mashpee/ Upper Cape Tech 7-5), on a Wednesday night in Hyannis it has been the past.

"Yeah, when the final buzzer sounded, we knew we choked. In fact, we left the rink with fans and players telling us "it's all over, go home"... not fun, but a good reality check for a talented team," said Walsh.

Since that night, the Cohasset Skippers have been nearly flawless and, with the exception of a tie against Rockland, have not lost a game. In the last eight games, Bob Walsh's Skippers have outscored teams 57-12. In addition, the Skippers have become the highest goal scoring team in Massachusetts Division 3 with 112 goals and have moved into the No. 5 spot in all of D3. "Although the boys are playing well, we still have 2 games to go and we know that it's how you finish that counts," says the coach.

The Skippers "upsetting weekend" began on Saturday night, with the rematch versus Mashpee/ Upper Cape Tech. "We were ready to play", said Walsh, "we had some really good practices in preparation with great flow. I knew we were ready."

Cohasset came out in the first period and maintained control of the puck for most of the game.

Big wins

Skipping Indians win three straight

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

As a first-year varsity program, the Cohasset/Hanover girls hockey team had a tough game getting into the win column.

That changed last Wednesday as the girls notched a solid 4-1 win over Norwell at the Rockland Ice Arena and the good vibes continued with wins over Oliver Ames/Mansfield and Quincy/North Quincy, both teams that had beaten the locals not long ago this season.

Hanover/Cohasset picked up win No. 2 on Saturday with an 8-3 win over OA/Mansfield.

Julia Dares scored three goals and added an assist, Taylor Graf and Nicole Farren each added two goals, Amanda Farren scored one to lead Hanover/Cohasset.

Sophie Arnold had three assists and Valerie Farren pitched in two helpers.

Monday at Quincy/North Quincy, Dares notched another three goals with an assist and Whitney Joy scored a goal, while Graf had a pair of assists in 4-2 victory.

"The team is really playing with confidence and aggressiveness," coach Deb Beal said. "The girls have worked so hard all season long and they weren't seeing the rewards on the score sheet but the past three games have been really special for them. They are training hard and they are very committed to improving their skills. I am really looking forward to the final week as I think we have Long trip and tough tourney

One grappler moving on to All-States

By William Wassersug
Wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset wrestling team found the going rough at the Div. 3 State Tournament over the weekend at Taconic High School in Pittsfield.

Only one Skipper placed in the top-six to advance to next week's All-State Tournament in Salem.

Ten Skippers wrestled, including Matt Froio, who saw action while heading to the tourney as an alternate.

For Cohasset, the lone place winner was Mike Livingstone, who finished sixth at 195.

"Mike won three of his first four matches to put him in the medal round," coach Torin Sweeney said. "He too sixth place and will absolutely be going to the All-States."

While only one placed, Cohasset had some solid wrestling and some exciting matches.

Greg Berube (113) won a match, while Gus Helbock finished 2-2, just missing the medal round.

"Gus lost his first match and that put him behind the eight-ball," Sweeney said. "I'm sure he would have liked that one back. He was in a quality group. Eight kids in that group were coming back. It was one of the toughest classes."

At 145, Graden Foley won his first match before dropping his next two.

Derek Froio notched two victories in the tournament, finishing an unofficial eighth.

He lost to a State placewinner with 10 seconds left to go in the match," Sweeney said. "It was Frank Weir from Hampshire. That knocked him out."

Hampshirefinished the tournament with a state champ, two second place finishers and two thirds.

That's something to know as Cohasset will open their Team State Meet against them at Tsongas Arena at

SKIING

Notre Dame skiers remain undefeated

Brown wins third Individual Championship

The Notre Dame Academy alpine ski team continued its march towards a fourth straight Ski East League championship with three more dominating performances over the past week.

The Cougars of NDA have now won six races this year and are looking at extending their unbeaten streak to four straight years.

With the lack of snow locally, this race season has been very challenging in trying to get races in at Blue Hills but with the cold temps, snowmaking allowed NDA to compete on February 8 in a giant slalom race under the lights. The Cougars once again raced to an impressive victory putting six racers in the top 11 spots.

Leading the way was junior Amelia Brown who finished in first place overall with a blistering fast time of 25.01 seconds. Coming in second for NDA was senior captain Marie Gilman with a very fast time of 25.76 which was good for fourth place overall. Finishing right behind Gilman in fifth place was junior Erin Murray with a great time of 26.71.

Grace Petro, a junior, had a great race with an eighth place finish and a time of 27.89. Sophomore Victoria Mulkern finished in ninth place with a great time of 28.29.

Audrey Madigan continued to race well as the junior put up an 11th place finish with a time of 28.59.

Sophomore Colleen Cassidy racing in her first varsity meet laid down a great run and finished 18th overall with a time of 30.08. Freshman Julia Anderson finished right behind Cassidy with a 19th place finish and a time of 30.12. Junior Katie McNamara finished the course in 30.64, good for a 22nd place finish.

NDA's fifth and sixth races of the season were held at Ragged Mountain in New Hampshire last Saturday with a giant slalom in the morning and an afternoon slalom run. The morning run was the annual AJ McEachern race, held in memory of a young Ski East racer who died way too young. NDA again showed its incredible depth by putting five skiers in the top nine and racing to an easy victory over second place Hingham High School.

Winning her fifth straight race of the season was Amelia Brown, finishing the course with a blazing time of 23.35 seconds. Marie Gilman finished in third place overall with a fantastic time of 23.67. Grace Petro and Jess Peterson finished in fifth and sixth place respectively with fast times of 25.23 and 26.13.

Erin Murray once again showed her consistency by finishing in the top 10 with a time of 26.25, good for ninth place overall. Julia Flanagan continued her great freshman season with a 15th place finish in 27.94.

Katie McNamara and Victoria Mulkern finished in 16th and 17th place respectively with McNamara putting up a time of 28.01 and Mulkern with a 28.06. Colleen Cassidy finished with a time of 31.32 which put her in 35th place overall.

The afternoon run was slalom with very icy conditions which made for a very challenging course.

Winning her sixth straight race of the season and clinching her third straight league championship was Hingham native Amelia Brown.

The junior remained undefeated this season and now has tied previous NDA racers, Nicole Wesson, McKenzie Wesson and Amanda Morrissey by winning the league individual championship three times.

Brown's time on the treacherous course was 27.88 seconds which was more then a second over the next closest finisher. Grace Petro finished in fourth place overall with a fantastic run of 32.33 seconds. Erin Murray put up another great finish with a sixth place finish and a time of 33.90. Julia Flanagan had her best finish of the year with an eighth place showing and a time of 37.88. Colleen Cassidy also had her best finish of the year, coming in 16th place with a time of 41.30 Katie McNamara finished in 18th place with a time of 42.52.

Jess Peterson rounded out the scoring for the Cougars with a time of 45.24, good for 23rd place. Marie Gilman, Audrey Madigan and Victoria Mulkern all had tough runs and were disqualified. Notre Dame finished again in first place by a wide margin.

NDA finishes the season this week with two races at Blue Hills.

The team includes skiers from Cohasset.

peaked at just the right time and we will soar into next week."

The Skipping Indians will be playing in the Notre Dame Cougar Classic Tournament next Tuesday and Thursday and face Marshfield again on Wednesday.

Beal also wanted to put in a word for the junior varsity team that has worked hard and played well.

"The "junior varsity" squad has had many opportunities also to play some games and they are a completely different group of skaters than they were at the start of the season," Beal said. "We have a few veterans on that team that are really starting to show their abilities and we have a group of new skaters that have made tremendous strides throughout the past three months.

"I have been so pleased with their dedication to this team. Many of them had never played in a hockey game before and their confidence has been quite impressive. They finish off their season this Wednesday with a game in Falmouth. They had five or six opportunities to play in a game. Its been very rewarding watching their progression. Their future in this program looks bright and it is critical that they continue to skate and play in the off season as not to let the skills they have gained this winter diminish."

said. "They're now contributing minutes and scoring."

Henry Brown, a 6-2 sophomore scored five points in the second quarter at Mashpee.

The second quarter was a big one.

Along with Brwon's five, Haggerty notched 11 in the frame and Cohasset went into the half with a 32-27 lead.

In the third quarter, Mashpee made a run, cutting Cohasset's lead to 44-41, spurring the Skippers to go back to the press.

The plan worked as they forced turnovers and went on a 16-4 run and held Mashpee without a field goal in the fourth quarter.

"Kyrel shut down Mashpee's big scorer," Ruggiero said. "He had scored 15 in the first half. He did an outstanding job defensively."

In the final minutes, Cohasset used their 'slow burn' offense to slow the pace and Robbie Mahoney capitalized with a pair of buckets with the shot clock at five.

The winning continued with a 70-50 win at East Bridgewater on Monday.

Nine players scored in this one for the Skippers.

Christian Davis and Rocco Laugelle played well at the front of the press.

"We went up 21-10 to kick start the first period," Ruggiero said. "We led 40-18 at the half."

Four players finished in double figures for Cohasset.

Jaundoo had 15 points, Haggerty added 12 and Davis scored 11 to go with his top-notch defense.

Mahoney added 10 points and 10 rebounds for the double-double.

Brown and Laugelle each chipped in eight.

The Skippers will host Chatham on Monday night and close out the regular season hosting Div. 1 Medford.

"That will be a good test for us," Ruggiero said. "It's good to play a larger school, a team that plays a different schedule, a different style. They play teams like Somerville, Malden and Everett. It should be fun."

Wednesday is also Senior Night for the boys and it is also Cohasset Youth Basketball night.

All Cohasset Youth Basketball players in their jerseys get in free.

Ruggiero said this has been a good season.

"It has been a very enjoyable year," he said. "It's my fourth year here and I love it."

Basketball and dodgeball tournaments set for February vacation week

Get your teams together and break up the school vacation boredom with the South Shore YMCA popular 3-on-3 Swish Basketball Tournament and the new Dodgeball Tournament for both boys and girls in grades 5-8.

On Tuesday, Feb. 21, the South Shore YMCA at Mill Pond, Hanover will host a Dodgeball Tournament, and on Wednesday, Feb. 22, the YMCA will host the 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament. Both games will start at 11 a.m.

"These tournaments are a great way of getting together with friends, having fun, and getting exercise," explained Sport & Recreation Coordinator Chere Marrese. "The 3-on-3 basketball tournament has been a huge success the last several years with many enthusiastic participants. We're very excited to try dodgeball for the first time this year. With the warm weather and lack of snow, I can't think of a more fun, exciting, and inexpensive way to break up the school vacation week."

The YMCA hosts these tournaments during the school vacation weeks to provide a safe environment for young children to gather with friends and have a good time. With the new dodgeball tournament as an option, more children will be able to participate.

Both tournaments will be double-elimination with prizes for the winning team and are co-ed for players of all abilities. Dodgeball is $50 per team for full members and $75 for non-members. Basketball is $30 per team for full members and $40 per team for non-members. Registration closes at 8 a.m. the day of the tournament.

For more information contact Chere Marrese at 781 829-8585 ext. 349 or email cmarrese@ssymca.org. The South Shore YMCA is committed to strengthening our communities by nurturing the potential of kids, promoting healthy living and fostering a sense of social responsibility.

the end of the month.

"They're 14-1-1," Sweeney said. "But I have a good feeling that we match up well with them. They're not as strong in the lighter classes that are our strength, and in the upper classes, our kids wrestled a few of theirs and all those were very close."

At 160, Matt Froio won a match as an alternate, winning with a late takedown to beat a Hampshire wrestler 7-6.

Chris Brash lost his first match and won his second before bowing out in his third match of the weekend at 170.

Steven Maher did the same in 182 action.

At 220, Zack Washak wrestled well, but lost to a No. 1 seed in the first match.

Heavyweight Mike Yerardi lost by one point to the No. 1 seed in triple overtime.

"As a freshman, that was quite an accomplishment for Mike," Sweeney said. "He wrestled well."

This week, Cohasset will practice for the Team State Meet and will be cheering on Livingstone at the All-States.

Cohasset will be the No. 9 seed with an 18-9 season record.

Hampshire is 14-1-1 and seeded eighth.

HOCKEY

Sophomore Terence Doonan started the team off with the first goal of the night within the first three minutes of the game.

Sophomore Tommy O'Brien followed that up with a goal late in the period but with the Skippers up 2-0 at the end of the first period, they were nearly done. The second period was a physical period but the Skippers kept pouring it on with senior captain John Collins, (back from an injury), scoring two goals putting Cohasset up 4-0 after two periods.

"It was great having JC, (John Collins), back in the lineup," said Walsh. "He had sprained his wrist a few weeks ago and hadn't given it enough time to heal so I scratched him from the lineup for two games. JC is one of the most confident and best playmakers I've ever worked with. A great guy to have on the team and a great teammate."

The third period was no different with the Skippers dominating the ice.

Mashpee/UCT had opportunities and managed to score late in the third period but it was too little, too late and with less than one minute in the game, senior captain Alex Evans scored the final tally for Cohasset making the final score 5-1.

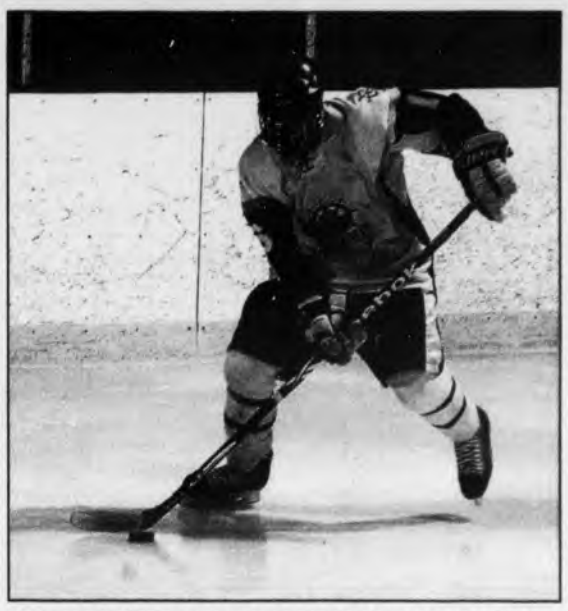
"It was a great win for us," said the coach. "Whenever you're the underdog, it sets up a great game."

The Skippers are no strangers to being the underdogs when it comes to the matchup that followed the very next night when Cohasset stepped on the ice to face the league leading Norwell Clippers.

"These two schools have a great competitive history," remarked Walsh. "Because of the rivalry, there is more of a college feel to the games with fans packing the house and the cheers going back and forth. It's hard to keep your team focusing on the game as "just another game." I like the sense of urgency the boys are currently playing with but it takes them a little longer to get settled in to the contest and find their groove. It's hard to not let the crowd get into your head as a player."

Both teams came out and played a physical game with NHL style hits on the ice. Norwell came out hitting hard in the first period, putting the pressure on the Skippers.

"Great physical play by both teams," said Walsh. "Just great clean hits. My biggest concern was that we had just come off a very physical game just 24 hours before."



Tonight a combination of adrenaline and skill took over for the Skippers with junior assistant captain Connor Goetz starting off the scoring late in the first period assisted by sophomore Tommy O'Brien and senior captain Jamie Faber. Two minutes later, after a play from sophomore Mickey Barry and line mate Connor Goetz, Tommy O'Brien blasted a slapshot past goaltender Jack Christian, putting Cohasset up 2-0 at the end of the first period.

The second period action continued with physical play and heavy hits with the Skippers winning most of them. Then at 6:54 of the period, senior assistant captain Vinny Calorio scored, assisted by senior captain Alex Evans and sophomore defenseman Mickey Barry.

"This was a goal that came from hard work with Barry sending Eves in with Vinny on the far side of the net. Alex put a nice puck on net and Vinny put it in. Just a really nice bang, bang play," said Walsh.

Less than two minutes later, sophomore Terence Doonan combined with Jamie Faber on a beautiful 2 on 1 to put the Skippers up 4-0 at the end of two periods.

As third period action resumed, the two teams of warriors came onto the ice with fans making noise as if at the Boston Garden. The Clippers weren't about to give up coming right at Cohasset and at 4:42 of the period, David Talanian scored beating Brandon Winn for the Clippers' only goal of the night.

The Skippers were not to be denied tonight and responded 35 seconds later when senior captain Alex Evans scored unassisted on Jack Christian ending the game and completing the second upset of the weekend with a huge 5-1 upset victory.

"Tonight's game was a great team effort," said Walsh. "Offensively, we played and scored but something that occasionally gets overlooked, is how good we are in the defensive end of the ice starting with our goaltending. Brandon Winn's confidence level is exactly where it needs to be. He is fulfilling the expectations we had when we started the season giving his team confidence to do what they need to do to win games. A great deal of that confidence comes from the defensemen playing in front of him. These guys play a physical game protecting him and keeping the path in front of him clear to be as effective as he is. That is a total team effort. The chemistry of this team is the best I've had in my six seasons here at Cohasset. I've had good core groups and good individual players in the past but none of those teams are as close as this one is. From freshmen to seniors, there is no one who holds himself over the others."

The Skippers have two remaining games in the regular season.

The first is on Wednesday night against league rival East Bridgewater at the Bridgewater Ice Arena in Bridgewater at 8 p.m. and the final game at home at the Weymouth Connell Memorial Rink where the Skippers will have their "Senior Night" hosting Abington High School at 8 p.m. on Saturday Feb. 18.

Happy February break everybody! This school week seemed to drag on forever, but vacation is finally here. Although it feels like December break was just last week, I'm sure everyone is happy to have some R&R. Whether you're staying here in Cohasset, or traveling to a tropical location, I hope you have a great February break!

The regular season for winter sports is wrapped up this week. The boys' hockey team crushed an undefeated Norwell squad 5-1 on Sunday night — good job boys! Their next game is Saturday at 8 pm against Abington. The girls' basketball lost a close game to EB on Senior Night Wednesday, and then played against Nantucket on Thursday. The boys' basketball team tipped off at EB on Wednesday as well. Additionally, the girls' hockey team is on a winning streak, and have won their past three games by large margins. The three wins and one tie are their only of the season, showing their massive improvement since the first practice in November. The girls deserve to be congratulated for these historic wins — the first ever for the new Cohasset Girls' Varsity Hockey program! For more information, see the sports section.

Love was in the air on Valentine's Day this Tuesday. The February edition of the Spinnaker released, and Candy Grams were handed out to students in the morning. The Candy Gram fundraiser raised a lot of money for the Spinnaker and was a huge success. Plus, who doesn't like getting a lollipop and a love note from a secret admirer?

Thursday was an Advisory period. Some talked about college, others suggestions for school improvement.

The French Exchange is next year! In October, French students live in Cohasset for two weeks, and in February, Cohasset students do the same in France. Students enrolled in French 4 or higher by Spring 2013 may participate in the exchange with the Lycee Chistophe Colomb school in Sucy-en Brie, France. Applications are now being accepted, so talk to Mr. Kotter for details.

This year the Fine Arts Department will be replacing the Eat Your Art exhibit with another innovative exhibition of student artwork, the first annual recycled pARTS! The challenge is to create a piece of artwork from things that might ordinarily end up in a landfill (such as bottles, cans, plastics, or even found objects like old shoes or computer parts!). Students in the middle and high school are encouraged to start brainstorming and saving objects to use for the exhibition. You do not need to be enrolled in an art class to participate, so spread the word! The event takes place on March 7th at 6 pm in the Middle-High School cafeteria and is open to all ages. You may enter as an individual or a group – even adults or entire families can enter! See Ms. Berkowitz for more information, and check out the example dress in the High School office for inspiration.

There are multiple student-generated charity drives going on at the Middle-High school. First, Goods for the Homeless is asking for hand sanitizer, Kleenex, gloves, socks, hats, tooth brushes and paste, granola bars, coffee shop gift cards, hand lotion, rain ponchos, gum, mints, and basic first aid supplies. Goods for Troops is also looking for donations, and more information will be provided to students in school. If you wish to donate any goods, boxes are set up in the high school.

Just a reminder that the Mr. Skipper Pageant is scheduled for Friday, March 16th in the auditorium. High school boys will compete to gain the much-coveted title of "Mr. Skipper," showing off their signature wear, intellect, and talent. This event is the biggest fundraiser for the senior class, and, with the cancellation of the Semi-Formal dance, is much needed! Local businesses: please consider donating items for the raffle. For information about donating to the raffle, please contact a senior member of the Student Council: Kyrel Jaundoo, Ellie Tedeschi, Aniko Haber, or myself.

Well, have a great February Break Cohasset! See you in March.

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

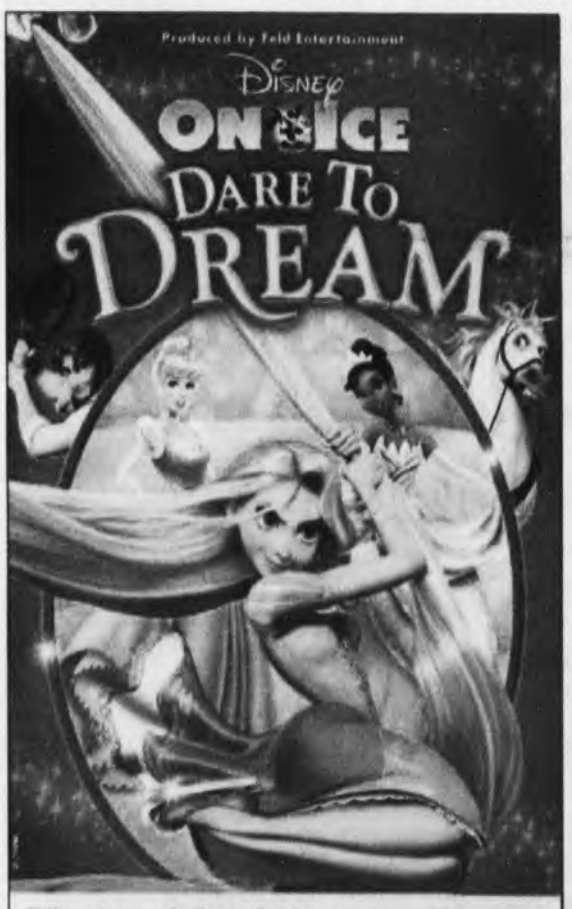
SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Polar Plunge set for March 3



March Madness starts early, on Saturday, March 3, this year. It's the 14th Polar Plunge (formerly Passion Plunge) for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA). If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it. There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Last year, close to 1,000 plungers jumped into the Atlantic Ocean, about half at Nantasket. They raised $360,000 for SOMA (8 percent of the annual budget). Since athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are vitally important in providing year round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for our 13,000 athletes statewide. They range in age from 2 (Young Athletes Program) to 86 (Senior Sports).

In addition to sports training and competition, these donations support Special Olympics' now worldwide "Healthy Athletes" Program," founded here in Massachusetts in 1994, providing free screening in medical and dental issues for our athletes. Of 1,068 athletes screened in 2011, 173 were referred for treatment, including one sent directly to the hospital after finding he'd recently had a heart attack. The joint-ventures with UMass Medical School and Regis College train med students, residents, nurses, and doctors in working with people with Intellectual Disabilities, which will lead to quality healthcare for a host of others with ID in the future.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 12th time, is a 12 sport-athlete, and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which will include Cohasset plungers: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Bill Greentree, Steve Myers, Maria Osborne, Jeff Nothnagle (past Board Chair), Graham, Nick, and Charlotte Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus many from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program, which has 100 athletes from age 6 to 71 from seven area towns.

The public is invited to Nantasket Beach on Saturday, March 3, to support the athletes with a pledge. You can do this with a check to your favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or on-line at www.PolarPlungeMA.org, where you can also register to plunge

Chamber of Triumphs for the Atlantic Symphony

The Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's chamber players offered breathtaking solo performances and a delicious rendition of an Astor Piazzolla trio at the ASO's annual Chamber Concert on Sunday, Feb. 11, at Hingham's House of Prayer Lutheran Church. Pictured from left are ASO principal cellist Holgen Gjoni, who played an unaccompanied J.S. Bach suite; ASO concertmaster Ethan Wood (playing Sarasate and Kreisler violin works); pianist Pei-yeh Tsai (two Rachmaninoff etudes); violist Wenting Kang (a Faure work and Piazzolla's Le Grand Tango); bassoonist Adrian Jojatu (a Weber fantasie); and ASO principal oboist Andrew Price (a Charles-Joseph Colin piece, and Piazzolla's Ave Maria.)

Pei-yeh Tsai also accompanied the bassoon, violin, oboe and viola soloists. And with Wood and Gjoni, she joined in playing Invierno Porteno (Winter), a moving, beautifully rendered rhythmic trio from his Cuatro Estaciones Portenas (The Four Seasons of Buenos Aires.)

Next up for the ASO: The exciting finale of its annual Concerto Competition, Sunday, March 4, at 4 p.m. at Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts, Braintree. The gorgeous Thayer hall, where the ASO serves as resident orchestra, is at 745 Washington Street, just up the hill from the Braintree Rotary exit from Route 3.

The competition attracts outstanding young professional musicians – 18 to 30 years old – as they compete for cash prizes and the opportunity to perform with the ASO. In a sort of classical, instrumental version of "American Idol," audience members watch them perform for judges.

Next up for the ASO: The exciting finale of its annual Concerto Competition, Sunday, March 4, at 4 p.m. at Thayer Academy's Center for the Arts, Braintree.

Tickets for the ASO Concerto Competition ate $25 for adults, $20 for seniors, and $10 for those 18 and under. Contact ASO managing director Jim Hartford at 781-331-3600, or visit www.atlanticsymphony.org for tickets.

GIMME SHELTER

Oliver's favorite pastime is looking out the window at the birds. He's up to date on all his shots, neutered and of course, litter trained. COURTESY PHOTO

Ollie purrs up a storm

Ollie is friendly and adores being petted. He purrs up a storm when you give him attention, but is not at all demanding.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for a home for Oliver. Ollie is a two-year-old, jet black, male cat. He was brought to the shelter by someone who rescued him from a possible coyote attack. HSAR is sure that Ollie once had a loving home. He is friendly and adores being petted. He purrs up a storm when you give him attention, but is not at all demanding. His favorite pastime is looking out the window at the birds. He's up to date on all his shots, neutered and of course, litter trained.

Ollie not unhappy at the shelter but he would prefer to be in a home. Please stop by to meet Oliver. He may very well be the one you've been waiting for.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

Tickets are available for $15, by calling Second Congregational Church at 781-383-0345 or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with a check. Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF FEB. 27, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The adventurous Aries won't be disappointed with taking on a new challenge, despite some initial misgivings. Look for this move to open other opportunities down the line.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Let that beautiful Bovine smile not only put you at ease, but also show that you're ready, willing and more than able to confound the naysayers around you. A new admirer has important news.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be careful how you handle a relationship that you're hoping to save. You already have the facts on your side. Avoid weakening your position by embellishing it with unnecessary dramatics.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking definitive stands isn't easy for the often-wavering Moon Child. But you not only need to stay with your decision, but also reassure others it was the right thing to do.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As a proud Lion, you're right to be upset about those who might be lying about you to others. But the best revenge is proving them wrong by succeeding at what you set out to do.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Caution is still advised before making a financial commitment to a "promising" project. Look for the facts behind the fluff. Devote the weekend to loved ones.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A Taurus offers comfort and advice as you deal with an upsetting event. Use this as a learning experience that will help you avoid similar problems in the future.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A romantic situation creates some chaos for single Scorpions. But it's well worth the effort to work things out. A trusted friend can offer some helpful advice.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Expect to make new friends as your social circle expands. Also, remember to tell that family member how proud you are of his or her achievements.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) New ventures continue to be favored. And with your self-confidence rising all the time, you'll want to see how well you can do with a new challenge. So, go to it.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This is a good time for the usually "serious-minded" Aquarian to let loose and enjoy some fun times. Expect to get good news about a workplace issue.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Changed plans might upset some people, but your needs should be respected. Offer explanations when necessary. But don't let yourself be talked into changing your decisions.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for bringing people together. You would make a fine judge or counselor.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Anthology to perform at First Parish Cohasset

Celebrate Valentine's Day with Anthology, a professional women's vocal quartet based in Boston. They will perform a mix of folk, jazz and classical selections on the topic of love and weddings at First Parish Cohasset at 3 p.m., on Sunday, Feb.19. First Parish is on the green at North Main Street. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Anthology will offer a varied mix of songs. This time around they will present a program full of songs about love and marriage. From the wedding marches by Purcell, Wagner, Pachelbel and Mendelssohn, to classic jazz numbers like "Orange-Colored Sky" and "I Got Rhythm," to a love song by Sinead O'Connor, the one constant will be that four women's voices will make all the music.

Anthology is a professional quartet of women's voices. Their variety of music is presented with the polish of classical training and whimsy that rises from an enthusiasm for all styles of performance. Anthology's repertoire is a collection of classical choral music, jazz, Renaissance polyphony, world folk traditions, and music from the razor's edge of local Boston compositions. Anthology sings fresh new arrangements of old classics, discovering new repertoire in children's songs, TV anthems, popular music and anything that inspires them. It is hoped the audience will Anthology's a cappella four-part delights. Anthology is Michelle Vachon, Vicky Reichert, Anney Gillotte and Allegra Martin, who is also the music director of First Parish Cohasset.

UPDATE

Annual Cohasset RE Activity Report

Cohasset residents took advantage of the March 2011 changes to the Massachusetts Homestead Law by recording 176 Declarations, an impressive 45 percent jump from the previous year.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported recently on real estate activity in Cohasset for 2011.

Cohasset real estate activity showed some definite signs of improvement over the past year. Growth was seen with the average sale price of both commercial and residential property in Cohasset. Cohasset's average sale price in 2011 was $1 million. This 27 percent improvement from 2010's average price was most likely influenced by transfers of commercial rather than residential properties.

Similarly, the total volume of commercial and residential sales this past year reached $119 million, an 8 percent climb from 2010. The number of actual land transfers, however, in Cohasset for both consideration and nominal consideration decreased by 7 percent from last year with 201 deeds recorded. Despite historically low interest rates in 2011 the amount of new mortgages recorded decreased by 16 percent.

In addition to the actual number of mortgages recorded, Cohasset mortgage indebtedness dropped by 33 percent from 2010's figures. Cohasset residents took advantage of the March 2011 changes to the Massachusetts Homestead Law by recording 176 Declarations, an impressive 45 percent jump from the previous year.

Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing.

The Registry's online index is available from 1900 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. Complementing the Registry's efforts to expand and increase the accessibility of land records the Registry now accepts electronically transmitted documents. E-filing allows a real estate professional from not only Norfolk County but from across the country to send and record documents within minutes at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds. To learn more about this technology and/or other services offered by the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call the Customer Service Department at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Heart attack suspected in fatal crash

On Thursday (Feb. 9), at about 5:40pm, the Cohasset Police Department's emergency dispatch center received reports of a single-car, motor vehicle crash on Beechwood Street near the intersection of Bound Brook Lane.

First arriving officers determined that the driver, an 86-year-old Cohasset man, was in cardiac arrest. Emergency personnel from Cohasset Police and Fire Department's administered CPR. The victim was subsequently transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth where he was pronounced dead.

Witnesses on scene stated that the man had been traveling west on Beechwood Street when his vehicle, a 2005 Honda Accord, crossed over the East Bound Lane and went into the woods striking several small trees and a National Grid pole.

This crash is under investigation by the Cohasset Police Department and the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office.

"At this time, based upon witness statements, it appears that the victim suffered some type of medical episode before he lost control of his car," Deputy Chief William Quigley said. "A final determination will be made when the investigation is complete."

Milanoski appointed acting TM

Cohasset resident ready to tackle he budget

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Two days after voting to suspend Town Manager Michael Coughlin with pay, the Board of Selectmen met to appoint an acting or interim Town Manager.

After some discussion during their Friday, Feb. 17 meeting, the board asked Michael Milanoski if he would be willing to serve as a volunteer, acting town manager for the next two weeks. The acting town manager will sign off on warrants, payroll and purchase orders, and will also advise on the fiscal year 2013 budget that is currently being developed for the May 12 Town Meeting.

"A lot of stuff has to happen; we need a sustainable budget that also maintains the services that the citizens expect."
— Michael Milanoski, acting Town Manager

Milanoski, an economic development consultant who serves on both the Governance Committee as chairman and as an associate member of the Conservation Commission, accepted the appointment. The Governance Committee was created by the Board of Selectmen last fall and was charged with looking into town boards and commissions, as well as the selectmen's actions concerning the Cat Dam hearings and the way they ousted three longstanding Conversation Commissions without warning.

NEWS UPDATE

Water issues RFP

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Despite recent controversies, the Cohasset water department has issued its request for proposals (RFP) for a new water contract. The department's current five-year contract with American Water ends on June 30 this year.

The RFP faced obstacles when the water commission's process in drafting it was called into question by the town manager. Town Manager Michael Coughlin took issue with the water commission's proposal to ink a 20-year concession contract (which is one of many options that will be voted on at Town Meeting on May 12, the commission has said), along with the commission's hiring of its own legal counsel apart from town counsel to draft the RFP. The board of selectmen agreed that the commission should have come before them first, as the selectmen are in charge of hiring counsel, while the water commission maintained that they had the right as a private entity under the Special Act of 1886. The water commission's firm, Blatman, Brobowski & Mead, stands by the water company's independent authority under this special act.

Coughlin also called attention to water commission chairman Peter DeCaprio's business relationship with

Register for Cohasset Road Race

Calling all runners and non-runners!! Spend some time on April Fool's Day showing everyone just how smart you are by participating in the 36th annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea or Fran Coffey Memorial Walk. Both events are Sunday, April 1.

The Walk begins at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach and the 10K begins at 1 p.m. on the Town Common. These events are presented by the Rotary Club of Cohasset and 100 percent of net proceeds go to charity.

The race has a limited field size of 1770 — the year the town was incorporated — and expects to sell out this year as it has done in the past.

This event is truly a Cohasset "community" event and even after three decades the traditions continue of a scenic course, hot dogs for post race sustenance, and the much sought after, long-sleeved T-shirts which will include a commemorative 36th Annual "Fool's Day" design.

Visit roadracebythesea.com to register and don't forget to "Like" the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea on Facebook so you don't miss out on important race information and fun giveaways.

CERT seeks volunteers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's community emergency response team (CERT) is seeking volunteers to train as first responders. In the event that disaster strikes, even a small town like Cohasset should stand equipped and ready to rally, according to the town's deputy director of Emergency Management, Glenn Pratt.

Cohasset's CERT "is a team of trained citizens we can call on when we have an emergency," said Pratt. "Most towns have them, but we... realized we're short of hands. We need to get going."

In the aftermath of September 11, "homeland security and FEMA [Federal Emergency Management Agency] really developed, leading to huge standardizations across the country at every emergency agency," Pratt said in September, shortly after Cohasset rode out Tropical Storm Irene. "FEMA requires all towns to have emergency plans; it's critical infrastructure.

The need for a CERT "had fairly high visibility during the hurricane" last summer, said Pratt, who has served as deputy director for the past nine years.

During last summer's Tropical Storm Irene, which left many Commonwealth communities without power for over a week, Cohasset came together to ensure that everyone who needed it had assistance, from fresh water deliveries to trash removal. Town Manager Michael Coughlin worked alongside the public safety team, emergency response team and Department of Public Works to put pressure on National Grid to turn the power back on in Cohasset.

But during the storm's aftermath, CERT members and public officials had to gather in the police station's small meeting room for briefings when a fully functional emergency command center would have been favorable. At one point, someone arrived to turn in old hand grenades from Vietnam, diverting any further storm discussion at the time. As the town began to lose power, the phones went out in the police station, and the CERT had to meet up at the DPW, Pratt reported in September.

The CERT command center is located under the Deer Hill School and is still awaiting completion. A grant from MEMA (Mass. Emergency Management Agency) provided some funds, but the CERT will have to place an article on the warrant for Spring Town Meeting (May 12) in order to complete the operation center.

So far, "we've been able to connect the police and fire station to the center so we can operate fully out of there," said Pratt. "But we have to buy some computer gear so we can be connected to the new dispatch center in Hingham, SSRECC [South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center]."

CERT training will begin in April, and Pratt hopes to see at least 20 volunteers sign up. The training program runs for 10 weeks (one night a week) and is being taught by instructors from Braintree's emergency management team.

Those who become certified as first responders will be equipped with an emergency kit containing a vest and other gear, said Pratt.

"We hope to get at least 20 volunteers, but we will run [the training program] with however many people we get," Pratt said.

The deputy director said that "this is the time" to get the emergency operations center completed and the CERT team in place. "This could be a big year for us."

About CERT training:

- Emergency services personnel are the best trained and equipped to handle emergencies. However, following a catastrophic disaster, the community may be on their own for a period of time because of the size of the area affected, lost communications, and un-passable roads.
- CERT Training is designed to prepare us to help ourselves, our families and neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. Because emergency services personnel will not be able to help everyone immediately, CERT members make a difference by using them to save lives and protect property.
- CERT Training covers basic skills that are important to know in a disaster when emergency services are not available. With training and practice and by working as a team, we will be able to do the greatest good for the greatest number after a disaster.

Interested in training for CERT? Call the fire department at 781-383-0616 and leave your name with Chief Robert Silvia.

POLICE BEAT

Car crashes all over town

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• At 2:07 p.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 14), police responded to a two-vehicle crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by the train station. Police said, a 2007 Toyota RAV4, operated by a 53-year-old Hull woman, who was headed south when she slowed to make a left into the Greenbush parking lot and was rear-ended by a 2006 Chrysler Pacifica. The Chrysler had to be towed; there were no reported injuries. The operator of the Chrysler, a 59-year-old Hull woman, was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

• At 5:40 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 15), the police K-9 cruiser struck a deer that had darted out on Forest Avenue. Police said the cruiser was headed toward the water when the deer ran out from the side of the roadway in the area of 150 Forest Ave. and into the side of the cruiser, damaging the front marker light on the front driver's side. The deer had two broken legs and had to be put down. Officer Patrick Reardon and dog, Erik, were not injured. The cruiser did not have to be taken out of service. The K-9 cruiser is not equipped with deer whistles because the whistle would be audible to the dog.

• At 10:16 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 15), police responded to the Avalon complex after a 35-year-old female Avalon resident in a 2011 Dodge Caravan drove off the road, onto the grass and over a 25-foot cliff. Police said the woman, who passed field sobriety tests, was not impaired by alcohol or drugs. She appeared to be somewhat confused, however, and police have asked the Registry of Motor Vehicles to conduct a medical evaluation. The minivan, which was heavily damaged, had to be winched up and was towed. The woman was not injured.

• At 9:56 p.m. on Friday (Feb. 17), police responded to a minor motor vehicle crash on S. Main Street. Police said a 26-year-old Marshfield man in a 2008 Jeep Grand Cherokee backed out of spot at in front of Tedeschi's to go toward Scituate, but backed up too far striking a 2001 Dodge Intrepid that was parked in front of Atlantic Bagel. The Intrepid was unoccupied. There was minor damage; neither car had to be towed, police said.

Vandalism

A caller reported on Monday (Feb. 13) that a lantern outside the First Parish House on North Main Street had been smashed with a rock. There were two similar calls on Saturday night (Feb. 11) about vandalism in the area. The incidents are under investigation.

Empties

A Nichols Road caller wanted it logged last Tuesday (Feb. 14) that a bag of empty beer cans had been left on his lawn. The report can in at 3:46 p.m.

Side of road

Police responded to three 9-1-1 calls and a 9-1-1 transfer call from Hull about an elderly woman who appeared to be down on the ground near the driveway to the Golden Living Center on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police responded at 1 p.m. and when they arrived there was a staffer with the woman, who is 74. Police said the woman left the nursing and rehabilitation center of her own accord, over the objections of staff and medical advice. She was not strong enough to make it very far, however, and was convinced that she needed to return, police said.

Child welfare

Police notified the state Department of Children and Families after investigating a call from an Avalon neighbor last Thursday (Feb. 16) about the welfare of a mother and child living in one of the units. Investigation revealed there was no food inside the apartment and they had not eaten for several days. DCF was called to the scene and is providing the family with some assistance, police said.

Swearing

The 37-year-old owner of a local business on King Street reported to police last Thursday (Feb. 16) that a worker from a competitor came into the store to look around. The men recognized one another and "had words." The man from the competitor was subsequently barred from the store, police said.

Nail polish

A sister, who was upset with her sibling about taking her nail polish, dialed 9-1-1 and then hung up last Thursday (Feb. 16) at 10:25 p.m. Police called back and the teen explained that she was upset with her sister about taking her nail polish and told her she would call 9-1-1. When her sister said "go ahead," she made the call. As is protocol, police have to respond in person to 9-1-1 calls. They went to the house on Rustic Drive and determined there were no problems.

'Face time'

A middle school teen apparently sent a nude photo to another student via "face time" which is a video-chat service and the photo has been forwarded to other students. Under the Memorandum of Understanding with the school department, police were called and are trying to track down the photo to stop it from being sent around any further.

Police must notify the District Attorney's Office with this type of incident and are working with the DA's Office to try to bring some resolution. How the matter is resolved and if there are any potential charges will be up to the DA, police said.

Harassment

A 30-year-old woman employed by a local restaurant has obtained a harassment prevention order against the 36-year-old chef who has been harassing her and making sexual advances, police said. She went to the station last Saturday (Feb. 18) at 2 p.m. to make a report. Police contacted a judge who was on duty who issued the harassment prevention order. If the chef keeps up this behavior, he would be subject to arrest, police said.

Election season is underway

Selectman Ted Carr to seek third term

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The annual town election season is off and running. Since nomination papers became available on Tuesday, Feb. 14, five folks have pulled papers so far, according to the Town Clerk.

The town election will take place on Saturday, May 19.

"Nomination papers are available, and we hope interested citizens and voters will come in and take out papers," said Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre.

Incumbent selectman Ted Carr, who currently serves as chair, is seeking reelection and would go into his third term. He could not be reached for comment as to why he wants to run again.

Debra Krupczak is seeking election to the Board of Assessors. While she worked in Cohasset's Assessors office for 17 years as assistant before leaving to become Rockland's assessor, she has never served on the town's board.

"It's my first time running," said Krupczak in a phone call Tuesday. "I figure it's a good opportunity to serve my community with the knowledge, skills and education I learned with almost 20 years in the profession. I've been a Cohasset resident for over 30 years."

David Drinan is running for a five-year term on the Planning Board; it is the only term opening up this season. Current chairman Al Moore is stepping down after serving on the board for 25 years.

Moore said that he decided last year that he would not seek reelection when his term was up.

"I've been on the board for 25 years and I've been chair for 20 years or so," said Moore on Tuesday. "I think the whole situation has become so contentious and litigious. It's been something that I enjoyed doing and I'm glad I did it, but I'm going to move on and do some other things. There is so much negativity around Town Hall, and I don't need to be a part of it anymore. It's been fun, but enough is enough — let somebody else have a go at it."

During a phone call Tuesday, Drinan indicated that he is ready to give it a go.

"I've lived in Cohasset a number of years and decided it was time for me to give back a little to the town in terms of service in the community," said Drinan. "I have a 20-year background in real estate development and construction: I actually spent my first 20 years working in education and decided to start my own business 20 years ago."

Drinan feels that his background and perspective as a developer would serve him well on the Planning Board. "I look forward to seeing what issues people bring to the Planning Board. I have a good understanding of what the town is going through as well as the developer."

St. Pierre reported that the two school committee members up for reelection, chair Helene Lieb and Paul Schubert, both pulled papers Thursday morning.

RFP

Aquarion Water, which the town manager called a conflict of interest.

Aquarion provides water to North Cohasset. The company has also weighed in on the water commission's RFP. Its parent company Macquarie Bank also owns shares in DeCaprio's hedge fund, which the commissioner said has been privately owned since early 2011. Both he and Aquarion have stated that any business relationship has been tenuous at best.

Aquarion's Vice President Harry Hibbard said that he did not think that DeCaprio's relationship with Aquarion would affect the commissioner's objectivity when it comes to the RFP, or if Aquarion should turn out to be a bidder on the water contract.

Coughlin initially expressed concerns over Aquarion itself as many other communities in the state, including neighboring Hingham, are pulling away from Aquarion due to rate hikes and are instead seeking to take water operations in-house.

DeCaprio has said that Hingham's issues with Aquarion have nothing to do with Cohasset, since Cohasset has and continues to set its own water rates. Hingham "gave up control over rates and capital expenditures when they sold their system years ago," DeCaprio said earlier this month.

In light of these concerns, Coughlin said he would file a complaint with the State Ethics Commission, Attorney General's Office and Inspector General.

DeCaprio issued the following statement via email on Wednesday:

"We received the Inspector General's comments to our draft on Tuesday. As we explained last week, they had some very minor technical concerns, and some language they wanted changed slightly. We incorporated their suggestions. The RFP was advertised today [Wed., Feb. 22] and will be issued and available next Monday. Once it is out on the street, we will be free to talk about it in detail, and we will begin the comprehensive public education process in earnest. We will likely hold a forum for the entire town within the next two or three weeks at the middle/high school auditorium. Remember, this is merely step one of a multi-step process. We will now begin the planning for the in-house solution. That has always been the plan, and we've always known what we needed to do to get ready for June 30. The concession plan was just the best option for contracted operations. It is up to the town to decide if that is the best option, period."

The acting town manager, Michael Milanoski, said of the RFP on Wednesday, "It appears to have gotten the blessing from the Inspector General, and I think that's good news. This will be one of the options that town will have. This option has the longest lead time to require vendors to look at, but I've been in contact with Peter DeCaprio and they are starting their second RFP for having another company come in and run it, similar to the process they are doing now. So, in essence, a 'plan B.' I think we're going to be looking at a 'plan C,' also, so there are multiple options that will get vetted."

The first RFP being sent out next week "just requires a lot longer lead time given the complexity of it," said Milanoski, "which is why it appears to be the only one that's been focused on; but, again, there will be others that will be coming out. Town Meeting will have certain options as to what it decides to do."

MILANOSKI

The governance committee was also charged to investigate the town's bylaws and Town Manager Act and seek to resolve discrepancies between the two. The governance committee contains members from last year's town manager search committee that presented Coughlin as one of their top five candidates, a committee that Milanoski also chaired.

The board voted to make Milanoski interim for the next two weeks. Town Counsel Paul DeRensis told the board that they needed to have an acting Town Manager in place within 30 days of removing the current town manager.

Audience members asked the board last Friday whether Milanoski would be allowed to take this appointment since he currently serves on two committees; the Town Manager Act states that the town manager cannot have served as an elected or appointed town official within the last calendar year. DeRensis said that Milanoski is in the clear because this is an unpaid, volunteer position.

However, taking on the role as interim makes Milanoski ineligible to become Cohasset's next full-time town manager. DeRensis said after the meeting that serving as interim makes Milanoski, or anyone else who takes on the volunteer role, "disqualified" from the running.

Milanoski responded that serving on two boards already makes him disqualified.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr recused himself from the vote to appoint Milanoski, saying that he is a friend and neighbor. The rest of the board voted to 4-0 to appoint Milanoski.

The selectmen also ventured into a discussion on starting the search for the next town manager. Selectman Paul Carlson asked if they should start discussing the search now or wait until after Michael Coughlin's public hearing on March 13. Carlson added that he felt doing so now would be "premature." The board all agreed to wait until after the hearing to have further discussions.

Carr wrote in an email Friday evening that a search committee will be formed following the 30-day hearing period specified in the Town Manager Act. The selectmen chair also wrote, "There are many challenges ahead, and we will need everyone's active participation to successfully get past this bump in the road."

Carr thanked Milanoski at the meeting for taking on his new volunteer role.

"We have a lot of work to do to have a preliminary budget ready by the 28th [of February]," Milanoski said after the meeting. "For town meeting on May 12, it's going to be all hands on deck to put together a sustainable budget for the town. A lot of stuff has to happen; we need a sustainable budget that also maintains the services that the citizens expect."

While Milanoski has experience working in the quasi-government arena managing quasi-municipal budgets, he has never applied for the town manager position. He was encouraged to apply last year, Milanoski said in an interview Wednesday, but he never submitted his resume for the position.

Milanoski has lived in Cohasset for seven years.

"This is a great community, and there are a lot of great people that love to volunteer and participate," Milanoski said.

As for his temporary appointment, Milanoski said that the folks in Town Hall have been nothing but supportive.

"The staff has been great. Everyone has stepped up to the plate trying to figure out how to solve the problems that we have and look forward to smooth sailing."

How To Pick The Right Fitness Program for You

By Elizabeth Johnson

When a woman decides to make a change and commit to a health and fitness program there are certain qualities to look for.

First of all, what are other women saying about it? Of course a fitness manager will say their program guarantees results, but do the clients feel the same way? Review the website, go to the location and chat with the women working out. Ask questions like, "What changes have you seen in yourself since you started?" "What support have you received from the training team?" and "Would you recommend this to other women?"

Secondly, can you try before you buy? It's important that you're able to get a feel for the vibe at that location, the quality of the environment and the attitudes of the staff. Try out the exercise equipment and make sure it's appropriate/adjustable for your level.

Finally it's important to really listen to how the program is described, reflect on if it's what you're really looking for, and ask questions! Get In Shape For Women knows that commitment is hard. Feeling empowered to choose a health and fitness program that is the right fit is critical.

"Our model supports health and fitness goals for women in the best possible ways," says Get In Shape For Women President and CEO, Brian Cook. "Our trained teams are there for members every step of the way to motivate, encourage and listen. Our studios are beautiful, clean facilities with machines that work every muscle in your body!"

Runner to host event at Art Center

By Erin Dale

When local runner Erin Blaisdell was looking for a gallery to host her fundraiser for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society, she chose the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

Blaisdell, a Weymouth resident, will run in the Rock 'n' Roll Marathon in Madrid in April to benefit the society and will use a portion of proceeds from the event toward her fundraising goal. The runner said that she needs to raise $5,000 to participate and has so far raised $1,000.

While the upcoming event at the Arts Center, to be held on March 24, is one of several fundraising events Blaisdell is hosting along the South Shore, she is particularly excited about the center's current exhibit: "Close to Home: Artists Who Make Books."

The exhibit opened on Feb. 17 and runs through Mar. 25, so those who attend Blaisdell's fundraiser will also get to view the exhibit on the day before it closes.

"With the new exhibits and flowers out, it looks nice in there," said Blaisdell, who is working with local businesses and shops to provide gift baskets and gift cards for a raffle. She also plans to have a wine tasting during the event.

Blaisdell, who works as a pharmacy technician at South Shore Hospital, said that she decided to raise money for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society after receiving literature on the charity in the mail, adding that she'd been interested in helping out a non-profit for a while.

"The fact that I'm a runner inspired me to take the next step and do some kind of race," said Blaisdell. "I always wanted to do a health-related organization."

The Leukemia and Lymphoma Society is "a great organization," said Blaisdell. "They train you to do an endurance event, whether it's a marathon, half-marathon or hike."

The Rock 'n' Roll Marathon will see Blaisdell in Madrid on April 22, leaving her a month and a half to raise the rest of her goal money.

"It's been a whirlwind," she said, "trying to fundraise and train for the marathon at the same time. It's quite a challenge — I'm either running or calling people!"

The runner seems up for the challenge as both her Cohasset fundraiser and her race in Spain approach.

Public water talk planned

Boston non-profit to present at St. Stephen's

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Water has been a hot-button issue in Cohasset lately. The water company's five-year contract is up in June; the water commission has been working on a request for proposals to go out to bid for a new contractor. What should have been a rather routine measure turned into a public debate at selectmen meetings over the past several months.

Town Manager Michael Coughlin has opposed the water commission's suggestion for a 20-year concessionaire contract and called into question the ethics of the commissioners regarding a potential conflict of interest between commission chairman Peter DeCaprio and Aquarion Water (the parent company of Aquarion, Macquarie Bank, owns shares in DeCaprio's hedge fund, but DeCaprio has assured that any relationship with Aquarion has been tenuous and that his fund has been privately owned since early 2011).

While Coughlin said he would file an ethics complaint with the State Ethics Commission, the Inspector General and the Attorney General's office, DeCaprio recently reported that the RFP has been issued with little concern from the IG (see related story on page 1).

Many citizens are asking the question: what's next for Cohasset water? While the issues continue to spark debate among passionate, intelligent individuals who all state that they are looking after the best interest of the town, residents will have the chance to learn more about the role that corporations play when it comes to water as a utility during an upcoming public forum.

The sale of water is just one of the issues that will be addressed during next Wednesday's presentation by Corporate Accountability International, "Public Water Works." The Boston non-profit group has campaigned to protect health, the environment and human rights over the past 33 years.

Wednesday's event, held at St. Stephen's at 7 p.m., will also discuss the group's campaign against bottled water, "Think Outside the Bottle."

Adam Macon, one of the organizers of this campaign, said that while his group is just beginning to learn about the specific water issues affecting Cohasset, he believes that the big picture issue of "who controls our water" is "something we can all agree on."

"We need to invest in our most public resource, our water infrastructure," said Macon in a phone interview. "When we invest in our most essential public resource, public water works, it creates jobs and profoundly stimulates the economy. Budget cuts cause towns to relinquish control of their water systems... Lack of adequate funding has led to rate increases that put a heavier burden on smaller communities."

Corporate Accountability International has spent over three decades "waging and winning campaigns against some of the world's most abusive global corporations," said Macon. "Water is a human right that should not be bought and sold for profit."

Macon acknowledged that the discussion on public water is a timely one for citizens of Cohasset, as the town and its neighboring communities continue to debate public water versus private.

Chartis Tebbets, a Cohasset resident, member of Corporate Accountability International, and one of the event's hosts, agreed with Macon's statement about the event's relevance for Cohasset given recent events.

"As a long-time member of Corporate Accountability International, I am so pleased that the organization will be sharing their expertise on water issues with us," Tebbets wrote in an email. "The current public conversation about Cohasset's water choices makes this a very timely event. It's within our power to make decisions that will ensure that every individual has clean and affordable drinking water. Corporate Accountability International's successful track record will ensure that we effectively assess our options during this crucial time."

"We're hoping the meeting and presentation will educate people and provide them with the opportunity to get involved," said Macon. "We're really excited to be able to engage with the citizens and individuals in Cohasset and have a good open discussion about these issues."
